OPPOSE SUNDAY CYCLING

SUNDAY NEWSPAPERS ALSO CONDEMNED AT THE CONFERENCE.

Appointments Made for the Year—Rev. H. J. Johnston Will Come From Cranford to the Grace M. E. Church.

Bicycle riding for pleasure on Sunday and Sunday newspapers were deprecated by the M. E. Conference at its seventh day's session in Newark. The matter was brought up on the report of the Committee on Sabbath Observance, and, as it was promptly adopted, the Conference went squarely on record Wine on the tables of church members was also deprecated.

"The demand for rest on the Sabbath is unquestionable," said the committee in its report, and it is destined to survive whatever opposes it."

Touching the Sunday bicycle and Sunday newspaper the committee used these words:

Of all the forces entered in arraignment against the institution none of the number is more deplored than the Sunday secular newspaper, and it is, therefore, the conviction of this Conference that the Sunday newspaper should under no circumstances be patronized by Christian people or introduced into our homes.

Traveling and visiting should be confined to works of mercy and necessity, and conducive as the bicycle is to health, we believe it to be the imperative duty of pastors and church members to condemn its use as a pleasure seeking instrument on the Lord's Day.

The committee further declared that whereas there was a "peculiar temptation" to break the Sabaath during the summer months, pastors of the Conference be requested to preach on that subject some time during May, and the signing of a pettion to Congress for a law securing the observance of Sunday in the District of Columbia was recommended.

Rev. Dr. L. R. Dunn, of Orange, created a stir by saying: "It is not an uncommon thing for members of the church to have whiskey or wine on their tables. There are some that glory in the fact that they use liquors and don't care who knows it, and there are those of this class among the wealthy classes in the church. Yes, and there are ministers who are gagged and are impelled to bow to those who have wine on their tables."

There were loud cries of "Yes!" "Yes!" and "That's so!" and counter-cries of "No!" "No!"

Bev. Dr. Baker took exception to the statement and said that this was his first appearance on the Conference floor in twenty-eight years, and for the first time he would speak and ask Dr. Dunn what he meant by the statement that ministers were gagged, and, as he looked at Dr. Dunn, he exclaimed, "I would like to know who they are?"

Bishop Foss rapped his gavel sharply and said, "Dr. Dunn, I wish you would carefully weigh your words."

Dr. Dunn replied that he "did not mean that the tendency was universal," and then Drs. Bryan, Parsons, Mayhem and Halleron spoke briefly on the temperance question. The latter said the Republican party gave them the only temperance legislation the Church ever had, and Rev. J. L. Hayes interrupted to say politics did not figure in the resolution. The Bishop sustained him, and Dr. Halleron sat down.

The long expected time limit question was brought up next in a resolution presented by Rev. S. D. Jones, of Hackensack. It was as follows:

Whereas, The great success of the Methodist Episcopal church is due in a large measure, we believe, to our pastoral itinerant system, and as there is an agitation abroad that will probably reach the next General Conference, to remove what is known as the "time limit;" therefore be it

Resolved, That we regard such a change as an experiment fraught with peril, radical in its nature, and so doubtful in its results that we respectfully petition the ensuing General Conference not to make any change in the rule.

Rev. Salmon D. Jones backed his resolution by saying that if the Salvation Army had such a system there would not be the trouble that there is there today. "The Lord God above is the author of the time limit system," the Rev. Mr. Jones added. "Let's keep the old machine going as it is."

Rev. Edward C. Dutcher, of Jersey City, favored the system, and then P. C. Bascom, of Newark, offered a substitute, which was signed by several pastors. It asked that the system be modified so as to allow a pastor "to remain in charge for a longer period than five years in clearly exceptional cases, while the plan of yearly appointments be retained."

Rev. Dr. Halleron, of Jersey City, stoutly asserted that the time limit should be retained. "The success of the Methodist church is an indication of Providence, and the substitute would interfere with the progress of the church."

The appointments were made by Bishop Foss at the close of the Conference. It will be noted that Rev. H. J. Johnston was transferred from Cranford to North Plainfield. They are as follows:

EFFICIENT OFFICERS RECOGNIZED.

The Prosperous Loan Association Re-Elect Their Old Officers.

The new Board of Directors of the Plainfield Building and Loan Association met last night for organization, at which time Hon. W. R. Codington was made temporary chairman. The following officers were unanimously re-elected for the ensuing year: President, L. E. Barkalew; vice-president, Henry Liefke; treasurer, W. R. Codington; secretary, B. F. Coriell; solicitor, W. R. Codington; financial committee, William A. Woodruff, Jacob Voehl and James R. Homan. An application was made for a loan in the fifth series and referred to the finance committee. A loan of $1,300 was made in the fourth series. The bonds of the treasurer was fixed at $10,000 and the solicitor at $1,000. The fact that all the officers were re-elected speaks well for their efficiency.

Borough Republican Caucus.

A meeting will be held in the North Plainfield schoolhouse tomorrow evening at 8 o'clock, at which time the Republican legal voters will meet and elect six delegates. Three will be chosen to represent the borough at the Third Congressional District Convention, to be held at New Brunswick, Thursday, April 9th, and the other three will represent the borough at the Republican State Convention to be held at Trenton, April 16th, for the purpose of selecting delegates to attend the National Convention to be held at St. Louis.

During the winter of 1893, F. M. Martin, of Long Beach, West Va., contracted a severe cold which left him with a cough. In speaking of how he cured it he says: "I used several kinds of cough syrup but found no relief until I bought a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, which relieved me almost instantly, and in a short time brought about a complete cure." When troubled with a cough or cold use this remedy and you will not find it necessary to try several kinds before you get relief. It has been in the market for over twenty years and constantly grown in favor and popularity. For sale at 25 and 50 cents per bottle at Armstrong's pharmacy, Park and North avenues.

YOUNG MISSION WORKERS.

First Baptist Church Society Hear Reports and Elect Officers.

The Young Ladies' Missionary Society of the First Baptist church held their annual meeting yesterday afternoon. The attendance of members was very encouraging to the officers. The report of Mrs. W. O. Chapman, treasurer, showed that $434.87 had been received in all, and that $120.45 had been expended for home missions. The sum of $168 had been expended for foreign missions, and the balance was spent for incidental expenses. There is now $15.15 in the treasury.

The report of the secretary was encouraging, and showed that the society had performed excellent work during the year. The election of officers resulted as follows:

President, Mrs. DeWitt C. Brokaw; first vice-president, Miss Laura J. Runyon; second vice-president, Miss Susie Woodland; recording secretary, Miss Bertha Needham; corresponding secretary, Miss Ida Yerkes; treasurer, Mrs. W. O Chapman.

Two lookout committees were appointed, one for young girls and one for young ladies. They were: Miss Bertha Needham, Miss Susie Woodland, Miss Nora Williams, Miss Alice Needham. For the older ones the following were appointed: Miss Ida Yerkes, Mrs. B. W. Vail, Miss Laura J. Runyon, Miss Mamie French.

Routine business occupied the rest of the time.

CHARGE AGAINST AN OFFICER.

Special Marshal John Barry Said to Have Been Drunk Last Night.

A man named Edward Vanduary, gardener for Pedeflou's, at his place on the mountain back of Washingtonville, came to North Plainfield last night and imbibed to freely. He stopped at the Arlington hotel, and in some way a scrap was started. Special officer John Barry was present and arrested the man. A large crowd gathered and several blows were struck. Vanduary received severe treatment, judging from the appearance of his face when arraigned before Justice Crosley this morning. Ex-Chief Marshal Pangborn made a plea on behalf of the Frenchman and called several witnesses who testified that, not only was Vanduary intoxicated, but that Marshal Barry was also. After Mr. Pangborn had made a short speech urging leniency, Justice Crosley imposed a fine of five dollars. As regards Marshal Barry, the Justice said he would refer the matter to the Mayor and Police Committee of the council for investigation. Many who saw the affair claim that Marshal Barry was in the wrong.

STATE RATHBONE SISTERS.

Secret Work Exemplified at Newark Last Evening.

The First New Jersey Staff of the Rathbone Sisters, with the Grand Chief Deputy of New York, met last evening in La Manch, K. of P. Hall, Newark, and exemplified the work before G. C. R. Donath and grand staff and 250 Pythian Brothers. One woman was initiated and 203 Pythian Brothers took the obligation in Ada Weaver Temple. Great admiration was expressed by all present at the grandeur and perfect mannner in which the work was performed.

Suggestions were made that the Sisters exemplify their work before the Knights of Pythias at Jersey City, but the Plainfield members wish to honor their city brother Knights of Pythias before any other city, hence no decision was reached. A very fine supper was served and regrets were expressed that the Plainfield members were obliged to return home so early.

To Assist tde Joint Detail.

At the meeting of John Hand Camp, No. 28, S. of V., held last evening, Captain Willard V. CHRIST'S SELF-SACRIFICE

A LESSON TAUGHT IN HIS REBUKE OF WOMAN'S LOVE AT THE CROSS.

Rev. Dr. Lowry Preaches a Powerful Sermon in the Series of Holy Week Meetings—His Many Good Points.

The first of the series of services to be held in connection with Holy Week took place last evening in the First Presbyterian church when Rev. Dr. Robert Lowry, preached a powerful sermon to a large audience. Rev. Dr. W. R. Richards read the Scripture lesson from Luke 23-28, after which Rev. Cornelius Schenck offered up prayer. Dr. Lowry then spoke in substance as follows:—

"I have chosen a portion of the twenty-eighth verse of the twenty-third chapter of the gospel of Luke for my text this evening, which reads: 'Daughters of Jerusalem, weep not for me, but weep for yourselves and your children.' These words constitute a portion of Christ's last connected discourse on earth. Everything that he said afterward was disjointed. This is fairly a discourse for you will find it sets forth three points, namely, reproof, argument and prophecy. It seems a strange place and time for these words to be uttered. Look at it! Within yonder walls the terrible words and deeds were enacted. People outside looking for something to happen.

"Oh! the sight! I do not call this Holy week nor Passion week. I have no name for it. It is a week for solemn meditation and prayer. I envy not those who can go to the theatre, the card party or the dance. Let us picture the scene. We go down into that mob where Roman soldiers, the high and low, all in one teeming mass are sweeping toward Calvary. In the midst of this scene Jesus is conducted. They make their way through the gate and press onward toward that memorable spot. Christ needs assistance in carrying the cross, so Simon is picked out. He does not take the cross from Christ's shoulder, but he takes hold of one end so that Christ may be relieved of the dragging sensation. There is a temporary check in the procession. Women rush to the front, and then it was that Christ spoke to the weeping women, which brings out the words of our text tonight.

"There were thousands of people present coming from all quarters of the earth. There were many enemies and haters of Jesus, who were interested in seeing the end. There were those present who were sincere admirers and sympathizers of Christ, and there were 'the women' Christ introduced the latter and brought them forward. They unlocked the fountains of grief. Men, poor things, little know about sympathy and weeping. When he does anything it is the woman in him that does it.

"It is the influence of woman that counts for so much. In this scene we see the strength of attachment. Perhaps the women had no business there, but they were there! Man was not capable of doing what they did. In the midst of the shouting of Crucify Him! Crucify Him! the women stood fearlessly, for perfect love casteth out fear. Now comes the strange portion of the text. Christ did not rejoice. He rebuked the women, as though He would say, 'Don't look upon Me as deserving of sympathy. I hold My life in the hollow of My hand, and I can take it up or lay it down.' His suffering was the inevitable end of sin, which He assumed for the world. Somebody must die, and He did. But they did not understand it. He was pronounced innocent, yet He suffered like the blackest villain, and yet He said 'Weep not for Me.' It is impossible to weep pain, error or mistake away.

"We have heard considerable about the Armenian troubles, how thousands have been slaughtered, yet there is not a man nor a government to stand up and say this thing in Armenia must stop! I attended a vocal concert some years ago in the old Congregational church and heard for the first time the production of 'Stabat Mater.' I will never forget it. I was spell-bound; couldn't move. In fact, I was paralyzed. After it was over someone remarked 'Wasn't it beautiful?' I felt almost insulted. It wasn't beautiful. It was an avalanche of heavenly glory.

"There is such a thing as an eloquent sermon, but all the sermons I had heard never moved me like that rendition of 'Stabat Mater.' I was no nearer Heaven, nor no better, but it touched my physical nature." At this point the doctor very tersely remarked that he forgot it was a week day and kept thinking it was Sunday when people had no engagements to interfere with their religious duties. He closed his discourse by saying that a sinner must look to Jesus and inquire What am I? What do I need? That is the only process whereby he can be saved. He then offered prayer and, after the singing of a hymn, the service closed.

EXEMPTS ENTHUSED.

The Old Fire Laddies Have a Meeting Reminiscent of Old Times.

The regular monthly meeting of the Exempt Firemen's Association was held last evening, and there was a large attendance of the members. The first business was the nomination of officers, with the following result: President, Auguste Saltzman; vice-president, Alexander Titsworth; recording secretary, G. Thorn; treasurer, E. M. Laing; financial secretary, G. W. Clark; board of trustees, D. W. Littell, E. M. Laing, J. A. Hubbard, William A. Woodruff and E. A. Vermeule; representatives to the Relief Association, G. Thorn and A. Saltzman; delegates to the State Convention, E. M. Laing, William A. Woodruff, Frank Schuck, D W. Littell and Jacob Blimm, Sr.

A feature of the meeting was the presentation to the Association, by the president, Auguste Saltzman, of an old trumpet which was given to the latter in 1877 by the old Alert Company.

L. E. Barkalew, a faithful member of the Association, had composed several excellent verses of poetry which he read last evening. They told in an entertaining way about the boys in the old department; how the old fire bell was removed; and how the new company No. 2, was organized and the spirit of rivalry existing in those days. The reading of it was heartily received. One new member was elected to the Association, after which the meeting adjourned.

The election will take place at the next meeting.

AMHERST GLEE CLUB.

A Musical Organization Whose Talent is Recognized the World Over.

There is always a peculiar interest felt in college glee clubs and their songs, characteristic as they are of the universities themselves. The audience is brought in personal contact with the student life. This is especially true in the case of Amherst, for no college has had a wider reputation on account of the excellence of its musical clubs. A large part of the selections are original with the students themselves, having the spice and interest that always comes with original talent.

The Amherst concerts have always been the best given by any of the American colleges and it is on account of the intrinsic merit of their performances that they have gained such a wide reputation.

This year the Amherst Clubs are exceptionally good as has been shown by marked success of their concerts in Boston, Hartford and Northampton. Monday, April 6th the clubs will be in Plainfield and after the rest over Sunday it is to be hoped it will be one of the best of the trip. Two years ago the clubs were in Plainfield and this time they will receive no less hearty a welcome, when they appear at the Casino.

STOLE PICKS; GOES TO JAIL.

An Italian Water Boy Caught Stealing Railroad Property.

One of the water boys employed by the street railway contractors started to help himself to the contractors property, yesterday, when he made the acquaintance of the city rookey. Yesterday noon one of the employes at the Scott Press Works told Edgar I. Serrell, the clerk for the contractors, that one of the Italians had just carried away an armful of picks and hidden them by the brook. Serrell investigated and found the would-be thief and the picks. The Italian explained that it was only a joke, but Serrell did not look at it in that light and escorted the man to the nearest policeman.

The Italian was brought before Justice Nash yesterday afternoon and there gave his name as Charles Rao. He still claimed that he had intended to bring the picks back again, but the Justice held him in $100 bail to appear before the grand jury next May. Funds were low with Mr. Rao, so he will await the pleasure of the pleasure of the grand jury at the county jail.

Church Auxiliary Officers.

The annual meeting of the Woman's Auxiliary of the First Presbyterian church was held yesterday afternoon. This society is composed of all the women in the church, and their efforts are directed entirely to the home church. Interesting reports were presented by the secretary and treasurer. The latter showed that there was a balance of $) in the treasury. The election of officers resulted as follows: President, Mrs. Petrie; first vice-president, Mrs Elizabeth Hand; second vice president, Miss Kate Bond; treasurer, Mrs. Olssen; secretary, Mrs. Howard Pope. At the next meeting the president will appoint the chairmen for the various committees.

TROLLEY WORK HALTS.

BUT ONLY FOR TODAY TO ORGANIZE THE WORKING FORCE.

Many of the Italian Laborers Were Incompetent and New Men Will be Put in Their Places and the Work Pushed On.

With the exception of a few workmen who were kept busy spiking and bolting the rails together, the entire force of men who have been engaged in laying the extension of the trolley road were laid off this morning. The cause of the cessation in the construction of the line is the want of skilled labor.

Contractor Serrell has met with a series of unexpected and inevitable obstacles that have prevented the work from going forward at the rate it should under ordinary circumstances.

Several days before the work was begun a contract was made with Frank Wilson, of Liberty street, New York, to furnish one hundred men to begin work Friday night at Plainfield. Wilson made no effort to secure any laborers until Friday noon, and then took what he could get, mostly men inexperienced in track building and many of them incompetent and underfed. The men were sent out here but no provision was made for housing or feeding them. After considerable hustling Superintendent Yarnall managed, by a midnight invasion on the local bakeries, to supply food for the workmen for Friday night and Saturday morning. Arrangements were made with McVey to assist in supplying the necessities of life to the laborers, most of whom were foreign.

Another detachment of men was obtained from Patsy Christmas, of Fanwood, who has furnished labor for the contractors at other times.

Superintendent Yarnell had made arrangements with an expert trackman to take charge of the laying of the track but, at the last moment, received a telegram from him stating that his house had just burned down and he would be detained for a short time. Another telegram from his wife came later and told of his illness. Another track-layer could not come, but Superintendent Yarnell expects one this evening, unless he dies on the road or is kidnapped.

Many of the Italians who compose most of the force have been discontented with the treatment of the agents who brought them here. A number were turned off Monday and a few yesterday on account of discontent and incompetency.

In talking with a Press reporter this morning Superintendent Yarnell said that the force was utterly unorganized and where such a number of men should have laid 1,200 feet of track per day, only 400 to 600 feet had been laid. Tomorrow the force will be permanently organized and only the laborers satisfied with their work will be employed. The experienced trackman will then be here and work will be continued at a much more rapid rate than previously.

All the dissatisfied Italians were discharged and paid off this morning.

ANOTHER FILIBUSTER

Big Steamer Said To Be Fitting Out for Cuba.

REPORT CURRENT AT PHILADELPHIA

Government Troops Suffer Another Severe Defeat Near Guana—Lost Many Killed and Wounded and Forced to Retreat.

Philadelphia, April 1.—It is reported that another large expedition will soon sail for Cuba. The port of departure and the time of sailing is involved in doubt, although it is said that the vessel may get away within the next forty-eight hours. The vessel which will take out the expedition is reported to be a large steamer recently purchased by the Cuban junta in this country. It is further stated that the steamer will be strongly manned and that she will mount several heavy rifled guns with which she could carry on a hot argument with any of the Spanish cruiser patrolling Cuban waters. Besides small arms and ammunition the vessel carries for the insurgents rapid firing and machine guns. The expedition is the most formidable one that has yet been fitted out.

BIG VICTORY FOR REBELS.

Government Forces Lose Many Killed and Wounded Near Guana.

Havana, April 1.—Intelligence has reached here of a bad defeat of government troops. On March 24 an insurgent force of nearly 2,000 men, led by Varona, Sosa and others, surprised and attacked the Wadrac batallion between Guana and La Fe, in the province of Pinar del Rio. The battalion was conveying a train of army supplies. Five hundred rebels first attacked the vanguard of the government force, and later 400 men attacked the rear guard which was then reinforced. Another attack was then made on the vanguard and left flank and the troops were compelled to form a square to resist the attack. Cavalry were also used in the attempt to hold the rebels in check, but without avail. After a hot fight the troops were compelled to retreat. They lost many killed and wounded. Throughout the fight and during the retreat of the troops the insurgents used their machetes with deadly effect. The greater part of the convoy fell into the hands of the rebels. Many oxen that were destined for the use of the troops, were killed by the extreme heat. With the convoy were seventy-four sick and wounded Spaniards. The official report says, of course, that the troops won the fight and that the rebels lost thirty killed, among whom was an ex-sergeant of the civil guard.

Women Taken Prisoners.

No information has been made public concerning the movements of Maceo, who is still in the province of Pinar del Rio. Gen. Barges reports that he has captured a rebel camp near Guantanamo, province of Santiago de Cuba. In the fighting the rebels lost six killed and four wounded. Twenty-five prisoners were taken, twenty-one of whom were women and four men. Among them is the mother of the rebel leader Perez. The women were acting as nurses. The troops destroyed all the equipments, medicines and effects found in the camp. Insurgents are said to have blown up the cable station near Cienfugos with dynamite.

Five Negroes Garroted.

Five negroes were garroted here yesterday. They were not rebels, but have been sentenced to death for crimes committed prior to the breaking out of the insurrection. It is again reported here that Gomez, the rebel commander-in-chief, is dead. Proof of the truthfulness of the report is lacking.

House Contest Cases.

Washington April 1.—House elections committee No. 1 will make a report this week in the Robinson-Harrison case from the third Alabama district. The report, it is is said, will unanimously sustain Mr. Harrison, the sitting member. A report in the Goodwin-Cobb case from the fifth Alabama district will also be made within a few days, and in this case, it is understood, the report will be favorable to Mr. Goodwin, the contestant.

Sanction Fee for Open Cycle Races.

Boston, April 1.—President Elliott of the League of American Wheelmen announces that by a unanimous vote of the executive committee of the L. A. W. it is decided to reduce the sanction fee for open race meets from ten dollars to five, and two dollars for each additional day. This fee was raised from two dollars by the national assembly. The fee of $25 for national circuit race meets remain the same.

Modern Novel Course Withdrawn at Yale.

New Haven, Conn., April 1.—A great deal of comment is being passed on the Yale campus over the fact that in the prospectus for the coming year the course in "Modern novels," given by Dr. William Lyon Phelps, has been withdrawn. Considerable significance is attached to the elimination of the course, as it was the largest attended of any in the college courses.

Vermont Sheep for South Africa.

Middlebury, Vt., April 1.—To-morrow George Noonan and E. D. Morrison of Addison, Vt., will sail from Boston for South Africa, taking along with them two carloads of first grade merino sheep for breeding there. The sheep were selected for this purpose in this vicinity.

Reed Delegates Chosen.

Boston. April 1.—The republican convention of the eleventh district yesterday chose Reed delegates to the St. Louis convention.

HIS EIGHTY-FIRST MILE STONE.

Celebration To-day at Friedrichsruhe of Prince Bismarck's Birthday.

Friedrichsruhe, April 1.—To-day is the eighty-first anniversary of the birth of Prince Bismarck and the day is being celebrated with the usual ceremonies. There will be a grand torchlight procession this evening through the park at Friedrichsruhe. So many persons have applied for tickets that will allow them to march in the procession that the committee having the matter in charge has been obliged to close the lists. Count Herbert Bismarck, Prof. Franz Lenbach, the artist, and Dr. Schweninger, Prince Bismarck's physician, are here to take part in the festivities. Count Wilhelm Bismarck, the prince's younger son, who is president of East Prussia, was prevented by illness from leaving Konigsberg. He is suffering from an attack of gout. Every train arriving here brings many presents for the old ex-chancellor from friends and admirers. The prince is enjoying excellent health. Eugen Wolf, the well-known German African explorer, has presented to Prince Bismarck, a collection of curios, etc., that he brought from Madagascar. The prince intends to address those who take part in the demonstration this afternoon. He will speak in favor of Germany cultivating friendship.

SNYDER INQUEST.

Nothing of a Startling Nature Has So Far Been Developed.

Port Jervis, N. Y., April 1.—The inquest on the body of Mrs. Francis Snyder developed nothing startling. Drs. Swartwout and Banks testified that death was caused by some irritant poison causing a powerful depression on the heart. Mrs. Hattie Griffin, a tenant of the same house with the Snyders, stated that Martha Whittaker and her mother, Mrs. Snyder, had frequent quarrels during the last six months as a result of Martha's conduct in staying out late at night. She had frequently heard Martha swear. One of the quarrels was caused by Mrs. Snyder refusing to let certain male and female friends visit her during Mrs. Snyder's illness. Whenever Martha administered the medicine she observed that Martha went down stairs to prepare the dose. Martha was questioned as to why she did it. She said: "It is necessary to prepare the medicine with warm water." The theory that Martha was on amicable terms with her parents was refuted by a number of witnesses. The inquest will be continued at 2 o'clock this afternoon.

HIS CASE IS SERIOUS

Dygart To Be Treated as a Prisoner of War in Cuba.

OFFICIALS CONFIDENT OF CONVICTION

Secretary Olney Becomes Anxious About the Matter and Cables Instructions for Consul General Williams To Hasten His Inquiry.

Washington, April 1.—A dispatch from Havana this morning states that Walter Grant Dygart, the young American who was arrested some time ago on the charge that he was "Inglesito," a notorious bandit, will be treated as a prisoner of war. The authorities appear to believe that they have a complete chain of evidence showing that if Dygart is not "Inglesito" he is a rebel. He is now in the jail at Guines.

DYGART'S IMPRISONMENT.

Secretary Olney Again Urges Speedy Action in the Matter by Spanish Officials.

Washington, April 1.—Senator Cullom of Illinois called on Secretary Olney yesterday afternoon in the interest of Walter Dygart, the young American confined at Guines, Cuba, on a charge of being connected with the insurrection. Another telegram urging Consul General Williams to secure expedition in Dygart's case has been sent by the state department, and it is expected that the answer of the Spanish authorities to this latest dispatch will be received in a day or two. It is confidently believed in Washington that Dygart will be released.

IN HOUSE AND SENATE.

Alleged Protection-Silver Agreement Discussed in the Lower Branch.

Washington, April 1.—The sundry civil appropriation bill is again before the house to-day. It is expected that about three-quarters of the bill will be disposed of by adjournment to-night. When the house convened this morning fully half the bill had been finished. During the consideration of the bill Congressman Adams, rep., Pa., called attention to the reports that representatives of the Manufacturers' club of Philadelphia, in conference with certain persons in Washington, had committed the club to the free coinage of silver in connection with a protective tariff as a satisfactory platform for the republican party. He sent to the clerk's desk and had read the resolutions adopted by the club, as refuting the reports. Congressman Hartman, rep., Mont., said that the published reports were incorrect; that the silver men were not responsible for the conference, and that it had been held at the request of the club members. Congressman Allen, pop., Utah, confirmed the statement that no bargain or agreement had been reached at the conference. Then Congressman Pickler, rep., S. D., had read the financial platform adopted by the republican convention of that state to disprove the stories that the republicans there had changed their attitude towards silver. Amendments were offered to the bill to increase the appropriation for the salary of the superintendent of the coast and geodetic survey; to strike out the appropriation for detecting and punishing violations of the internal revenue law, and to strike out the appropriation for food, fuel and clothing for the Indians on the Pribyloff islands, Alaska—all of which failed. The house passed senate joint resolutions directing the secretary of war to prepare plans and estimates for deepening the channel into Portland, Me., harbor to thirty feet, and to secure a twenty-five-foot ship channel, 400 feet wide, in Providence river and Narragansett bay from Sassafras point to the ocean.

In the Senate.

As the speech of Senator George of Mississippi against the claim of Mr. Dupont to a seat in the senate from the state of Delaware occupied nearly all of yesterday's session to the exclusion of the resolution directing an investigation into the recent issue of bonds by the government, Senator Peffer, its author, will make another effort this afternoon, at the conclusion of Senator George's speech, to have it considered and passed. About half an hour of the morning session was devoted to the consideration of the postoffice appropriation bill, which appropriates the large amount of over $93,000,000, nearly $13,000,000 of which goes to defray the expense of the free delivery system. A discussion was started on an amendment reported from the appropriation committee allowing $80,000 a year, in addition to the present compensation of $50,000, to the Oceanic Steamship company for mail transportation from San Francisco to New Zealand and New South Wales, but no decision was arrived at in the matter.

MORTON SYMPOSIUM

Platt, Depew, Miller and Others Set Forth the Governor's Claim.

WHY HE SHOULD BE NOMINATED

Not Safe for the Republicans to Assume That They Are Going To Have a Walk-over in November, Is Mr. Platt's Warning.

New York, April 1.—T. C. Platt, Chauncey M. Depew, Warner Miller, Edward Lauterbach and C. W. Hackett, chairman of the New York state republican committe, contribute to the April number of the North American Review, to be published to-day, a symposium on Gov. Morton as a presidential candidate, in the course of which they set forth the governor's claim upon the republican party for a nomination to the presidency. Mr. Platt utters a warning against the confidence felt by many republicans that the nominee at the St. Louis convention, whoever he may be, will be elected. "It is not safe for the republicans," he says, "to assume that they are going to have a walk-over at the presidential election in November. Manifold as the blunders of the democratic party have been, they will not prevent the democracy from making a hard struggle to retain control of the government, and they will not keep the mass of the democratic voters from going to the polls next November and voting their ticket straight. It is, unfortunately, a confirmed habit with democrats to support their party right or wrong." In response to the objections urged by some to Gov. Morton on the score of his age, Mr. Platt points t the fact that the great statesmen of Europe are mostly old men, and he expresses confident assurance that after careful and deliberate consideration of the situation, the St. Louis convention will give its decision in favor of Gov. Morton.

Chauncey M. Depew's Argument.

Mr. Depew, in the course of his paper, points to the Venezulan question as demonstrating the value in the presidential office of diplomacy. "Governor Morton," he says, "while maintaining the rights of America and strongly and intelligently enforcing her impregnable position upon the Monroe doctrine, would have done it in a message so clearly and decisively as to raise no question of argument upon the language of his paper as to the American position upon that doc-doctrine, and at the same time to leave the ultimate question of war where the constitution places it, among the representatives of the people." Mr. Depew finds a special argument in favor of Gov. Morton's nomination in the extreme difficulty of the position of the governor of the state of New York and Mr. Morton's success in discharging the duties of that office. "The position of the governor of the state of New York," Mr. Depew said, "is always a difficult one, because of the different condition and often antagonistic needs of the cities and the rural communities. These questions are more acute here than in other states of the union. The governor's influence upon legislation has been so conspicuous for reform and good government as to command, even while he is a candidate for the presidency, approval by the press of all parties." Mr. Depew urges that the United States need a business administration. A business man such as Mr. Morton.

Appeal of Other Leaders.

Warner Miller regards Gov. Morton's record as a public officer as a sure guarantee that in his hands all the interests of the country may be securely trusted and will be absolutely safe. "He is known to be a thorough protectionist and a sound money man of the strongest character. If he is nominated and elected president there will no longer be any doubt in the minds of our people or in any foreign countries as to what our financial policy will be." Mr. Lauterbach lays special emphasis on the claims of New York state on the republican party. He says: "The republicans of the Empire state have been modest and self-sacrificing. To them, since the creation of the party, has not been accorded the privilege of the selection of the nominee for this proudest office in the gift of any people. The destinies of the party and the fortunes of the country have uniformly depended upon its political attitude. Doing much, giving much, sacrificing much, it has hitherto been accorded scant consideration by the republicans of other states. It seems but simple justice to acquiesce in its unanimous suggestion for the elevation of its favorite son to the post which it covets for him as the crowning and deserved glory of a private and public life of singular merit and desert." Mr. Hackett, in the course of his remarks, says that "for the first time in the party's histoy a nomination is deemed nearly equivalent to an election, and that therefore every business interest in the nation unites in an appeal to the delegates to the St. Louis convention to place a safe man in nomination and to give the business men a candidate for whom they can cast their ballots with the serene confidence that they are not taking a leap in the dark." Gov. Morton in every way answers the requirements of the hour."

Harrison First; Reed Second Choice.

Revenue Cutter Chase at Bermuda.

Washington, April 1.—The practice revenue cutter Chase is reported at Bermuda on the 25th instant. The officers and crew are well.

WORE TOO BRIGHT.

Salvation Army Cannot Parade at Malden with a Bass Drum.

Malden, Mass., April 1.—At a meeting of the mayor and aldermen last night they voted unanimously against granting the petition of the Salvation army to be given the right to parade the streets with a bass drum. The prevailing feeling was voiced by Alderman Walker, who stated that when the matter first came up he voted to grant them the permit and thought they would respect the laws and the ordinances of the city, but when they defied the officers of the city and had written letters to the public press and made open addresses at their meetings detrimental to the city officials and in defiance of all law and order be would not vote in favor of allowing them to have the bass drum.

RELIEF FOR ARMENIANS.

$1,000 a Week Needed for at Least Two or Three Months.

New York, April 1.—Spencer Trask, chairman of the executive committee of the national Armenian relief committee, has received a letter dated Oorfa, February 19, as follows: "The massacre of December 28 and 29 left over 1,500 widows among the Armenian survivors and 4,500 fatherless little ones. The relief work has been just begun and is simply appalling. The Armenians are very timid, and so few of their men are left that they are reluctant to attempt to distribute aid to even their own people. We try to investigate the needs of all, and to treat all sufferers with impartiality. We need $1,000 a week for at least two or three months." Aid is now being given in Marash to 7,000, including 600 refugees from Zeitoun, mostly women.

HARRISON OFF FOR NEW YORK.

The ex-President Leaves Indianapolis To Claim His Bride.

Indianapolis, April 1.—Gen. Harrison and party left yesterday afternoon on the Pennsylvania railroad for New York. They are due in the Metropolis this evening. The general declined to discuss politics, his mind and attention being absorbed in his wedding to Mrs. Dimmick, which will be solemnized in St. Thomas church, New York, next Monday.

Killed a Woman and Shot Himself.

Philadelphia, April 1.—Ira Gibson, aged 25 years, a florist of Woodbury, N. J., who sells the products of his conservatories in this city, last night shot and killed Mrs. Fannie Marsh, a widow, at the Farmer's hotel on Annapolis street, of which the woman was the owner. He then put a bullet through his own head and was taken to the hospital in a dying condition. It is said that a love affair between the two led to the shooting.

Effort To Save a Murderer's Life.

Amsterdam, N. Y., April 1.—Louis H. Reynolds, the attorney for William H. Youngs, who was sentenced to be electrocuted at Dannemora prison on Monday next for the murder of his wife, has appealed the case. He will make an effort to secure a new trial. A special messenger has been sent from the county clerk's office of Montgomery county to notify Warden Thayer what action has been taken.

Will Abandon the Mine.

Philadelphia, April 1.—The Mineral Railroad and Mining company, a corporation controlled by the Pennsylvania railroad, which operates a number of anthracite coal mines in the Shamokin region, is about to abandon the Camaron mine, one of the largest in that region. The reason for this step is that the coal has reached such a depth that mining is no longer profitable.

The Minneapolis in Bad Condition.

Washington, April 1.—Letters received at the navy department concerning the recent docking of the cruiser Minneapolis at Taranto, Italy, say that the bottom of the vessel was discovered to be very much pitted and in a bad condition. This information is somewhat surprising in view of the fact that the Minneapolis was cleaned in dry dock in this country in August last.

Not Instructed, But for Reed.

Boston, April 1.—The republicans of the eighth congressional district yesterday afternoon selected John Hopewell, jr., of Cambridge and A. E. Winship of Somerville, as delegates to the St. Louis convention with Stanley Ruffin (colored) of Boston and E. S. Crockett of Boston, alternates. The delegates were not instructed but are both Reed men.

Bids for Indian Supplies.

Washington, April 1.—Commissioner of Indian Affairs Browning has decided to open bids at Chicago April 28, and New York city, May 19, next, for Indian supplies for the next fiscal year. They will include beef, clothing, agricultural implements and articles of all descriptions used in the Indian service.

New Presidential Postoffices.

Washington, April 1.—The following fourth-class postoffices became presidential to-day: Maine—Gorham, Guilford, Phillips. Massachusetts—West Brookfield. Rhode Island—River Point, New York—Akron, Shamrock. New Jersey—South River. Pennsylvania—Berwyn, Natrona.

WAR ON MATABELES

Preparations To Attack Their Stronghold in Maleppo Hills.

BULUWAYO FORCE TO BE EMPLOYED

The Situation Reported as Extremely Serious — British Subjects in the Transvaal May Be Recruited To Fight the Matabeles.

Cape Town, April 1.—Contradictory reports are received here regarding the situation at Rhodesia, but there is no question that matters are the most serious in Buluwayo. The Rhodesia Horse, which force was recently disbanded, has been replaced by the Buluwayo field force, 400 strong. This force will storm the stronghold of the Matabeles in the Metoppo hills. King Khama, who rendered efficient aid to the British South Africa company in its campaign against Lo Bengula, has offered an armed escort for the coaches and to keep open communication between Buluway and the south. President Kruger has notified Sir Jacobus De Wet, the British diplomatic agent at Pretoria, that he has no objection to British subects in the Transvaal being recruited for service against the Matabeles. Capt. Nicholson reports from Buluwayo that his force is sufficiently strong to secure that town, but is not strong enough to send flying columns to many districts concurrently. The natives of Matoppa hills have large supplies of cattle and grain.

Fears for Cecil Rhodes' Safety.

London, April 1.—The Daily News to-day says that anxiety is felt by the friends of Cecil Rhodes, who is now on his way from Beira to Buluwayo. It is feared that the Matabeles may waylay him.

RECH HELD FOR MURDER.

His Letter Confessing To Having Killed His Wife Read at the Inquest.

Atlantic City, N. J., April 1.—The coroner's inquest into the murder of Mrs. Annie Rech, the woman whose remains were found buried at Estelville on Friday last, resulted in a verdict being rendered last evening, holding the husband, John Rech, responsible for the death of his wife by strangulation. The examination of witnesses brought to light many sensational facts, among which was a letter written by Rech to his attorney, Carroll Williams of Philadelphia, in which he acknowledged his guilt. The reading of the letter in the courtroom was in the nature of a surprise, it being generally understood that Prosecutor Perry would withhold it for a time yet. The letter was mailed in Philadelphia, bearing the postmark of that city, received at "Station V." Its contents were in German, and translated to the jury the letter read as follows:

She Was Preparing To Leave Him.

"Mr. Williams: On Sunday morning I heard something in the lower part of my house, and there was Bessie ready to go away. That made me so mad that I strangled her, and after that I did not know what I should do, and then I buried her in the field. The little one is in 514 Callowhill street in board. I am miserable. His board is paid for two weeks. You attend to him. JOHN RECH."

"Spikey" Jones, upon whom suspicion was tried to be thrown by Rech, told a straightforward story, relieving any doubt that he had a hand in or knew of the murder until he found the body.

The Lingane Case.

Providence, R. I., April 1.—The Lingane trial has gone over until to-morrow, as to-day is a legal holiday. A part of the testimony for the defense was introduced yesterday afternoon and is in direct contradiction of the state's witnesses. Police Captain Stevens and Henry W. Blake both testified that Cook had threatened to thrash Lingane. George Thompson and John Doherty both testified that Cook had the rawhide in his hand before Lingane shot at him.

Young Ladies Inspect Libraries.

Hartford, April 1.—Thirty young ladies, members of the New York state library school at Albany, visited this city yesterday afternoon and inspected the Watkinson Reference library and the Hartford Free Public library in the Wadsworth Atheneum building. They left last night for Boston where they will remain until Monday. They are making their annual visit to libraries in other cities.

McKees To Summer at Saratoga.

Saratoga, N. Y., April 1.—James R. McKee, son-in-law of ex-President Harrison, was in town yesterday arranging for the opening of the McDonald Union avenue cottage which he will occupy with his family during the coming summer. He will take possession about April 15. It is expected that Gen. Harrison and his bride will spend part of the season here.

Silk Manufacturers Assign.

Allentown, Pa., April 1.—The Cutter Silk Manufacturing company of West Bethlehem has assigned to ex-postmaster John Field of Philadelphia. The failure is a heavy one, as the company is capitalized at $500,000, and has, in addition, a bonded indebtedness of $100,000.

Congressman Van Voorhis Renominated.

Zanesville, O., April 1.—Congressman Van Voorhis, who has been representing the Fifteenth Ohio district for the past two terms, has been renominated here by a vote of 130 to 72.

P. C. A. Society Incorporated.

Albany, April 1.—The Stevens society for the prevention of cruelty to animals of Rome has been incorporated with the secretary of state.

March went out as meekly as could be desired.

How many times have you picked up a pocketbook, kicked a brick under a hat, looked up in the sky to see a wonderful bird, or did some equally as foolish thing, and then have the onlooker chuckle with glee at your gullibility and the small boy hoot "April fool."

That measure putting the Supreme Court and Chancery Clerks on a salary has been generally spoken of as "the Voorhees bill," because of the part that Union's Senator took in urging its passage. As a matter of fact, the new law, exactly as it stands, was drafted by Senator Johnson.—New York Tribune.

In some sections of the State there is a disposition on the part of the retired Lay Judges to make a test of the constitutionality of the bill which legislated them out of office. In Jersey City the Lay Judges will, it is said, report daily to the Court of Common Pleas until a decision in the matter is reached by the Supreme Conrt.

Frederick. C. Marsh, Prosecutor of Pleas in Union county, was last night nominated for Mayor in Elizabeth. Mr. Marsh is duck shooting in Maryland, and,it is stated, sent word to the party leaders that he did not want the nomination. The leaders, however, felt that Mr. Marsh could make the best fight against Mayor Rankin, and he was nominated. Every influence will be brought to bear on Mr. Marsh to have him stand as the candidate. It is argued that in years past he has received many honors and emoluments from the hands of the party, and that now his duty as a Democrat will compel him to accept the candidacy. Mr. Marsh is a brilliant man, popular with the people, and there seems to be no reason why he shouldn't pull the unterrified Democracy of Elizabeth through to victory.

Mr. C. G. Crawford indulged in a pyrotechnic display of English invective against the eminently respectable and honorable Common Council in a letter published in the News last night. Mr. Crawford is sarcastic, critical and condemnatory of the city's legislative body in one sweep of the pen, and the rhetoric he uses is more expressive than elegant. He attempts to convey the impression that the members of the Common Council participated in and countenanced a rank outrage on the rights of people whom they represent in the government of the city. They did nothing of the kind. The Common Council met in special session, called in a legal manner,and approved the papers necessary for the railway company to start their work. They did it in an open manner, there not being the slightest attempt to conceal such action. There has been no claim that they usurped the rights of anyone or indulged in unusual proceedings to accomplish the result. It is the established custom for the Council to hold their meetings in the evening, and this was all that was done. It was a conceded and well-known fact that the franchise was to be granted to the street railway company. The Council simply did their duty in doing such. It is immaterial whether or not any of the Councilmen knew that the railroad was to be built on East Fifth street that night. There is no clause in the ordinance which prescribes that the work shall be done in daylight, and it would have been the height of foolishness to have inculeated any such passage. As soon as the Common Council had approved of the ordinance, the street railway officials had the right to start their work as soon as they felt so disposed, whether it was night or day, and the Councilmen had no more to do with such action than a private citizen. So far as the railroad people are concerned, they are to be commended for their prompt action to overcome the petty opposition with which they were confronted, and which, at its most, could have resulted in nothing more than an aggravating delay. The rights of a meagre minority are subject to the disposition and interests of the vast majority.

A DREAM THAT OUGHT TO BE TRUE.

A Correspondent Takes an Imaginary Trip to Monument Square.

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—There are probably few people in Plainfield who know where "Monument Square" is, and for their benefit, I propose to ask them to accompany me on a visit to this historic spot. Starting from any quarter of the city and going North or South on Watchung avenue or West on La Grande, or East on Seventh or Eighth streets in a short drive, there will soon appear a finely sculptured shaft apparently standing in the middle of either one of the thoroughfares just named. On arrival at the spot we find that "Monument Square" is a point where the above-named streets and avenues intersect. It would be well to state right here that a portion of the site of the square was formerly a part of the grass plot immediately in front of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church. The beautiful brick paving of the square was done at the expense of the city. The monument itself is fifty-three feet, six inches high and is conceded by all to be a work of art. I do not know who paid for it, but it was undoubtedly erected at the expense of some or many of the whole souled, generous and patriotic citizens of the neighborhood. You ask, "Why was it erected and why this is an historic spot?" The full answer would be long and might appropriately be written in blood, but this spot is historic because at the sight of this monument there is brought to mind the bloody conflict that brother waged against brother in the days gone by, when the history of this fair land of ours was re-written, and ever since which time freedom has meant what it stands for in the lexicous. The monument commemorates the brave dead who then or later gave their lives for this Union, and then too, the thought of each old veteran now living, "that stands for me," must be very pleasing. In summer time the city band is wont to come to the square on pleasant evenings and discourse sweet music to the lingering concourse of people. Let me tell you one thing, that very few people at the present time have knowledge of, that is, that the wholesouled, generous and patriotic citizens referred to above, were many years getting the money together to cover the cost, but you can see for yourself that they finally got there. I wish we had a list of their names that above them all we might write, "They have done what they could to perpetuate loyalty and have erected this ensign to ever bring to the mind of the young men of our land that 'the Nation's heroes are not forgotten.'" Nothing Like It.

Time brings many changes, but the climate of California, "The Italy of America," and the attractions of the many famous health and pleasure resorts, are the same yesterday, today and forever.

Tourists never will tire of speaking in praise of the soft and balmy air, the profusion of flowers, the magnificent display of fruits, the luxury of seabathing and the beautiful walks and drives.

Then, too, it must be conceded that with such excellent equipment, consisting of Reclining Chair Cars, Pullman Palace Sleepers and Pullman Dining Cars, all heated by steam and lighted with Pintsch Light, the Union Pacific, "The Overland Route," is the tourists favorite. Ask your agents for tickets via this route.

The other players on the Yale team will be "Chub" Morris, Henry Rider of Plainfield, Amos Barnes, John Hall and W. Corbin.

GOLF.

Plainfield golfers will soon commence their favorite past time.

The annual meeting of the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club will be held this evening.

Willie Park, Jr., is about to publish an illustrated book on golf in Scotland. Coming from so good an authority on the game, the book ought to be an important addition to golfing literature.

All indications point to a big tournament April 16th, 17th and 18th, at Lakewood. This will be the annual spring tournaments of the club, and assurances of a fine lot of entries have already been received. Many of the players who recently played in the Palmetto Club tourney in South Carolina will take part in the Lakewood competition.

INS AND OUTS.

The Princetons varsity nine has scheduled a game with the Elizabeth Athletic Club team for May 30th.

There is an effort being made by representatives of Plainfield, Westfield, Scotch Plains and the Cranford Athletic Club, to form an amateur baseball league. A meeting was held last night in the clubhouse of the Cranford Athletic Club, and the matter was discussed. The representatives are anxious that a trophy be offered for the championship of the league. The meeting was adjourned before any definite action was taken. —Elizabeth Journal.

AT THE TRAPS.

The Plainfield shooters came out very well at the tournament at Elizabeth yesterday. Apgar secured four seconds, two thirds and two fourths. Keller finished third in five events and fourth in one. In the event of the day, the fifty bird race. C. Smith tied Adams, a New York man, for first place with a score of 46. Smith also won third money, second money and fourth money. The back ground was not a favorable one which accounted for the few firsts by the crack shots, the home talent winning most of the events. The shoot is continued today.

STRIKES AND SPARES.

Harry VanEmburgh has won the head-pin tournament on the Crescent Wheelmen's bowling alley by a score of 114 out of a possible 120. Wheaton Lowrie was a close competitor with a score of 113. Harry seems to be a Pooh Bah among the special prizes offered on these alleys, for he has captured everything going for the last five years, though everyone combined to down him.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the eustachian tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube be restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give one hundred dollars for any case of deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

CYCLING COMMENT.

W. A. McClurg, of the Plainfield Electric Light Company, is riding a new '96 Cleveland wheel.

Steps are being taken by the cycle dealers of Paterson to form a local cycle board of trade there.

Rev. A. H. Lewis, D. D., rode to Bound Brook Monday, and found the roads in a very muddy condition.

Walter Williams rode to Somerville and return yesterday. The roads were not in the best of condition, but still they were ridable.

The Nassau Wheelmen, of Brooklyn, will be represented in all the amateur tandem races in the metropolitan district this season by Totten and Hughes.

Mr. Bartlett, represtative of the Rambler cycles, visited at the salesrooms of the F. L. C. Martin Cycle Company, yesterday. He considered them one of the best in this district.

J. W. Judge and "Teddy" Goodman, of the Riverside Wheelmen, who competed in the bicycle races at the Press Cycle Club games on Saturday, won first and second prizes respectively.

The spring weather still attracts many to the salesrooms of the F. L. C. Martin Cycle Company. Among the latest purchasers are Mr. and Mrs. Charles Thompson, two Crescents, Nos. 1 and 4, and Willis Taylor, a Crescent No. 1.

Jay Eaton, of Elizabeth, and J. E. Mosher, of New York, will ride the Jersey wheel in the professional ranks this year. A. B. Barnett, of Westfield, will probably join the team before they leave for the south, which will be in about two weeks.

The East Orange Cyclers believe in encouraging their riders. The following medals are offered: A medal is offered by the club to each member riding 2,000 or more in 1896, or a new bar to those already having medals. A gold medal is offered by the president to the member having the greatest mileage for the year, and a gold medal is offered by the captain to the member riding through the largest number of official club runs.

Cabanne and Titus having expressed annoyance that the Racing Board had not taken action on their case, Chairman Gideon remarks that "their case will not even be considered until the 1st of September. At the National Assembly we were 'recommended,' not 'instructed,' to reduce their sentence to one year. There is plenty of time left us to consider the matter, and for some time to come we will have any amount of other work on hand with which to occupy ourselves." Both of these riders have contessed on the Crescent Oval and are known personally to a number of Plainfielders.

SCHOOL AND CHURCH.

—The attendance in the Scottish universities for the year 1894-95 is thus stated: Edinburgh, 2,924; Glasgow, 1,903; Aberdeen, 812.

—There are two Chinese girls who are studying medicine at the University of Michigan. They will return to China as Christian medical missionaries.

A new porch is to be erected at one of the entrances to Hawarden church by Mr. Gladstone's son Henry. A niche above the door will be kept empty for one or two figures.

—Forty girl students at the State normal school in Warrensburg, Mo., have organized an athletic association. They are going to devote much attention to outdoor sports, and will wear bloomers and sweaters.

—Presbyterian vigor in invective has not degenerated in Scotland. A Glasgow minister, who opposed total abstinence, was described lately in the pulpit as "a white-chokered blasphemer engaged in raising a sign post to hell."

—Dr. B. E. Fernow, chief of the division of forestry in the department of agriculture, has been appointed special lecturer on forests and forestry in the school of economics, political science and history, in the University of Wisconsin. This course of lectures will probably be the first one of the kind to be given in a school of this character.

—A criminal suit against the lay rector for neglecting to repair the chancel of the parish church, probably the first suit of the kind brought in the present century, was instituted recently by the church wardens of St. Peter's church, Derby, in the consistory court. The gentleman, who draws the tithes and enjoys the revenues of the church, pleaded guilty and was condemned to make the repairs.

—The saloonkeepers of Flint, Mich., are considerably alarmed because the prohibitionists of that place have determined to set up a counter attraction on Saturday afternoon when the farmers visit town. A church is to be opened and hot coffee furnished there free of charge. Smoking will be allowed, and it is expected that the visitors will have a general good time—without any of the usual after effects.

—The professors at the Berlin university do not take kindly to the concessions which have been made to women in allowing them to attend classes, and it is reported that one, Prof. Schmidt, of the German literature department, has petitioned the minister of public instructions to have his classes exempt from women. Prof. Von Preitschke, a famous historian, is said to have actually escorted to the door of his classroom a daring woman who came with the intention of joining.

THEATER EGGS.

Variety That Is Still Much in Demand in Some Sections.

The man with the fur-lined coat stopped before the principal grocery in an interior town and casually inquired:

"How are eggs to-day?"

"Well, they're a little high," replied the grocer.

"Because of a big demand or a small supply?" asked the man with the fur-lined coat.

"Small supply," answered the grocer. "The hens seem to be taking things easy in this vicinity just now."

The man with the fur-lined coat nodded his head, as if he approved of the action of the hens, and then asked:

"Any bad ones?"

"Bad ones!" exclaimed the grocer.

"Yes. Any of the ancient, odorous variety that we all know so well?"

"No, sir, not in this shop," returned the grocer, emphatically.

"Sure?"

"Sure! Of course I'm sure."

"Do you suppose there are any in town?" asked the man with the fur-lined coat, anxiously.

"No, sir. We pride ourselves on our fresh eggs up in this neck of the woods, and it wouldn't be safe for anyone to keep bad ones."

"I'm glad to hear it," said the man with the fur-lined coat, with evident relief, as he continued his stroll down the street.

The grocer looked after him for a minute, and then a great light suddenly came upon him.

"Say!" he yelled.

"Well?" came back the answer.

"Did you mean eating eggs or theater eggs?"

"Theater eggs?" exclaimed the man with the fur-lined coat, stopping short in his walk.

"Yes. The farmers never bring in their theater eggs until the afternoon before the show. I was thinking of eating eggs all the time, but if it's theater eggs you want, there'll be about eight or ten crates of them on sale in about an hour."

Then he went back into his store and told his assistant that any jay actor who tried to pump him was bound to get the worst of it every time.—Chicago Post.

Cleansing Kid Gloves.

Clean kid gloves with naphtha; put them on the hands, rub with flannel dipped in naphtha, and then wipe dry with a clean piece of white flannel. Remove the gloves and hang them up in the air. The first steps in renovating are uninteresting, but must be done well or the after results will be far from satisfactory. Silk embroidery may be cleaned with a camel's-hair brush and spirits of wine. Prepare to do the task well or do not commence it. Be careful of explosive cleaning fluids, like benzine, naphtha or alcohol. Always air goods after cleaning them in a fluid of strong odor.—Ladies' Home Journal.

Would Be Happy.

Old Man Bullion—And are you sure, my dear, that as my wife you will be happy?

Miss Youngthing—Oh, perfectly. I think it's simply heavenly to pay for things by check.—N. Y. Weekly.

MILLIONS IN THE ICE.

Antediluvian Beasts with Ivory Tusks Locked in the Frozen North.

Wealth is waiting for the man who shall have the courage to essay a certain bold exploit. It is not gold, nor silver, nor yet precious gems, but ivory—the finest ivory in the world. Mines of it exist, in which are stored quantities of this valuable substance well nigh inexhaustible. This is no idle tale designed to inflame the imagination. It is cold fact, resting upon indisputable authority. Let the most adventurous spirit take advantage of the information which is given by the famous Lieut. Schuetze, who was sent by the United States government to bring back to this country the bodies of De Long and his companions after the Jeanette disaster. These ill-fated men, it will be remembered, perished of starvation and cold in the Lena delta. The Lena rises in eastern Siberia and flows northward to the Arctic ocean. To the northeast of its mouth there is a group of islands known as New Siberia. It is on these islands that the ivory mines are to be found.

The Lena, however, has not one, but many mouths. Its delta covers an area of 5,000 square miles. This frozen region was thoroughly explored by Lieut. Schuetze in his search for the bodies. Later he visited it again, bringing several thousand dollars' worth of gifts to the natives, he secured their confidence, and they spoke to him of many things which they never had communicated to any other stranger. They even told him about the ivory mines and showed him some tusks.

They were mammoth tusks. The ivory mines are deposits of the tusks of mammoths that lived in that region thousands of years ago. All over northern Siberia these huge animals roamed in vast herds. The climate at that time was comparatively mild. But there came a sudden change. Fierce winter swept over the land—a winter permanent and destined never again to resign its sway. The mammoths sought shelter in the valleys, where they huddled together until, overwhelmed by snowdrifts, they lay down to die beneath fleecy avalanches which were finally transformed into solid ice. This ice, composing glaciers, was swept through gorges toward the Arctic ocean, carrying the buried creatures.

Thus buried in ice, the mammoths were likely to be preserved for an indefinite period. Such, in fact, was the result, and to this day it occasionally happens that the thawing of a mass of ice by the short summer's sun reveals the carcass of one of the gigantic beasts, its meat still fresh enough to be fed to the dogs. Such a thing occurred in 1799. The mounted skeleton is now in the Imperial museum at St. Petersburg. The animal was a small one, comparatively speaking, being only nine feet high and 16 feet long.

When the Siberian natives had come to know Mr. Schuetze well they told him about the ivory deposits in New Siberia. The islands of the group, they said, were "built on mammoth bones." Subsequent observations by the lieutenant confirmed this statement.

Mammoth ivory, be it understood, is more highly valued than any other kind. It is worth four dollars a pound in the crude. The tusk of a big fellow will measure 14 feet in length, and will weigh four times as much as the tusk of a large elephant. The market demand for ivory is now supplied to a great extent from Siberia. The mammoth tusks are carried enormous distances overland to reach the nearest railways. This kind of ivory is known as "fossil" ivory, though that is a misnomer.—N. Y. Journal.

LIST OF ACQUAINTANCES.

Very Few Men Who Know by Name One Thousand People.

A small party seated in the Manhattan club the other night was discussing the question of acquaintances. One well-known lawyer said he knew as many people as any man in the room, he did not care who he was. I asked him if he could say how many acquaintances he had—not friends merely, but persons known casually and slightly. After thinking it over he said: "Ten thousand."

"I bet $50 to $5," said another of the party, "that you cannot name 1,000 persons of your acquaintance, and give you all night to do it." The bet was made, and the lawyer began, a friend keeping tally.

When, after two hours of hard thinking, he had reached between 500 and 600, he was going very slow and straining terribly. At midnight he was so far from the 1,000 mark that the party broke up in disgust.

I doubt if there is a man in this country who could write down the names of 1,000 acquaintances at a moment's notice. I don't believe there are five men in the United States who are acquainted personally with 10,000 people.

Dan Lamont, secretary of war, is said to know more faces than any other man. He made a study of faces when Mr. Cleveland's private secretary, and became indispensable to the president.

It might be said that there are many politicians who know more than 10,000 people personally, but you can't rely upon a political acquaintance. The politician has a way of pretending to know every living man who has a vote. Dr. Chauncey M. Depew probably has as wide an acquaintance as any man we know. Many men remember faces without being able to recall names. That is not an acquaintance. It will not do to say that we have met such and such a man before somewhere, but cannot recollect his name.—N. Y. Press.

Childish Ingenuity.

"See what you are doing," says his mamma. "You are putting your stocking on the wrong way."

"I do it on purpose, mamma. I've got a hole on the other side."—Boston Transcript.

One Minute Late

It makes no difference whether you were one minute or one hour late, if you missed the train. Better get there on time, even if you have to wait. One hour early is better than one minute late. Delay costs thousands of lives each year. "Neglected colds" is the beginning of the story; and consumption is the end. Few remedies, and but little of them, cure in the beginning. Later, many remedies long continued, and tedious journeys, too frequently end in disappointment.

Scott's Emulsion

COPYRIGHT, 1894, BY BRET HARTE.

He did not speak, but his arm quite unconsciously passed around her small waist. "You see, Clarence," she went on, with equal unconsciousness of the act, "you ought never to have let me go—never! You ought to have kept me here, or run away with me. And you oughtn't to have tried to make me proper. And you oughtn't to have driven me to flirt with that horrid Spaniard, and you oughtn't to have been so horribly cold and severe when I did. And you oughtn't to have made me take up with Jim, who was the only one who thought me his equal. I might have been very silly and capricious; I might have been very vain, but my vanity isn't a bit worse than your pride—my love of praise and applause in the theater isn't a bit more horrid than your fears of what people might think of you or me. That's gospel truth, isn't it, Clarence? Tell me! Don't look that way and this—look at me! I ain't poisonous, Clarence. Why, one of your cheeks is redder than the other, Clarence—that's the one that's turned from me. Come," she went on, taking the lapels of his coat between her hands, and half shaking him, half drawing him nearer her bright face. "Tell me—isn't it true?"

"I was thinking of you just now when I fell asleep, Susy," he said. He did not know why he said it; he had not intended to tell her—he had only meant to avoid a direct answer to her question, yet even now he went on. "And I thought of you when I was out there in the rose garden waiting to come in here."

"You did?" she said, drawing in her breath. A wave of delicate pink color came up to her very eyes—it seemed to him as quickly and as innocently as when she was a girl. "And what did you think, Klarus"—she half whispered—"tell me!"

He did not speak, but answered her blue eyes, and then her lips, as her arms slipped quite naturally around his neck.

The dawn was breaking as Clarence and Jim Hooker emerged together from the gate of the casa. Mr. Hooker looked sleepy. He had found, after his return from Fair Plains, that his host had an early engagement in Santa Inez, and he had insisted upon rising to see him on. It was with difficulty, indeed, that Clarence could prevent his accompanying him. Clarence had not revealed to Susy the night before the real object of his journey, nor did Hooker evidently suspect it, yet when he had mounted his horse, he hesitated for an instant—but without extending his hand.

"If I should happen to be detained," he began with a half smile.

But Jim was struggling with a yawn. "Tha's all righ'—don't mind us," he said, stretching his arms. Clarence's hesitating hand dropped to his side, and with a light, reckless laugh and a half sense of providential relief, he galloped away.

What happened immediately thereafter, during his solitary ride to Santa Inez, looking back upon it in after years, seemed but a confused recollection, more like a dream. The long stretches of vague distance gradually opening clearer with the rising sun in an unclouded sky, the meeting with a few early or belated travelers and his unconscious avoidance of them, as if they might know of his object, the black shadows of foreshortened cattle rising before him on the plain and arousing the same uneasy sensation of their being waylaying men; the wondering recognition of houses and landmarks he had long been familiar with, his purposeless attempts to recall the circumstances in which he had known them—all these were like a dream. So, too, were the recollections of the night before, the episode with Susy, already mingled and blended with the memory of their previous past, his futile attempts to look forward to the future, always, however, abandoned with relief at the thought that the next few hours might make them unnecessary. So, also, was the sudden realization that Santa Inez was before him, when he had thought he was not yet half way there, and as he dismounted before the courthouse his singular feeling—followed, however, by no fear of distress—that he had come so early to the rendezvous that he was not yet quite prepared for it.

This same sense of unreality pervaded his meeting with the deputy sheriff; the news that the federal judge had, as was expected, dismissed the prisoners on their own recognizance, and that Capt. Pinckney was at the hotel at breakfast. In the like abstract manner he replied to the one or two questions of the deputy, exhibited the pistols he had brought with him and finally accompanied him to a little meadow hidden by trees below the hotel, where the other principal and his seconds were awaiting them. And here he awoke!—clear-eyed, keen, forceful and intense!

So stimulated were his faculties that his sense of hearing in its acuteness took in every word of the conversation between the seconds, a few paces distant. He heard his adversary's second say carelessly to the deputy sheriff: "I presume this is a case where there will be no apology or mediation," and the deputy's reply; "I reckon my man means business, but he seems a little queer." He heard the other second laugh and say lightly: "They're apt to be so when it's their first time out," followed by the more anxious aside of the other second as the deputy turned away: "Yes, but by G—d I don't like his looks!" His sense of sight was also so acute that having lost the choice of position, when the coin was tossed and being turned with his face to the sun, even through its glare he saw with unerring distinctness of outline the black-coated figure of his opponent moved into range, saw the perfect outline of his features, and how the easy, supercilious smile as he threw away his cigar appeared to drop out of his face with a kind of vacant awe as he faced him. He felt his nerves become as steel as the countering began, and at the word "three" knew he had fired by the recoil of the pistol in his leveled hand simultaneously with its utterance. And at the same moment, still standing like a rock, he saw his adversary miserably collapse, his legs grotesquely curving inward under him, without even the dignity of death in his fall, and so sink helplessly like a felled bull to the ground. Still erect, and lowering only the muzzle of his pistol, as a thin feather of smoke curled up its shining side, he saw the doctor and seconds run quickly to the heap, try to lift its limp impotence into shape, and let it drop again with the words: "Right through the forehead, by G—d!"

"You've done for him," said the deputy, turning to Clarence with a singular look of curiosity, "and I reckon you'd better get out of this mighty quick! They didn't expect it—they're just ragin', they may round on you—and"—he added more slowly—"they seem to have just found out who you are!"

Even while he was speaking Clarence with his quickened ears heard the words, "one of Hamilton Brunt's pups." "Just like his father," from the group around the dead man. He did not hesitate but walked coolly toward them. Yet a certain fierce pride—which he had never known before—stirred in his veins, as their voices hushed and they half recoiled before him.

"Am I to understand from my second, gentlemen," he said, looking around the group, "that you are not satisfied?"

"The fight was square enough," said Pinckney's second, in some embarrassment, "but I reckon that he"—pointing to the dead man—"did not know who you were?"

"Do you mean that he did not know that I was the son of a man proficient in the use of arms?"

"I reckon that's about it," returned the second, glancing at the others.

"I am glad to say, sir, that I have a better opinion of his courage," said Clarence, lifting his hat to the dead body, as he turned away.

Yet he was conscious of no remorse, concern or even pity in his act. Perhaps this was visible in his face, for the group appeared awed by this perfection of the duelist's coolness, and even returned his formal parting salutation with a vague and timid respect. He thanked the deputy, regained the hotel, saddled his horse and galloped away.

But not toward the rancho. Now that he could think of his future, that had no place in his reflections; even the episode of Susy was forgotten in the new and strange conceptions of himself and his irresponsibility which had come upon him with the killing of Pinckney and the words of his second. It was his dead father who had stiffened his arm and directed the fatal shot! It was the hereditary influence—which others had been so quick to recognize—that had brought about this completing climax of his trouble. How else could he account for it that he, a conscientious, peaceful, sensitive man, tender and forgiving as he believed himself to be, could now feel so little sorrow or compunction for his culminating act? He had read of successful duelists who were haunted by remorse for their first victim; who retained a terrible consciousness of the appearance of the dead man; he had no such feeling; he had only a grim contentment in the wiped out inefficient life, and contempt for the limp and helpless body. He suddenly recalled the callousness as a boy,

"You've done for him," said the deputy.

when face to face with the victims of the Indian massacre his sense of fastidious superciliousness in the discovery of the body of Susy's mother—surely it was the cold blood of his father influencing him ever thus. What had he to do with affection, with domestic happiness, with the ordinary ambitions of man's life, whose blood was frozen at its source! Yet even with this very thought came once more the old inconsistent tenderness he had as a boy lavished upon the almost unknown and fugitive father who had forsaken his childish companionship, and remembered him only by secret gifts. He remembered how he had worshiped him even while the pious padres at San Jose were endeavoring to eliminate this terrible poison from his blood and combat his hereditary instinct in his conflicts with his school fellows. And it was a part of his inconsistency that, riding away from the scene of his first bloodshed, his eyes were dimmed with moisture, not for the victim, but for the one being whom he believed had impelled him to the act.

This and more was in his mind during his long ride to Fair Plains, his journey by coach to Embaseadero, his midnight passage across the dark waters of Francisco—but what should be his future was still unsettled.

As he wound around the crest of Russian hill and looked down again upon the awakened city he was startled to see that it was fluttering and streaming with bunting! From every public building and hotel; from the roofs of private houses, and even the windows of lonely dwellings flapped and waved the striped and starry banner. The steady breath of the sea carried it out from masts and yards of ships at their wharves—from the battlements of the forts at Alcatez and Yerba Buena. He remembered that the ferrymen had told him that the news from Fort Sumter had swept the city with a convulsion of patriotic sentiment, and that there was no doubt that the state was saved to the union. He looked down upon it with haggard and bewildered eyes—and then a strange gasp and fullness of his throat! For afar a solitary bugle had blow—the "reveille" at Fort Alcatraz!

PART II.

CHAPTER I.

Night at last, and the stir and tumult of a great night over. Even the excitement that had swept this portion of the battlefield—only a small section of a vaster area of struggle—into which a brigade had marched held its own, been beaten back, recovered its ground, and pursuing, had passed out of it forever, leaving only its dead behind and knowing nothing more of that struggle than its own impact and momentum—even this wild excitement had long since evaporated with the stinging smoke of gunpowder, the acrid smell of burning rags from the clothing of a dead soldier fired by a bursting shell, or the heated reek of sweat and leather. A cool breath, that seemed to bring back once more the odor of the upturned earthworks along the now dumb line of battle, began to move from the suggestive darkness beyond.

But into that awful penetralia of death and silence there was now no invasion—there had been no retreat. A few of the wounded had been brought out, under fire, but the others had been left with the dead for the morning light and succor. For it was known that in that horrible obscurity riderless horses, frantic with the smell of blood, galloped wildly here and there, or, maddened by wounds, plunged furiously at the intruder, that the wounded soldier, still armed, could not always distinguish friend from foe or from the ghouls of camp followers who stripped the dead in the darkness, and struggled with the dying. A shot or two heard somewhere in that obscurity counted as nothing with the long fusillade that had swept it in the daytime; the passing of a single life, more or less, amounted to little in the long rollcall of the day's slaughter.

ATTACKED BY A DOG.

A Vicious Brute Running Loose in the West End.

As Patrolman Saunders was walking along West Third street, near Muhlenberg place, yesterday afternoon, he was attacked by a large dog which tried to grab him by the throat. The officer had all he could do to get clear of the dog, which is a very large and strong one. The officer finally forced the dog from him and then the brute fled. This is not the first time this dog has attacked people, and Patrolman Saunders says the dog has attacked him before. The dog is the property of a West Third street man, and although the dog's vicious character is well known, he is allowed to roam at large.

HOW TURKISH WOMEN DRESS.

Wearing Neither Corset Nor Stockings, They Have Curious Articles of Attire.

In not a single respect is a Turkish lady's attire similar to that worn by the women of the occident. Amazingly little is known, in fact, about the wardrobe of the women of the harem, and the average American woman has little idea regarding it, save that all Turkish women wear trousers and a veil.

The two most interesting and important points are that the Turkish woman wears no corsets and no stockings. She has nothing whatever in the place of corsets, but instead of stockings knitted woolen socks. Often these are open-worked very skillfully, and have a mixture of silk threads. Some are elaborately embroidered in colors and in gold.

The very first garment the woman of the orient puts on is a long-sleeved chemise of Broussa crepe gauze. This is made exactly like the seamless holy coat of Treves, and its neck is cut out and hemmed in a close roll.

The trousers are made most often of chintz or cretonne, and are vivid and startling in color. They are put on immediately after the chemise, and are about four inches longer than the leg. They are fastened by a drawing-string at the waist, tied in front, and they hang down over the ankles.

The entarri, a garment taking the place of the trained skirts of the west, comes next. It is of cotton, wool, silk or satin, perhaps of rich brocade, perhaps of a brilliant tint, but of whatever material it may be made it is bright and gay. It consists of four breadths.

Next in order come the sash and the jacket, the latter being worn only in warm weather. It is shaped like what we call an Eton jacket, and buttoned to the waist line with small jewels or gold buttons. The sleeves are sometimes elbow sleeves, always loose and often left flowing below the elbow. The curious thing about this jacket is that while it is well fitted in the back, all the portion that should cover the breast is cut away, leaving the entire bust exposed.

While the other portions of the costume worn by Turkish women are wonderfully picturesque, the most pride of all is taken in this jacket. Velvet, silk or satin are the materials used for it. The wives of the richest Mohammedans have it embroidered with seed pearls, turquoise or coral, and always with gold and silver threads.

Exceedingly important, too, really the most important article in this attire, is the yashmak, or Turkish veil. The Turkish woman wears no hat, but she nevertheless is not debarred from the usual feminine prerogative, for it is invariably in order for her to query whether her yashmak is on straight. In fact, a woman shows whether she has style or not by the way she wears this veil. It is a law of the prophet that Mohammedan women shall never be without it when outside of their homes: and this law is rigidly adhered to.

One valuable use the veil has. It etherealizes by its folds the entire face, a very necessary thing when the feminine custom of painting the whole countenance is taken into consideration. Without her veil the Turkish woman looks rather ghastly when she is in full regalia. Her eyebrows are blackened with kohl, her lips are crimsoned, her cheeks are dyed carmine and the rest of her face is whitened with arsenic paste or some similar compound.—N. Y. World.

EXPLAIN THE FIGURES.

Facts That Illustrate the Value in Gold of Quantities Frequently Mentioned.

The total amount of the bids received at the United States treasury for the last government bond issue was $568,000,000. This amount of money would make a block 10 feet square by 14 1-3 feet high.

The total imports of the United States for 195 were valued at $731,969,965, which would make a gold block 10 feet square by 18½ feet high.

The total exports of the United States for 1895 were valued at $793,392,599, which would make a block of gold 10 feet square by 19 2-3 feet high.

The production of wheat in the United States for 1894 was 460,267,416 bushels, the value of which, at 60 cents per bushel, would make a gold block 10 feet square by 7 feet high.

The assessed valuation of all the taxable property in Chicago, real and personal, for 1895 was $244,476,825, which would make a gold block 10 feet square by 6 feet high.

The assessed valuation in 1890 of all property, real and personal, in Montana, Wyoming, Colorado, New Mexico, Idaho, Utah and Nevada was, in round numbers, $568,000,000, the amount of the bond bid.

The amount of the bond bid, coined into $20 pieces, would make a pile of gold containing, approximately, 1,500 cubic feet. The amount of cash on deposit in the country's savings banks alone, in 1895, was $1,810,597,023, or a fraction over three times the amount of the bond bid.—N. Y. Mail and Express.

Read The Press.

She Knew the Difference.

Mr. Topnoody is no lawyer, but his wife is an able woman. He was stumped in his reading the other evening and appealed to her.

"Are you up on Latin, my dear?" he asked.

"What do you want to know?" she inquired, with proper caution.

"I want to know the difference between de jure and de facto."

Mrs. T. studied a moment.

"Yes," she said, "you are at the head of this family de jure."

"Yes," he put in, "I understand that."

"And," she concluded, with some vigor, "I am the head of it de facto."—N. Y. Mercury.

He Liked the Idea.

After he had been through all the departments of the penitentiary the visitor called the warden to one side.

"Say," he said in a whisper, "do you suppose I could arrange to be shaved here?"

"Shaved!"

"Yes. I'd like to make a permanent arrangement. I like your methods, you know."

"Why, they are much the same as—"

"Oh, not at all. You don't permit your barbers to talk."—Chicago Evening Post.

Truthful If No. Poetical.

I asked of a maiden fair,
With a wealth of sun kissed hair,
"Did a golden ray
From a gorgeous sunset
Entangled for aye,
In thy silken net,
Lend thy tresses their heavenly hue?"
"No, indeedy," she said, with a practical air;
"'Twas water and soda that bleached my hair,
And blondine, sometimes, I use, too."

A MAN OF PROGRESS.

James E. Martine One of the Biggest Improvers of Real Estate In This City.

James E. Martine is certainly a man of activity and progress. Besides being a farmer, orator, politician, philospher and philanthrophist, he is one of the biggest real estate improvers in Plainfield. Most Plainfielders know, of course, that all that section of the city below East Ninth street and east of Park avenue was opened up by Mr. Martine several years ago, but there are doubtless few today who know he is extensively engaged in building a high class of residences on his property. A representative of the Press accompanied Mr. Martine through two of his newly erected houses on East Ninth street a day or two ago and they are certainly models of up-to-dateness. They are prettily designed in architecture and are arranged throughout with the idea of combining beauty and convenience. Broad verandas surround both of them, the rooms are large and airy, and yet small enough to make them cosy, and taken all the way through they are designed to extract that essence of serene comfort which is found in a pleasant home. Every little detail in their construction is attended to with as much attention as the most prominent portion of the structure.

Mr. Martine has in his mind the extension of Third place further through his property, and he has already the lines surveyed for that purpose and is filling in and leveling off that section near Ninth street preparatory to opening the thoroughfare. As planned, the street will run diagonally west from Ninth street to Prospect avenue, coming out near the house now occupied by Hector Smith. There it will turn and in a serpintine route continue to Martine avenue. This will open up one of the most desirable residential streets in Plainfield.

EDITOR REINER AT LIBERTY.

Two Men in Plainfield Become His Bondsmen for $10,400.

John Max Reiner, the editor of the New Jersey Herald, of Elizabeth, who has been in jail there since March 7th on twenty-six charges of alleged criminal libel, made by Mayor Rankin, obtained his liberty last niget.

Henry Van Sickle and Justice Vincent W. Nash, of this city, went on his bond for $10,400. They, it is understood, got collateral security. The case will come up before the May Grand Jury.

Better Delivery Wagons Coming.

The United States Express Company are now in possession of their new, handsome and commodious stable in the rear of Van Zandt's feed store on Park avenue, and the American flag floated proudly from the staff yesterday denoting the fact. Manager Mills has worked assiduously to give the public the best service possible and they appreciate it. In a short time he will have five new express wagons, one double and four singles. The stable is fitted in the most approved and modern method and is certainly a credit to the company and the town. It is built of brick and thoroughly fire-proof.

Woke to Find Their House Afire.

A house owned by Mrs. Jones Decker, a widow, on North avenue, Elizabeth, was burned yesterday morning, with nearly all its contents. Mrs. Decker and her sister, Mrs. Crane, an invalid, were in bed at the time, and had a narrow escape. The sick woman was carried out by neighbors. The loss was about $1,500.

Big Crash at White's.

Crash in prices only on jardinieres, bouquet-holders and flower vases. Cut-glass at prices unheard of in Plainfield; a full line of vinegar and oil cruets, water bottles, syrup pitchers, mustard pots, knife-rests and shakers. See their new ad for cut prices.

A Watchung Avenue Event.

Cards are out for a tea to be given by Mrs. George H. Frost, of Watchung avenue, in honor of her daughter-in-law, Mrs. Charles H. Frost, on Thursday, April 9th, from four until seven.

May Have Rubber Tire Wheels.

The wheels to Chief Doane's wagon are in such a condition that they need replacing, and there is considerable talk of putting rubber tires on the new wheels.

This is to certify that on May 11th, I walked to Melick's drug store on a pair of crutches and bought a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm for inflammatory rheumatism which had crippled me up. After using three bottles I am completely cured. I can cheerfully recommend it. Charles H. Wetzel, Sunbury, Pa. Sworn and subscribed to before me on August 10th, 1894. Walter Shipman, J. P. For sale at 50c per bottle at Armstrong's pharmacy, Park and North avenues.

BAD, BUT PASSABLE.

THAT IS THE KIND OF MONEY A JERSEYMAN HAS BEEN MAKING.

A German Expert With Pen and Ink Has Defied Uncle Sam for Twenty Years—Lived Near Plainfield.

The United States Secret Service agents have been for nearly twenty years endeavoring to capture an expert penman who, merely with pen, ink and paper, has made counterfeits of United States bills of large denominations so excellent in execution as almost to defy detection except by an expert.

These pen-and-ink counterfeits have made their appearance from time to time in one or another of the larger cities of the country. The Secret Service men assert that at last they have caught the counterfeiter in the person of Emanuel Ninger, whose home is at Frankfort, formerly Flaggtown. He was taken into custody as a result of the arrest of another man who tried to pass a spurious bill in New York on Saturday last. It is stated that Ninger made $10, $20 and $50 bills as far as back as in 1879. But his latest series consists of $100 bills.

On last Saturday evening Joseph Gilbert attempted to pass a $50 pen and-ink bill in a saloon at 87 Cortlandt street, New York, and was arrested. He said that he was a farmer and came from Wilkesbarre, Pa., to dispose of some Government bonds.

A man who had bought of the bonds, he said, near the Union Trust Company's building, gave him in payment the bogus bill which he had tried to use in the saloon.

Gilbert was closely questioned by Secret Service Agent George Bogg, and finally broke down and betrayed the penman, Ninger, whose arrest followed.

Agent Bogg has received several complaints from persons who have been victimized by means of spurious bills recently, but none of them have been able to identify Gilbert as the man who had swindled them.

So extremely clever has the pen-and-ink work of Ninger been, that bills made by him have been exhibited to visitors at the Treasury Department at Washington, as specimens of the counterfeiter's handiwork. It has been considered that the maker of them might never be captured, unless he should be found actually engaged in the work.

Ninger's home at Flaggtown is a small two-story frame house about a third of a mile from the station of the south branch of the Central Railroad of New Jersey. Yesterday it had the appearance of being deserted. All the blinds were closed. The family consists of Mr. and Mrs. Ninger and four children, three girls, aged 12, 10 and 3 years respectively, and a boy, aged 6 years. The Ningers went to Flaggtown about three years and a half ago from Westfield, where they lived eight or nine years. Previous to that, Mrs. Ninger said they lived in Cincinnati. They own the house at Flaggtown. They paid $1,500 for it when they went there to live.

Mrs. Ninger said yesterday to a New York Sun reporter that she had never suspected that her husband was doing anythingthing wrong. "He would go upstairs," she said, "and stay for a long time without telling me what he was doing. He always gave me money to buy clothes for myself and the children, but not much of it." The ragged garments of the children bore out the last statement.

"He always bought all the meat and groceries at Somerville," Mrs. Ninger said, "so very little money went through my hands. About once a month he would go to New York for a day or two, and would always bring back money, which he said he had made in stock speculation."

The room upstairs in which Ninger spent so much of his time contained two beds, in which the children slept, from which it would appear that Ninger did most of his work during the daytime. The only other furniture in the room yesterday was a small table and a cooking stove.

The people of Flaggtown were much excited over Ninger's arrest, for he had always been regarded as one of the model citizens of the place. The neighbors said that in all their dealings with him he had been honest and peaceable. He always paid cash for everything that he bought, and it is said that on one or two occasions he has tided some of his fellow townsmen over financial difficulties with good-sized loans.

Ninger came to this country from Prinn, Germany, twenty years ago, it is said. There he was a grocery clerk, but he developed a talent for drawing and learned crayon and more intricate work.

—Howell Division, No. 97, Sons of Temperance, will give another entertainment in their new rooms on April 21st.

JAMES MIDDLEDITH INDICTED.

American Tobacco Company Claim That He Circulated False Reports.

At the District Attorney's office in New York this morning it was learned that two brokers, James Middledith, who lives at the corner of Ninth street and Park avenue, this city, and J. T. Kirby, of New York, had been indicted at the instance af the American Tobacco Company, charged with circulating misleading reports about the company. They went to the District Attorney's office this morning attended by their counsel to renew the bail bonds of $2,500 each, which were given by them to Judge Beach last night upon their arrest.

They were indicted by the Grand Jury yesterday upon the complaint of Mr. Einstein, the American Cigarette Company's lawyer. At the District Attorney's office today they were unable to find Assistant District Attorney Battle who drew up the indictments, and therefore soon left the Criminal Courts to return again next Monday. Mr. Middledith sends word to The Press office that he is able to clear himself of all the charges.

A PROSPEROUS CHURCH.

Annual Meeting of the Crescent Avenue Church and Chapels.

The annual meeting of the Crescent Avenue church, Hope, Warren and Bethel chapel was held last evening in the chapels of the church. Rev. Dr. W. R. Richards, the pastor, presided. Reports were read from all the societies in the church and chapels. Each department showed progress and the members were much encouraged. Dr. Murray reported for the Crescent Avenue Sunday-school, Rev. G. K. Newell and H. G. Squires for Hope chapel, and Rev. J. O. McKelvey and L. N. Lovell for Warren chapel. Rev. Mr. Alexander reported for Bethel chapel.

The amount of money received from all sources during the year was reported to be about $28,000.

There has been an increase in membership in the church and chapels, as well as the several societies, and all branches of the work start the new year with increased zeal and love.

L. N. Lovell and John Leal were unanimously re-elected as elders, and Dr. Murray as deacon of the Crescent Avenue church.

The report of the trustees of the chusch was noteworthy, the excellent condition of affairs being a source of encouragement to all.

WARRANT OUT FOR AN OFFICER.

Marshal William Barry Will Face the Charge of Committing an Assault.

The friends of Edward Vanduary, the Frenchman who was arrested and fined $5 by Justice Crosley yesterday for being intoxicated at the Arlington Hotel Tuesday night, are so incensed at the treatment he received at the hands of Special Marshal Wm. Barry, that they went before Justice Mattison and had Vanduary make com plaint against the officer. The Justice issued a warrant for the latter's arrest and placed it in the hands of Constable Stewart. Barry has not yet been arrested. He stated at the trial that any time the authorities wanted him he would appear, and was willing to have the case investigated. He claims he did nothing but his duty, while Vanduary and his friends claim that Barry assaulted the Frenchman. There promises to be a lively time over the affair.

At the recent Conference of the Methodist Episcopal church held in Newark, the Rev. W. P. Ferguson, president of the Hackettstown Seminary, paid a high tribute to the Rev. G. H. Whitney, the former president and a member of the conference. Mr. Whitney is a resident of this city and a son-in-law of P. M. French, of Somerset street.

A Commendable Move.

In the progress of improvements on East Ninth street, the Electric Light Company and the Telephone Company have agreed to place the wires on the same poles, thereby reducing the number of poles one-half. For this improvement both companies are to be commended.

LENTEN SERMON.

Delivered in St. Mary's Church By Rev. J. A. Stafford.

The seventh and last sermon of the Lenten series in St. Mary's church was delivered last evening by Rev. Father Stafford, who was formerly assistant rector of the above-named church, but now vice-president of Seton Hall College, South Orange. As was to be expected, the church was crowded. The speaker took his text from the words of the Psalmist: "What shall I render unto God for all He has rendered unto me." It was a thought we should all take to ourselves. Tomorrow (Holy Thursday) was the anniversary of the institution of the Holy Eucharist, he said, the greatest sacrament in the church, for in that God had left us His own body and blood. He told of how at the time when Christ performed his miracle of the multiplication of the loaves and fishes, when, according to the Scriptures, 5,000 people followed Him into the desert, He turned to them and said "Unless you eat My flesh and drink My blood, you shall not have life in you," they turned their backs on Him and left Him, saying "How can this Man give us His flesh to eat and His blood to drink." Would we do as they did of old, leave our Lord? No, for with the light of faith that is within us, we believe that Jesus Christ is present in our tabernacles, and that in receiving the Holy Eucharist, we receive Him.

Many other teachings of the church were given by the reverend speaker, that are not here enumerated, and the close attention of the congregation showed their appreciation of the truths which he spoke of. All those who heard the sermon were greatly benefited, for one could not but feel encouraged at the words of Father Stafford, who is so beloved by the people of St. Mary's parish.

RAIN STOPS WORK.

The Trolley Building Halted Again on Account of the Weather.

No work has been done on the trolley extension today and the weather was to blame for the delay this time, as it is impossible to continue work when the rain begins to fall. The new trackman arrived safely last night. His name is Nelson Dow and he has been employed in laying track for the last twenty years. He comes here from the Brooklyn Street Railway where he held the position of roadmaster. Superintendent Yarnell expects to begin work tomorrow morning and will keep from one hundred to one hundred and fifty men at work until the extensions are completed.

Though comparatively few know it, the guage on the new portions of the trolley system will be different from that of the present line. The guage now in use is five feet, two and one-half inches wide while the new portions are to be laid at the standard guage, which is used throughout the country. The standard guage is four feet, eight and one-half inches. This will necessitate the changing of all the present tracks, but as only a small portion will be torn up at a time, the cars will simply transfer their passengers around the break. This change in the present system will not be made until the extensions have been completed.

Big Attendance.

One hundred and fifty-four was the average attendance at the young men's meeting at the Y. M. C. A. for the month of March.

During the winter of 1893, F. M. Martin, of Long Reach, West Va., contracted a severe cold which left him with a cough. In speaking of how he cured it he says: "I used several kinds of cough syrup but found no relief until I bought a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, which relieved me almost instantly, and in a short time brought about a complete cure." When troubled with a cough or cold use this remedy and you will not find it necessary to try several kinds before you get relief. It has been in the market for over twenty years and constantly grown in favor and popularity. For sale at 25 and 50 cents per bottle at Armstrong's pharmacy, Park and North avenues.

ALL WERE DELUDED.

EXPECTING TO BE FOOLED, CHURCH WOMEN AGREEABLY SURPRISED.

The Women of the Seventh-Day Baptist Church Give an Entertainment Over to the Men, Who Gave an Elaborate One.

This leap year will be a memorable one in the social life of the Seventh-Day Baptist church and April 1st will be a day long to be remembered. The Ladies' Society for Christian Work of the church planned for social for that night but finally decided that it would be more appropriate to the year to let the men take charge of the sociable. And so it was that the entire management was put in the hands of A. L. and G. B. Titsworth.

The preparations went on, but nobody except the men knew what was coming until last night.

Last night the visitors that came early found the Sunday-school room apparently empty but, after quite a number had arrived, the doors into one of the smaller rooms were thrown open and there were tables groaning with good things, while the smell of delicious coffee pervaded the room. There was a suppressed "Oh!" but nobody moved, for they all remembered that it was April Fools' day. Out came the men in approved waiters' costumes, all wearing white aprons and coats. The visitors were invited to partake, and the delicious appearing crullers and the glorious ginger bread looked oh, how, tempting, but visions of cotton, cayenne pepper and soap loomed up and bid the diners beware. At last some of the bravest took a wee bite, then another larger one, and as no evil effects were to be seen the rest followed, but very carefully.

Everything was good, and that was where the joke came in, for the waiters laughed as they never laughed before, at the surprised faces of their guests, as the dinner proved no "fake" after all.

The seats had all been arranged so that they faced the Central avenue side of the church. A curtain was drawn across the end, behind which a red light could be seen. After all the chairs were filled, the audience was surprised to see the entertainers filing out on to the platform in their rear. There was a general scampering and the chairs had to be turned about, while the men smiled at the way in which their guests had been "sold."

On the platform was seated a chorus composed of Walter McIlroy and Charles H. Angleman, first tenors; Dr. Frank Clawson and R. J. Wright, second tenors; A. L. Titsworth and Robert Gorton, first bassos; Ralph Titsworth and D. E. Titsworth, second bassos. Below, seated on the edge of the platform, was the "fake" orchestra, arranged as at a minstrel show. It consisted of G. B. Titsworth and Harry Maxson, bones; Frank Smith and Frank J. Hubbard, tambos; J. M. Titsworth and W.C Hubbard, banjos; F. D. Randolph and Dr. Marc Clawson, flutes; and F. A. Dunham, guitar. The orchestra never attempted to play.

"One good turn deserves another," remarked D. E. Titsworth, master of ceremonies, as the audience settled down after their sudden move, and then the chorus sang "Juanita" in a very pleasing manner. F. D. Randolph then read a poem on "Leap Year Hints," after which Walter McIlroy, of Brooklyn, sang a tenor solo, "Still as the Night," in a way that greatly delighted his audience, as was shown by the loud applause. Between the different numbers on the programme, D. E. Titsworth and the members of the orchestra cracked jokes and said all sorts of witty things about each other and the prominent men in the church to the great amusement of the listeners.

A quartette, composed of Messrs. McIlroy, Wright, Gerton and D. E Titsworth, then artistically sang the "Pickaninny Lullaby."

G. B. Titsworth next started to explain the number of apples that Adam and Eve ate in the Garden of Eden. He first told how Eve ate (8) and Adam did too (2), which, he said, made 10. He gradually increased the number until he reached 865,052. Eve, he said, when she ate one (81) she ate one too (812) many making 81,812, while Adam ate for to fortify (814,240) himself. As the audience was laughing after these wonderful calculations, D. E. Titsworth remarked that probably all saw the application. After another well-rendered selection by the quartette, J. M. Titsworth read "Two Opinions" by Eugene Field.

A solo by Master Jauregui, soprano soloist at the Cathedral of the Incarnation, Garden City, L. I., was delightfully rendered, and then the chorus pleasingly sang "The Legend of "The Chimes" from "Robin Hood." After a pretty solo by Robert Gorton, the chorus sang the remarkable anthem "Little Tommy Went Fishing." The programme concluded with a "Good Night" selection by the chorus.

During the programme the members of the orchestra took up a collection in frying pans. The audience had been warned, however, and everybody turned in pennies, one man contributing five hundred brand new ones. The collection, which weighed 17¾ pounds, was turned over to Mrs. F. S. Dunham, treasurer of the Ladies Society for Christian Work.

The programme was an excellent one and the humor that appeared now and then seemed to add greatly to the enjoyment. D. E. Titsworth had charge of the musical part of the entertainment and Harry Maxson of the literary part. The decorating was well done under the charge of Robert Gorton and C. S. Dunham. Part of the table decoration deserve special mention. It was apparently a large bouquet, but was made of carrots, beets and turnips cut to represent flowers, by W. J. Stephenson. It was very well done.

The refreshment committee, that cooked and prepared all the good things, consisted of L. T. Rogers, chairman, J. M. Titsworth, and J. P. Mosher. The white coated waiters that assisted them were W. H. Rogers, C. H. Dunham, Will Mosher, G. E. Stillman, Fred Stillman, Asa Randolph, Dr. Marc Clawson, Charles Randolph, Frank Smith and A. J. Spicer. Messrs. Rogers and Dunham remained in the kitchen to look after the coffee. The white aprons were made at a meeting of the men Tuesday night.

Petty Thefts.

A thief last night entered the back yard of Rev. S. P. Simpson, on Watchung avenue, and took a tablecloth from the line on which it was hanging. The article was of no particular value to anyone save Mrs. Simpson, who valued it for its associations. Mr. Simpson tells The Press that if the person who took the tablecloth will return it, a reward will be paid and no questions asked. This is not the first time that Mr. Simpson has been subject to petty thefts of this kind, for only a short time ago he lost several articles in much the same manner.

An Up-to-Date Store.

There are stores and there are stores, but Powlison & Jones, the popular furniture dealers, have certainly one on East Front street that is worthy of a call from all Plainfielders. The building itself, which was built expressly for them, is a model of architecture, while the exhibit inside is equal to the best metropolitan furniture house. The first and second floors are devoted to the handsome display of furniture of all sorts while the repair and upholstery departments occupy the third floor.

Baptism on Easter Day.

A special Easter service will be held in the Mt. Olive Baptist church, Sunday. This is the first time in a number of years that the church has held Easter services in its own place of worship, always in previous years uniting with the First Baptist church. At 2:30 in the afternoon, there will be twenty-three baptisms and the sermon will be preached by Rev. Mr. Cramer, of Philadelphia. Special Easter music has been prepared.

The Engineer to be Notified.

Arrangements are being made whereby the engineer at the city water pumping station will be notified at once when a fire occurs without depending on the whistle, so that he may be prepared for a sudden increase in the amount of water used. A fifteen inch gong, similar to those in the fire department houses, will be connected with the box system and will strike the different calls.

It will be an agreeable surprise to persons subject to attacks of bilious colic to learn that prompt relief may be had by taking Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. In many instances the attack may be prevented by taking this remedy as soon as the first symptoms of the disease appear. 25 and 50c bottles for sale at Armstrong's pharmacy, Park and North avenues.

Booth-Tuckers To Become American Citizens.

LEADERS OF THE SALVATION ARMY

Possibly Led Into This Move To Get Control of the Organization's Property in This Country—Still Hope To Reclaim Ballington.

New York, April 2.—Commander Frederick St. George De La Toure Booth-Tucker, the new head of the Salvation Army in this country, who arrived last evening from Liverpool on the steamer Majestic, was interviewed by a press representative at Salvation Army headquarters this morning. "What will be your policy, commander, in regard to the Volunteers?" was asked. "It will be one of love, not hostility," he answered, "My heart and my head are full of love." "Does Gen. Booth think that Ballington Booth and his new movement are likely to stay in the field for any length of time, or has he expressed to you an opinion regarding the strength of the Volunteer movement in this country?" "Gen. Booth was stabbed to the heart when he heard of Ballington's action, and he really believes that he will be regained to the Salvation Army. He does not think that the new movement will interfere at all with the work of the Salvation Army in this country, but he has not gone into that quite as thoroughly, perhaps, as you might think he had. He is full of hope that Ballington will come back, and many of his prayers lately have been to that end."

Will Become Americans.

"Do you come here with any special instructions regarding your policy in the management of the army?" "No. We intend to enlarge, but not change the present policy. We intend to become Americans, and I am afraid that if I commit any fault, if it is a fault, it will be to become too intensely an American. We have worked in India on Indian lines and our work here will be on American lines." The new leader then said that the general feeling in England was one of intense surprise at Ballington Booth's action. Regarding the transfer of the Salvation army property, he said that he would as soon as possible become nationalized, and that then the property would be turned over to him, in case there was no legal obstruction presented. They were going to work to that end on the advice of consul, he said. He said he would attempt to see Ballington Booth, and hoped he would be successful. He was reminded that his wife had failed, and replied that he would try again, but said that she was the best hand, and was more person grata than he.

HYDE CONVICTED.

The Jury at Buffalo Finds Him Guilty of Murder in Second Degree.

Buffalo, April 2.—"Guilty of murder in the second degree," was the verdict rendered by the jury in the Hyde case late yesterday afternoon, and in those fateful words the prisoner heard his condemnation—a sentence to a living tomb—life imprisonment. The jury was out twenty-one hours. Tuesday night was spent in continuous argument and deliberation, and yet when court opened in the morning an agreement had not been reached. The jury came into court at 10 o'clock and asked for a definition of murder in the second degree and manslaughter in the first degree. The court read the law and the jury again retired. Not a word was heard from them until shortly before 5 o'clock, when they came into court with their verdict. In their slow and solemn tread Hyde appeared to read his doom and his face paled to an ashen hue. When the verdict was announced the prisoner was a study—his eyes closed, his hands clasped convulsively and his head fell upon his breast, a picture of despair.

RHODE ISLAND VOTE

Lippitt, Republican, Elected Governor by About 10,000 Plurality.

PROVIDENCE LOST BY THE DEMOCRATS

No License Movement Defeated Two to One—Republicans Gain Two Members of the Legislature—Democrats Made Little Fight.

Providence, April 2.—Latest corrected returns from the election indicate that Lippitt, rep., is elected governor by almost 10,000 plurality. The city returns were delayed on account of a heavy license vote. The entire republican ticket is elected by slightly reduced pluralities. The campaign was apathetic in the extreme and the democracy made practically no fight. There will be but six democrats in the legislature against eight last year. There was something of a fight against license in this city, but the no license movement was defeated two to one. The entire republican city assembly ticket was elected by over 2,000 plurality. The city went democratic last fall.

HARRY WRIGHT MEMORIAL.

Plans of the Baseball Enthusiasts at Philadelphia Arranged.

Philadelphia, April 2.—At a meeting of the Harry Wright Memorial association yesterday arrangements were completed for the observance of "Harry Wright Day," on April 13, and a committee was appointed trustees of the fund to be raised with which it is intended to erect a monument or other suitable memorial in honor of the great player, manager and umpire chief. The trustees subsequently made arrangements with the Chestnut Street Trust and Saving Fund company to act as custodian of this fund. Those in charge of the various games that will be played throughout the country on "Harry Wright Day" are advised by the trustees that they can either make remittance direct to the trust company or to the trustees. The trustees will from time to time issue statements in the daily papers giving the full amount received and the accounts will be itemized to show exactly the amount netted from each game played. According to reports received by the association from various sections of the country the indications point to the realization of an amount for this fund sufficient to erect a memorial that will not only do justice to the memory of the man who did so much to make baseball America's national game, but also be a lasting tribute of the American people to the great game itself. The memorial game in this city will be between the Philadelphia league club and Manager Sharsig's Athletic club, the state league representative of this city.

NEW YORK'S NEW LIQUOR LAW.

Miss Willard Pleased with It and Also with Lyman's Appointment.

Buffalo, April 2.—Miss Frances E. Willard, head of the temperance workers of the world, delivered an address to a large audience in Concert hall yesterday afternoon, in which she spoke very hopefully of the work of temperance reform. In an interview prior to the meeting she expressed herself as being heartily in favor of the new excise law, which, she says, represents the combined effect of the protest by Christian people against the attempt to root out the American Sunday. She also approves of the appointment of Col. Lyman to be state excise commissioner, and thinks him a man who will conscientiously perform his duty and see to it that the law is vigorously enforced. Miss Willard has just returned from a tour of the south, where, she says, prohibition is conducted wholly by local option and the laws are enforced to a greater extent than in the northern states. Miss Willard left last evening for Churchville, where she will attend a family reunion at the home of her cousin to-day.

DYGART DOOMED.

The Young American May Be Shot as a Prisoner of War.

Havana, April 2.—Walter Dygart, the American prisoner, about whom the senate asked information and about whom the state department wired peremptorily to consult Consul General Williams, is now doomed. The officials now declare the chain of evidence that Dygart intended to join the rebels is complete. Dygart will be treated as a prisoner of war. Three prisoners of war were shot in the Cabanas prison last week, and this may be Dygart's fate, but it is more than likely that he will be deported unless the officials at Washington save him.

NINGER CONFESSES.

Evidence Corroborates the Story of the Arrested Expert Counterfeiter.

Washington, April 2.—Chief Hazen of the secret service has received information from his agent in New York of the arrest of Emanuel Ninger, the maker of one of the most dangerous series of counterfeit notes known to the service. Ninger, it is said, has been engaged since 1879 in the manufacture of $10, $20, $50 and $100 United States notes with the pen and brush of such excellence as to deceive even experts. They therefore were extremely dangerous. Up to within a short time there has been absolutely no clue to either the maker of the notes or the shover, and in spite of the utmost vigilance on the part of the secret service the notes continued to appear periodically at intervals of five or six months. Up to within a year or so Ninger confined himself to $10, $20 and $50 bills, but of late several $100 notes have appeared. He has now, it is reported, made a full confession, and evidence found at his house in Flagtown, N. J., confirms his story. The arrest is regarded as one of the most important in the history of the service.

Will Aid the British Forces.

Pretoria, April 2.—The report current here that the government of the Transvaal will offer to Sir Hercules Robinson, governor of Cape Colony, the assistance of the burgher forces against the Matabeles has been officially confirmed. The assistance offered will extend to the protection of the women and children in Matabeleland.

In Pursuit of Murderous Apaches.

San Simon, A. T., April 2.—A detachment of U. S. cavalry under Lieut. Rice and a party of cowboys are in pursuit of a murderous band of Apaches who savagely killed Alfred Hands, a settler, by stoning him and mutilating him when alive, then robbing his home and destroying everything they did not want or could not carry off.

The Flood at Albany.

Albany, April 2.—The freshet at Albany is assuming big proportions once more but it is not expected that much damage will result. The eastern portion of the big ice gorge at Stockport is broken and this means much to the merchants at Albany, as it is looked upon as a guarantee that no very high water need be expected.

Passengers on the Majestic.

New York, April 2.—Among the passengers arriving per White Star Majestic from Liverpool and Queenstown were John H. Parnell, M. P., brother of the late Charles Stewart Parnell; W. W. Astor, Miss Astor, W. Astor and Master J. Astor. Commander Booth-Tucker was a second cabin passenger.

Coughs,

 Consumption.

The greatest cause of terror of the present day, formerly considered hopeless, is now conceded by the best physicians as curable under proper conditions. Its cause—a depleted condition of the system; a mal-assimilation of food; a wasting away of the tissues; an impoverishment of the blood. The result—a diseased condition of all the organs of the body; a formation of eating ulcers; and the result death from collapse or hemorrhage. But the cure is that greatest concentration into the least possible bulk of the vital elements of lean, raw beef. It is absorbed and nourishes with the least possible effort on the part of the stomach. It creates new tissue, enriches the blood, makes flesh, and by strengthening the great vital centres of the body enables them to perform their functions in a natural manner, and dispel disease. Thousands owe their life to its use.

Your Spring Clothing

Rather early to speak of it, but if it needs cleaning or dyeing, it isn't too early to have us do that work for you. This is our dull season—our employes are here ready for work. We'd like to have your goods now. We can give them better attention than in the rush of the spring season. Then we'll have to have more time or rush them at the expense of good work. Now we can take our time, do the work better than if hurried and you'll have the clothing all ready for warm weather.

Look in the closet or trunk and find your spring wear that needs cleaning and dyeing and bring it to us now, or better still, our wagon will call for it if you will send us word.

BISMARCK FATIGUED

Birthday Celebration Too Much for the Aged Ex-Chancellor.

HIS PHYSICIAN NOW AT HIS SIDE

Many Touching Incidents at the Review at Friedrichsruhe Last Evening—Women Sobbed and Men Cheered as They Listened to His Remarks.

Friedrichsruhe, April 2.—Prince Bismarck is greatly fatigued to-day as the result of his participation in the birthday celebration yesterday and his physician, Dr. Schweninger is at his side and will allow no visitors or cards to be presented to him. It was against the physician's advice that the aged ex-chancellor reviewed the torchlight procession last night, and after the prince retired to his chamber a mild anasthetic and tonic was given him to produce sleep.

Women Sobbed, Men Cheered.

As the procession passed the old prince there were many touching scenes. He reviewed the marchers standing upon the palace terrace attired in the uniform of a cuirassier, over which he wore a gray cloak. The ladies, a large number of whom were present, threw flowers to the ex-chancellor and expressed a desire to shake his hand, but were prevented from doing so by Dr. Schweninger. Before retiring from the terrace Prince Bismarck, uncovering his head, said, in a trembling voice: "My body is unable to stand long fatigues," and added in faltering tones, "My heart goes out with you." At this the women sobbed and the men cheered and shouted: "Wiedersehen!" "Wiedersehen!" and these cries were continued until the last of the crowd had taken their departure.

Lost Much Good Will.

The prince made only a short address to the assemblage last night. He quoted the words of Martin Luther that "the good will of one's neighbors is a necessity for a German Christian." He rejoiced, he said, that his Hamburg neighbors had preserved for him their good will and grace, although he had lost the good will of the people in many places. He was glad, too, that they were not ashamed to display their kind feeling for him and saw in that expression an acknowledgment of his former deeds. He rejoiced that Hamburg had flourished, finding in its progress a proof that its hinterland was in a good state. No maritime emporium, he declared, could prosper without a prosperous hinterland. The ex-chancellor dwelt upon the interests of the professional, mercantile and agrarian classes, which, he said, were inter-dependent and all worked in the common cause. If one declined the others would not prosper. He hoped that Hamburg would continue to prosper, for the sake of his own interest as a farmer, even though he was not a passionate agrarian. Hearty laughter greeted this remark and when this had subsided Prince Bismarck called for cheers for Hamburg, which were heartily given.

SUPPLIES FOR CUBANS.

Another Big Expedition About To Sail from Florida.

Key West, Fla., April 2.—The largest expedition that has ever been equipped for the insurgents is now being silently arranged in this vicinity. Angel Figuerdo, general manager for the insurgents stationed at this port, has made several trips up the coast during the past few weeks and returned last night from Biscayne bay. Large quantities of arms and munitions of war have been smuggled out of the city on the schooners Dollie and Pearl. Last night the schooner Martha, owned by J. F. Horr, ex-collector of customs, left for Biscayne, with a full cargo of arms and ammunition which are intended to be transferred to some steamer.

MUST VACATE THE OFFICE.

Gov. Hughes of Arizona Receives a Peremptory Notice from the President.

Washington, April 2.—The interior department authorities, upon receipt of a telegram from Secretary of State Bruce of Arizona, that Gov. Hughes refused to vacate his office, sent this telegram to Gov. Hughes: "You have been removed from the office of governor of Arizona. The president directs that you turn over the office to the secretary at once." This telegram was sent to Secretary of State Bruce: "Mr. Hughes has been removed as governor. The president directs that you take possession of the office as acting governor under the law."

Farm House and Barns Burned.

Red Bank, N. J., April 2.—The large farm house and barns belonging to "Uncle Jolie" Field, located near this place, were burned last evening. Some of the furniture in the house was saved. The barns burned so rapidly that nothing could be removed from them. Four horses were burned to death together with a large quantity of farm machinery.

Confederate Disabilities Removed.

Washington, April 2.—The president has approved the bill to repeal certain provisions of the revised statutes relating to the appointment of officers in the army and navy of the United States. This is the measure removing the disabilities of United States army and navy officers who served under the confederate government.

Massachusetts To Use Voting Machines.

Boston, April 2.—The committee on elections, in the senate yesterday, reported unanimously in favor of the bill authorizing cities and towns to use the McTammany voting machin in state, city and town elections.

IN HOUSE AND SENATE.

Political Interjections Vary the Monotony of Routine Business.

Washington, April 2.—It is among the strong probabilities that the sundry civil appropriation bill will be disposed of by the house either late this afternoon or to-morrow. Congressmen Bingham, rep., Pa., and Hainer, rep., Neb., desire to amend the bill, and the offering of their amendments, their speeches and the discussion sure to ensue will occupy the house almost the whole day. The entire bill has been completed with the exception of the provision for the bureau of engraving and printing. The discussion of the bill was interrupted several times by political interjections. Congressman Grosvenor, rep., O., charged the Wilson tariff law with being responsible for the condition of the treasury, which, he said, prevented many necessary appropriations from being made. Congressman Patterson, dem., Tenn., replied, charging the onus of the present condition upon the republican party and that gentleman's particular champion, William McKinley. In this matter, Congressman Patterson said, in answer to a question, that he appeared as the representative of the administration, of Grover Cleveland. Congressman Bowers, rep., Cal., referring to the attack upon silver men, read a series of burlesque resolutions declaring the silver representatives dangerous cranks who should be expelled. He asserted, with much heat, that silver miners and mine owners had as good a right to be represented on the floor of the house for the benefit of their interests as had manufacturers and bankers.

In the Senate.

As Senator George again yesterday afternoon occupied nearly the entire time of the senate by his speech against the seating of Mr. Dupont as a senator from the state of Delaware (and had not finished at adjournment), Senator Peffer will, if Senator George closes his remarks, make another attempt this afternoon to bring up his resolution directing an investigation into all the circumstances of the recent issues of bonds by the government. The Cuban joint resolution introduced by Senator Call yesterday, which was laid on the table, will probably be called up for consideration this afternoon. It recites, by way of preamble, the continual violation of the usages and rules of war by the Spaniards in Cuba and directs that an adequate naval force shall be immediately sent to that island to protect United States citizens there by force, if necessary, and it threatens forcible intervention in case of a recurrence of murder, outrage or putting to death of prisoners of war. The amendment to the post-office appropriation bill providing for additional compensation for carrying the mails between San Francisco and New Zealand and New South Wales will be considered to-day, when Senator Vila will continue his opposition to it. With this exception, the entire bill has been disposed of.

BEVERLY'S LABOR TROUBLE.

The Strike of the Shoe Employes as Yet Unsettled.

Beverly, Mass., April 2.—The labor trouble in the factory of Babb, Williams & Douglass, manufacturers of misses' and children's shoes is still unsettled. On Saturday last the employes were notified that the shop would be shut down on Monday, but would be opened on Tuesday. When the employes of the making room appeared ready for work an entirely new price list for all kinds of work in this department—lasting, bottom finishing, edge trimming, beating out and other kinds immediately connected with these branches was submitted. This list called for a cut-down of from 20 to 30 per cent. on all grades of work. The employes of this room refused to work at these prices. No attempt was made to reduce the wages of the stitching or cutting rooms.

MARCH TREASURY STATEMENT.

Receipts Were $26,041,149 and Expenditures Were $27,274,993.

Washington, April 2.—The treasury official statement of receipts and expenditures for the month of March shows, cents omitted: Receipts—Customs, $13,344,215; internal revenue, $11,536,264; miscellaneous, $1,160,668. Total, $26,041,149. Expenditures—Civil and miscellaneous, $6,782,825; war, $3,477,914; navy, $2,305,774; Indians, $2,326,141; pensions, $11,709,996; interest, $672,342. Total, $27,274,993. Since the beginning of the present fiscal year the receipts have amounted to $250,699,840, and the expenditures to $269,360,542.

IN FAVOR OF KNAPP.

A Provision in the Will of His Father Legally Set Aside.

Bridgeport, Conn., April 2.—Judge Wheeler of the superior court yesterday decided in favor of James K. Knapp of Hartford, in his appeal to the court to have set aside a provision of the will of his father, Andrew Knapp of Norwalk, who died a few years ago. The elder Knapp left the plaintiff $30,000 in stock in a hat business in Norwalk, but required him to pay his mother $500 per year for a period of ten years. No obligation was placed on the other heirs. The widow and Edward M. Layton, executor of the estate, have filed an appeal.

Field Sports Postponed.

Philadelphia, April 2.—The spring track and field sports of the University of Pennsylvania were to have been held yesterday, but owing to the inclement weather they were postponed until April 8.

New Yorks Home from Florida.

New York, April 2.—The New York baseball team arrived home from Florida yesterday. All the men appear to be in fine condition.

DENIES ALL CALLERS

Gen. Harrison Too Busy Preparing for His Marriage.

EX-SECRETARY TRACY BEST MAN

St. Thomas' Church To Be Handsomely Decorated—Bride's Gown a Marvel—Only Relatives and Intimate Friends Invited.

New York, April 2.—Gen. Harrison who arrived in this city last evening accompanied by his private secretary and D. M. Ramsdall, formerly marshal of the District of Columbia, to prepare for his marriage to Mrs. Dimmick next Monday, could not be seen at his hotel, the Fifth Avenue, this morning. Last night he called on Mrs. Dimmick and remained until 10 o'clock, when he returned to the hotel and denied himself to all callers. The floral decorations at St. Thomas' church, where the marriage will be celebrated, will, it is understood, be on a magnificent scale. Where the honeymoon will be spent has not been learned, but the couple will make Indianapolis their home. A greater part of the summer will be spent at Saratoga at the cottage of Gen. Harrison's daughter, Mrs. McKee. Only a few invitations for the wedding have been issued and these to relations and very intimate friends of Gen. Harrison and Mrs. Dimmick. The bride's gown is said to be a marvel of beauty and elegance. It was made in this city and not abroad as has been stated. Members of Gen. Harrison's family are expected to arrive in the city to-morrow evening or Saturday. Gen. Benjamin F. Tracy of Brooklyn will act as best man and Lieut. J. F. Parker of the cruiser New York, will give the bride away.

BRCOKLYN'S FATAL FIRE.

Police Believe It Was of Incendiary Origin—An Arrest Expected To-day.

Brooklyn, N. Y., April 2.—It is believed by the police that the fire at 36 Union street, yesterday by which ten persons, all Italians, lost their lives, was of incendiary origin, and they expect to make an arrest some time to-day. The buildings were veritable death traps. Why the building department permitted the erection of the buildings without proper means for the escape of the tenants in case of fire is a matter that will form part of the investigation that is to be made. There were two ways for the seventeen tenants to escape. One by the stairs and the other by the fire escape. The fire escape was so constructed that a fire in the halls of the house would make the fire escape useless. The fire escape was only a ladder eighteen inches wide and made of half-inch round iron. It ran up the rear of the house at the end of the halls. A window opened out to it on each floor. As soon as the stairs and halls were on fire the flames leaped out through these windows and licked the iron ladder. The ladder was so fastened to the wall of the house that even under the most favorable circumstances it would be extremely dangerous for a person to use it as a means of descent, especially a woman or anyone suffering from vertigo. So easy was it for the flames to communicate with the fire escape that in less than ten minutes after they were discovered, and before the tenants could escape, the iron rungs on the side were red hot from the second floor to the roof. All of the bodies of those who perished were charred and blackened beyond recognition.

ARMENIAN RELIEF.

An Appeal for the Money Usually Spent for Flowers at Easter.

New York, April 2.—The Armenian Relief association has cabled $3,000 to Miss Clara Barton, through the Constantinople committee, being the amount raised by the citizens of Newark, N. J., at a mass meeting held on behalf of Armenia in that city. It is the largest collection raised at any one meeting. A cablegram just received from W. W. Peet, treasurer of the Constantinople committee, says: "We have a quarter of a million people on our lists in seventeen distributing centers. We must buy seed to secure future harvests, and daily rations must also be kept up to save the people from starvation. The urgency is extreme." The New York Woman's auxiliary of the Armenian Relief association has issued an appeal to the churches, asking that the money usually spent for flowers at Easter be appropriated for the relief of the starving, as a more acceptable Easter offering.

Charges Dismissed.

Holyoke, Mass., April 2.—Mayor Curran has dismissed the charges made against chairman E. S. Waters of the license commission. Mayor Curran is a democrat and Mr. Waters is a republican. It is alleged that it was the intention of those making the charges to have Mr. Waters removed from the commission in order that there might be a new deal in licenses.

For Reed or McKinley.

Manchester, N. H., April 2.—At the republican district convention, held here yesterday, delegates were chosen to represent the district at the national convention in St. Louis. The convention adopted resolutions favoring either Reed or McKinley.

Fire Insurance Company Assigns.

Philadelphia, April 2.—The Real Estate Mutual Fire Insurance company made an assignment for the benefit of its creditors late yesterday afternoon to Theodore W. Stone.

Influx of Immigrants Continues.

New York, April 2.—Four steamers from European ports arrived at Quarantine yesterday afternoon bringing a total of 2,307.

WEATHER INDICATIONS.

Fair Tonight and Friday; Colder Friday Morning.

At 2 o'Clock Leggett's Thermometer Registered 51 Degrees.

The promoters of the amateur circus at Orange are in sore straits. No individual seems willing to accept the clownship of the show, and what is a circus without a clown? It is no circus at all.

Ex-Senator Frederick C. Marsh has accepted the Democratic Mayorality nomination of Elizabeth, and says he is going in to win. That's right. Elizabeth is nominally a Democratic city, and a popular man like Mr. Marsh ought to succeed.

The resignation of Hon. E. F. C. Young as Chairman of the Democratic State Committee leaves vacant an important post in the Democratic politics of New Jersey. The Press ventures to suggest as a fit selection for that responsible position, Hon. W. J. Keys, of Somerset county, a gentleman of character, dignity, and personal honesty.

The above, from the Plainfield Press, is very complimentary to our ex-Senator, but we are in a position to state that Mr. Keys is not a candidate for the Chairmanship, and would not accept if elected thereto. It is said that Gen. Donnelly, of Trenton, will be asked to fill the vacancy.—Somerville Messenger.

The fact that ex-Senator Marsh and Mayor Rankin are personal friends, and that the former, as County Prosecutor of Pleas, will prosecute Mr. Rankin's charges of libel against Editor Reiner, should combine to make the approaching municipal campaign in Elizabeth a clean one, so far as the argument and work of two candidates and their friends are concerned. In view of the fact that the city has just passed through a era of villification and consequent disgrace which, under the ordinary condition of politics, would now become more aggravated if other than these two men had been pitted against each other, the city is particularly fortuis the two dominant party selections.

Governor Griggs makes a new interpretation of the right of the Executive to hold bills after the adjournment of the Legislature. He says he is not at all controlled by five days or thirty days, but that he can hold bills and sign them from now until the next Legislature meets. The law which required bills to be signed within thirty days has been repealed, so that has opened to more or less controversy and doubt; and the Governor's version is that as the Constitution is indefinite on the subject, he has all the time that he wants to consider measures; but he does not propose to hold bills any longer than is necessary to read and compare them, excepting bills where there is likely to be a demand for a hearing.

When a man essays to impose on Uncle Sam, the old man doesn't say much, but what a lot of thinking and work he does. His chin whiskers may resemble spinach, his coat may be a hundred years behind the style, his pants of the high water variety; and general demeanor that of simplicity and meekness, like unto that of the Jersey commuter whom the metropolitan newspaper delights to burlesque, but beware! the old man is an apt illustration of "appearances are deceiving." That is what Emanuel Ninger, the expert counterfeiter, whose arrest and work is detailed in another column of today's Press, has found out. And thus it was with old man Brockway, who, a short time ago, was given a sentence that practically amounts to life imprisonment for a similar crime. Men of their ilk defy the wary old man for years, but retribution comes, and as slow as it has been, it comes with that increased force which makes it all the more severe.

—A special meeting of Central Lodge, No. 48, will be held at 7:30 tonight in Red Men's Hall, to take action on the death of the late E. B. Lamb.

It is not a miracle. It wont cure everything, but it will cure piles. That's what DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve will do, because it has done it in hundreds of cases. For sale by L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

A PASTOR SURPRISED.

Rev. Mr. Alexander Made the Recipient of Many Presents.

The members of Bethel chapel gave their pastor, Rev. W. H. Alexander, a complete surprise last evening, after the annual meeting held at the Crescent Avenue church. Two of the members waited for him at the church and escorted him to Bethel chapel, where he found a large gathering of members and friends who had assembled to enjoy a social time. The affair was what might be termed a donation party, for those present had not failed to remember their pastor. They brought everything needful to him and his family, consisting principally of eatables.

Mr. Alexander was very thankful for the kind manner in which he had been treated. A short time was spent in sociability and when the guests departed they all wished their pastor and his family prosperity and happiness.

PROFITS OF THE MINSTRELS.

The Crescent Wheelmen Settle Up Several of Their Liabilites.

At a meeting of the entertainment committee of the Crescent Wheelmen last night to hear reports on their minstrels it was found that out of the $700 receipts the club would net about $420.

Immediately after the entertainment committee had adjourned a meeting of the Board of Directors was held, when the profits of the minstrels were immediately paid out in liquidating a number of debts. Fifty dollars was paid on each of the two notes, $80 for rent and a number of other accounts were also straightened up. The club will probably not keep the building which they now occupy any longer than the first of July, when their lease expires.

Of the deaths, four were between eighty and ninety years of age, eight between sixty and seventy, seven between seventy and eighty. The death rate of 11.62 is the lowest of any town along the Central Railroad.

William E. Seaman, of Rahway, was stopped on Central avenue, near the Ripley House, in Westfield, Monday night about 10 o'clock, by a couple of tramps who demanded money. He struck his horse with a whip and dashed away from the highwaymen. When he attempted to check the horse he found that one of the reins had been cut by the man who stepped up to the horse's head. He could not stop the animal with the one rein, but let it run. When the horse finally came to a stop Seaman repaired the harness and went back to look for the men who stopped him; but they had disappeared.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the eustachian tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube be restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give one hundred dollars for any case of deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

Judges Kenny and Hoffman Report for Duty.—Will Contest.

Former Lay Judges Kenny and Hoffman, of Hudson County, yesterday reported for duty, notwithstanding the fact that the law abolishing their offices went into effect on Tuesday.

He was answered in the negative. A like answer was made to Mr. Kenny. The clerk was directed to make note of the fact that they had been refused recognition.

The breath of a chronic caterrh patient is often so offensive that he becomes an object of disgust. After a time ulceration sets in, the spongy bones are attacked, and frequently destroyed. A constant source of discomfort is the dripping of the purulent secretions into the throat sometimes producing inveterate bronchitis which has been the exciting cause of pulmonary disease. The brilliant results by its use for years past properly designate Ely's Cream Balm as by far the best and only cure.

OPPOSITE MUSIC HALL.

PERSONAL AND LI[illegible]

—Eleonora Duse has received [illegible] honor of the medal for art[illegible] from the king of Sweden. She also received the king's photograph with his autograph, but earned it by listening to King Oscar while he played and sang to her a ballad of his own composition.

—Mrs. Langtry's daughter attracts much attention at the Niagara, London's new and fashionable skating-rink, where she is frequently seen. Her skill on the ice is more than ordinary, and her beauty rivals that possessed by her mother in the days when the phrase "Jersey Lily" was invented.

—Guy de Maupassant's mother, to whom he left 10,000 francs a year by his will, recently applied to have the will set aside on the ground of mental incapacity, as she would have received much more if he had died intestate. As the will was made long before the novelist broke down, she lost her case.

—One of the best whist players in this country is Mrs. Lucia Runkle, who is also a literary worker. She is a wonderfully good player, with a young daughter who is growing up to be no less remarkable in that respect. Mr. Runkle was celebrated for his proficiency in whist, and his only child has had the advantage of constant practice with both parents.

—Cornelius Vanderbilt was elated the other day because he was able to eat a few stewed oysters and not be distressed. Mr. Vanderbilt for years has suffered from acute dyspepsia and has been pleased enough when a bit of graham cracker and a sip of malted milk did not bring agony to him. The gentleman who told of Mr. Vanderbilt's happiness over the stewed oysters remarked that they were as much of a feast to him as a great course dinner and wines galore would be to a tramp.

—An English paper revives an old story about Artemus Ward. When he was in London he gave a children's party. One of John Bright's sons was invited and returned home radiant. "Oh, papa," he explained upon being asked whether he had enjoyed himself, "indeed I did! And Mr. Browne gave me such a nice name for you, papa." "What was that?" "Why, he asked me how that gay and festive cuss, the governor, was," replied the boy.

—Alfred Austin, Salisbury's poet-laureate, is called "an estimable little bardling" by the Saturday Review, and it declares that Lord Salisbury, in making the appointment "has fitted the fool's cap on his own head for all time." The office of laureate, says the Review, was "felt by Tennyson himself to be as much an anachronism as the office of court fool, and he did not hesitate in private to condemn it, and to express his sense of the ignominy of the position."

HUMOROUS.

—Mrs. Ferry—"Did you never learn any trade?" Perry Pattettie—"Yes'm. I'm what might be called a practical geologist, though I don't work at it only when I git sent to the rock pile."—Indianapolis Journal.

—"Can't I interest you in accident insurance to-day?" "No, sir; I'm in no need of it." "Excuse me; I understood you were learning to play the violin!" —Yonkers Statesman.

Hoax—"Jagley claims to have written a play that will make everybody talk." Joax—"Heavens! What's he done that for? The box parties alone are bad enough now."—Philadelphia Record.

—Flathunter (who hates dogs)—"Do you allow your tenants to keep dogs?" Landlord (on the wrong scent)—"Well, yes, sometimes." Flathunter—"That settles it; I won't take the flat."—N. Y. Tribune.

—"Isn't that Miss Smedley? I thought she was sick. Somebody told me Dr. Pankey had given her up." "Well, he did sort o' give her up, but not till after he had tried five or six years to get her."—Chicago Tribune.

—"What do you mean by saying I wrote tramp jokes? You know I deal with nothing but society subjects." "I didn't say you wrote tramp jokes. I said your jokes were on the bum." "Oh!"—Indianapolis Journal.

—Uncle Josh—"I ain't sure whether eddication done me any good or not. Mebbe I'd a done better if I didn't know how to read or write." Aunt Samantha—"How so?" Uncle Josh—"Well, I wouldn't a read any 'Hints to Farmers.'"—Brooklyn Life.

—An Austin youth whose income is not quite as extensive as that of Vanderbilt's got a large ink spot on his coat. He asked a friend how the stain could be removed. "You can get a chemical preparation for 25 cents. Just soak the spot with it, and it will come out." "I guess I had better soak the whole coat. I can get four dollars that way." —Texas Siftings.

—"I'm goin' to tell my pa on you." said Johnny Smithers, as the blacksmith pared some of the horn away from the horse's hoof. "Why? What have I done?" asked the blacksmith. "You ain't got shoes to fit Dobbin, an' you're whittlin' off his feet to suit those you have got."—Harper's Round Table.

"When Quality Meets, Compliments Pass."

Judge Jones was a southern gentleman of the old school, and had been a gallant in his day. Old age did not find him forgetful of his gallantry, but with increasing years memory played strange tricks with his recognition of names and faces. On this point the judge was sensitive. One day he met at a reception a young woman who at once came up to him with outstretched hand and smiling face. To save his soul, the old man could not recall her.

"Why, Judge Jones," exclaimed the lady, "you have forgotten me, and I met you only two years ago!"

"On the contrary, madam," bowed the courtly judge, vainly racking his memory the while, "on the contrary, I have been striving for two years to forget you."—Harper's Magazine.

Advice about the Treatment of Coughs and Colds.

Constitutional Treatment to Prevent the Recurrence of These Dangerous Ailments.

A person may be very wealthy and yet not be inclined to give away any of his property. Lawyers who have great knowledge of the law are not noted for giving service for nothing. Physicians are known to be generous to the poor, yet they will not serve everybody free. Even the wealthy railroad companies, who could so easily and quickly carry us to our distant friends, will not do so without first receiving our dollars and cents. But there is one thing everybody has and everybody is anxious to give some of it to everybody else. We mean, advice. It is so cheap, and we never miss what we give away. Therefore, we follow the custom and give you some advice.

Do not neglect your cold. You may need no medicine for it, but do not neglect it. When first taken, try and break it up. Take a hot foot-bath; drink a bowl full of hot lemonade or ginger tea, get into bed, cover up well, and let the body perspire. Be very careful the next day. If the cold hangs on, or if one cold quickly follows another, then something more is needed. Constitutional treatment is necessary. This is especially true if your health is frail, or if there is a tendency to weak lungs in the family. Sore throats and colds inflame the delicate membrane which lines the throat, and which continues directly down into the bronchial tubes and lungs. One attack predisposes to another, and a slight attack invites another more serious. The best preventive to serious lung affections is to keep all the air passages in a healthy condition. Therefore, do not neglect an acute cough or cold. This is our advice, which is given freely.

But it will cost you fifty cents to procure a small bottle, and one dollar for a large bottle, of the remedy we recommend, which is Scott's Emulsion of Cod-liver Oil and Hypophosphites. It cures acute attacks, and thus prevents chronic ones. It builds up the tissues, invigorates the nervous system, and prepares the body to resist disease. The system only needs some such aid at the right time in order to completely master the germs of consumption, preventing them gaining a firm foothold in the lungs. One bottle taken in season will often accomplish as much as five bottles taken later.

Scott's Emulsion has been indorsed by the medical profession for twenty years. Ask your doctor. Because it is always palatable—always uniform—always contains the purest Norwegian Cod-liver Oil and Hypophosphites. Insist on Scott's Emulsion with trademark of man and fish. Put up in 50c. and $1.00 sizes. The small size may be enough to cure your cough or help your baby.

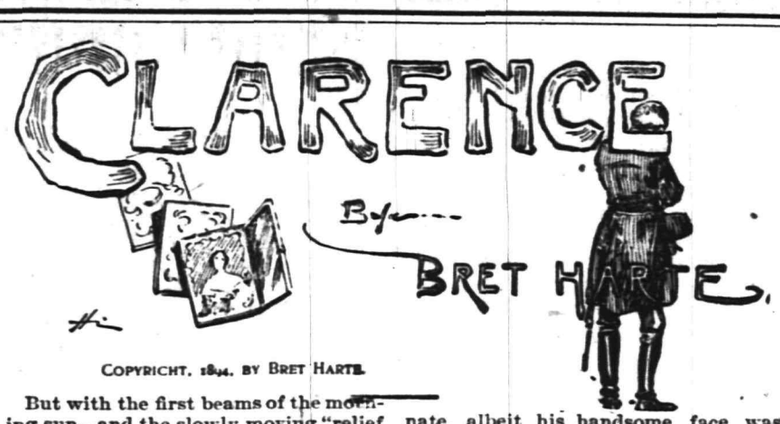
CLARENCE

By BRET HARTE.



COPYRIGHT, 1894, BY BRET HARTE.

But with the first beams of the morning sun—and the slowly moving "relief detail" from the camp—came a weird half resurrection of that ghastly field. Then it was that the long rays of sunlight, streaming many a mile beyond the battle line, first pointed out the harvest of the dead where the reserves had been posted. There they lay in heaps and piles, killed by solid shot or bursting shells that had leaped the battle line to plunge into the waiting ranks beyond. As the sun lifted higher its beams fell within the range of musketry fire where the dead lay thicker—even as they had fallen when killed outright—with arms extended, and feet at all angles to the field. As it touched these dead upturned faces, strangely enough it brought out no expression of pain nor anguish, but rather as if death had arrested them only with surprise and awe. It revealed on the lips of those who had been mortally wounded and had turned upon their side the relief which death had brought their suffering, sometimes even with a smile. Mounting higher, it glanced upon the actual battle line, curiously curving for the shelter of walls, fences and breastworks—and here the dead lay, even as when they had lain and fired, their faces prone in the grass, but their muskets still resting across the breastworks. Exposed to grape and canister from the battery on the ridge, death had come to them mercifully also—through the head and throat. And now the whole field lay bare in the sunlight—broken with grotesque shadows cast from sitting, crouching, half-recumbent, but always rigid, figures, that might have been effigies of their own monuments. One half-kneeling soldier, with head bowed between his stiffened hands, might have stood for a carven figure of grief at the feet of his dead comrade. A captain shot through the brain in the act of mounting a wall lay sideways half across it, his lips parted with the word of command, and the sword still pointing over the barrier the way that they should go.

But it was not until the sun had mounted higher that it struck the central horror of the field and seemed to linger there in dazzling persistence, now and then returning to it in startling flashes, that it might be seen of men and those who brought succor. A tiny brook had run obliquely near the battle line. It was here that the night before the battle friend and foe had filled their canteens side by side with soldierly recklessness, or perhaps a higher instinct, purposely ignoring each other's presence; it was here that the wounded had afterwards crept, crawled and dragged themselves, here they had pushed, wrangled, striven and fought for a draft of that precious fluid which assuaged the thirst of their wounds—or happily put them out of their misery forever; here, overborne, crushed, suffocated by numbers, pouring their own blood into the flood and tumbling after it with their helpless bodies, they dammed the stream, until, recoiling, red and angry, it had burst its banks and overflowed the cotton field in a brave pool now sparkling in the sunlight. But below this human dam—a mile away—where the brook still crept sluggishly, the ambulance horses sniffed and started from it.

The detail moved on slowly, doing their work expeditiously and apparently callously, but really only with that mechanical movement that saves emotion. Only once were they moved to an outbreak of indignation—the discovery of the body of an officer whose pockets were turned inside out, but whose hand was still tightly grasped on his buttoned waistcoat, as if resisting the outrage that had been done while still in life. As the men disengaged the stiffened hand, something slipped from the waistcoat to the ground. The corporal picked it up and handed it to his officer. It was a sealed packet. The officer received it with the carelessness which long experience of those pathetic missives from the dying to their living relations had induced, and dropped it in the pocket of his tunic, with the half dozen others that he had picked up that morning, and moved on with the detail. A little further on they halted in the attitude of attention as a mounted officer appeared riding slowly down the line.

There was something more than the habitual respect of their superior in their faces as he came forward. For it was the general who had commanded the brigade the day before—the man who leaped with one bound into the forward rank of military leaders. It was his invincible spirit that had led the advance, held back defeat against overwhelming numbers, sustained the rally, impressed his subordinate officers with his own undeviating purpose, and even impressed among them an almost superstitious belief in his destiny of success. It was this man who had done what was deemed impossible to do—what even at this time it was thought unwise and unstrategic to do—who had held a weak position, of apparently no importance, under the mandate of an incomprehensible order from his superior—which at best only asked for a sacrifice and was rewarded with a victory. He had decimated his brigade, but the wounded and dying had cheered him as he passed, and the survivors had pursued the enemy until the bugle called them back. For such a record he looked still too young and even effeminate, albeit his handsome face was dark and serious and his manner taciturn.

His quick eye had already caught sight of the rifled body of the officer and contracted. As the captain of the detail saluted him he said curtly:

"I thought the orders were to fire upon anyone desecrating the dead?"

"They are, general, but the hyenas don't give us a chance. That's all yonder poor fellow saved from their claws," replied the officer as he held up the sealed packet. "It has no address."

The general took it, examined the envelope, thrust it into his belt and said: "I will take charge of it."

The sound of horses' hoofs came from the rocky roadside beyond the bush. Both men turned. A number of field officers were approaching. "The division staff," said the captain, in a lower voice, falling back.

They came slowly forward, a central figure on a gray horse leading here, as in history. A short, thick-set man with a grizzled beard closely cropped around an inscrutable mouth, and the serious formality of a respectable country deacon in his aspect, which even the single star on the shoulder-strap of his loose tunic and his soldierly seat in the saddle could not entirely obliterate He had evidently perceived the general of the brigade and quickened his horse as the latter drew up. The staff followed more leisurely, but still with some curiosity to witness the meeting of the first general of the army with the latest. The division general saluted, but almost instantly withdrew his leather gauntlet, and offered his bared hand to the brigadier. The words of the heroes are scant. The drawn-up detail, the waiting staff listened. This was all they heard.

"Hullock tells me you're from California!"

"Yes, general."

"Ah! I lived there too in the early days. Wonderful country. Developed greatly since my time, I suppose."

"Great resources. Finest wheat-growing country in the world, sir. You don't happen to know what the actual crop was this year?"

"Hardly, general, but something enormous."

"Yes, I always said it would be. Have a cigar?"

He handed his cigar case to the brigadier. Then he took one himself, lighted it at the smouldering end of the one he had taken from his mouth, was about to throw the stump carelessly down, but suddenly recollecting himself leaned over his horse and dropped it carefully a few inches from the face of a dead soldier. Then straightening himself in the saddle he shoved his horse against the brigadier, moving him a little farther on, while a slight movement of his hand kept the staff from following.

"A heavy loss here!"

"I'm afraid so, general."

"It couldn't be helped. We had to rush in your brigade to gain time, and occupy the enemy until we could change front."

The young general looked at the shrewd, cold eyes of his chief. "Change front!" he echoed.

"Yes. Before a gun was fired it appeared that the enemy was in complete possession of all our plans, and knew every detail of our formed movements. All had to be changed."

The younger man now instantly understood the incomprehensible order of the day before. The general of division continued, with his first touch of official formality: "You understand, therefore, Gen. Brant, that in the face of this extraordinary treachery the utmost vigilance is required, and a complete surveillance of your camp followers and civilians to detect the actual spy within our lines or the traitor we are harboring who has become possessed of this information. You will overhaul your brigade, and weed out all suspects, and in the position which you are to take to-morrow and the plantation you will occupy, you will see that your private quarters, as well as your lines, are cleared of all but those you care much for." He reined in his horse, again extended his hand, saluted and rejoined his staff.

Brig. Gen. Clarence Brant remained for a moment with his head bent in admiring contemplation of the coolness of his veteran chief, under this exciting disclosure, and the strategy with which he had frustrated the traitors' success. Then his eye caught the sealed packet in his belt. He mechanically drew it out and broke the seal. The envelope was filled with paper and memorandums. As he glanced at them his face darkened and his brow knit. He glanced quickly around him. The staff had trotted away; the captain and his detail were continuing their work at a little distance. He took a long breath, he was holding in his hand a tracing of their position, even of the position he was to occupy to-morrow, and a detailed account of the movements, plans and force of the whole division, as had been arranged in council of war the day before the battle, but there was no indication of the writer or his intentions.

He thrust the paper hurriedly back into the envelope, and placed it, this time, in his breast. He galloped towards the captain:

"Let me see the officer from whom you took that packet?"

The captain led him to where the body lay, with others, covered more decently on the grass awaiting removal. Gen. Brant with difficulty repressed an ejaculation.

"Why, it's one of our own men!" he said quickly.

"Yes, general. They say it's Lieut. Wainwright, a regular of the division supply department."

"Then what was he doing here?" asked Gen. Brant, sternly.

"I can't make out, sir, unless he went into the last advance as a volunteer. Wanted to see the fight, I reckon. He was a dashing fellow, a West Pointer—and a southerner, too—a Virginian."

"A Virginian!" echoed Brant, quickly.

"Yes, sir."

"Search him again," said Brant quietly. He had recovered his usual coolness, and as the captain again examined the body, he took out his tablets and wrote a few lines. It was an order to search the quarters of Lieut. Wainwright, and bring all papers, letters and documents to him. He then beckoned one of the detail toward him. "Take that to the provost marshal at once. Well, captain," he added calmly, as the officer again approached him, "what do you find?"

"Only this, sir," returned the captain, with a half smile, producing a small photograph. "I suppose it was overlooked, too." He handed it to Brant.

He handed it to Brant.

There was a sudden fixing of his commanding officer's eyes, but his face did not otherwise change.

"The usual find, general. But this time rather a handsome woman."

"Very," said Clarence Brant, quietly. It was the portrait of his own wife!

CHAPTER II.

So complete was his control of voice and manner that as he galloped back to his quarters no one would have dreamed that Gen. Brant had just looked upon the likeness of the wife from whom he had parted in anger four years ago. Still less would they have suspected the singular fear that came upon him that in some vague way she was connected with the treachery he had just discovered. He had heard from her only once, and then through her late husband's lawyer in regard to her California property, and believed that she had gone to her relations in Alabama, where she had identified herself with the southern cause even to the sacrifice of her private fortune. He had heard her name mentioned in the southern press as a fascinating society leader, and even coadjutrix of southern politicians—but he had no reason to believe that she had taken so active or so desperate a part in the struggle. He tried to think that his uneasiness sprang from his recollection of the previous treachery of Capt. Pinckney, and the part she had played in the California conspiracy—although he had long since acquitted her of the betrayal of another trust. But there was a fateful similarity in the two cases. There was no doubt that this Lieut. Wainwright was a traitor in the camp—that he had succumbed to the miserable sophistry of his class in regard to his superior allegiance to his native state. But was there the inducement of another emotion—or was the photograph only the souvenir of a fascinating priestess of rebellion whom the dead man had met? There was perhaps less of feeling than scorn in the first suggestion, but he was, nevertheless, relieved when the provost marshal found no incriminating papers in Wainwright's effects. Nor did he reveal to the division general the finding of the photograph. It was sufficient to disclose the work of the traitor without adding what might be a clew to his wife's participation in it, near or remote. There was risk enough in the former course—which his duty made imperative. He hardly dared to think of the past day's slaughter which—there was no doubt now—had been due to the previous work of the spy, and how his brigade had been selected—by the irony of fate—to suffer for and yet retrieve it. If she had a hand in that wicked plot, ought he to spare her? Or were his destiny and hers to be thus monstrously linked together?

SPORTS

CYCLING COMMENT.

The Crescent Wheelmen will have their first run on Sunday to Springfield.

J. Hazelwood Craig, of Dunellen avenue, has purchased a new '96 Columbia wheel.

James Daly has received his new Spalding wheel, and is only waiting for the good weather to test its running qualities.

Johnson & Holder, the cycle firm, will probably take the store on Park avenue recently occupied by Eugene A. Laine, the barber.

The Plainfield Cycle Company received a shipment of goods yesterday, and in a few days they will place on the market their new wheel the "Plainfield."

One of the races at the Crescent Wheelmen's Decoration Day race meet will be a one-mile handicap open only to members of the club who have never competed in a bicycle race before.

The League of American Wheelmen is growing at a remarkable rate, over 1,000 new members and renewals having been listed last week. Of the number New York furnished 257, Pennsylvania 240, and Massachussets 115.

Following the precedent set by the Metropolitan Association of Cycling Clubs, the Associated clubs of Long Island will this season establish a 25-mile road handicap, which it is hoped will some day attain to the importance of the great Irvington-Milburn.

AT THE TRAPS.

An almost summer sky on Tuesday evening bade fair for a good day for the sport yesterday on the Elizabeth Gun Club grounds. While it did not make much difference to the shooters who faced the traps, nevertheless the weather was raw and cold, with light showers of rain, just enough to keep away some of the timid ones, and even with the more enthusiastic there was some delay before the opening event was called, over an hour behind the schedule. Nearly four thousand targets were thrown. The Plainfield shooters showed up well in all the events. Charles Smith finished first in the first event, while T. H. Keller and Neaf Apgar made good scores in the other events.

STRIKES AND SPARES.

The head-pin tournament at the Crescent Wheelmen's alleys came to an end last Tuesday night. It has proved an exciting one, despite the fact that one man held the high score almost through the entire tournament. He was closely pressed all the time and on several occasions victory was almost wrested from his grasp. Mr. VanEmburgh was successful at the close, however, and received the prize, a diamond L. A. W. pin, as a reward for his excellent bowling. Those to score above 100 in the tournament were:

Harry VanEmburgh	114
Wheaton S. Lowry	113
John E. S. Petrie	112

VARIOUS SPORTS.

The day of the annual spring games of the New York Inter Scholastic Athletic Association, has been changed to May 16th.

About a thousand people were present at the St. Nicholas rink in New York last night to see the St. Nicholas Skating club team defeat the Yale boys by a score of 6 to 1. The Yale team put up a good game, but lack of practice told against them. Henry V. Ryder, of this city, played an excellent game for the college team. In the first half he fell on the ice and had to be carried from the hall, but he recovered in time to take part in the second half. Malcolm Chase, the tennis crack, was the captain of the Yale contingent and his playing was remarkable. Albert P. Simmonds, of this city, acted as one of the umpires. Thomas U. Smith, of this city, was also present at the game.

GOLF.

The annual meeting of the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club was held last evening in their clubhouse on Watchung avenue. It was one of the most interesting meetings ever held, nad the attendance was large, notwithstanding the unpleasant weather. The secretary and treasurer, together with the various committees, made their repoats. They were encouraging, and showed the club to be in a prosperous condition, and not in debt for one single penny. The past season was one of great success, and the idea is to surpass it this year. The golf course was opened during the month of October, and the interest taken bespeaks for this sport a season of success. The interests of tennis will be served equal with that of golf, and they will both be under the supervision of the one club. Golf is a sport that can be played by both men and women, young or old, and already several women have taken it up. In view of the fact that this will be a great season for cycling, it is expected that large numbers will visit the club's grounds, so easy of access. It is believed that the tennis courts and the golf course will be opened by the latter part of this month or the first of next. There are now about thirty members of the club uniformed for playing golf and many more are expected to follow. The club now has a membership of 115, and new members are constantly coming in. Frequent entertainments and social events will be given during the season, and altogether a very lively time is promised in this field of sport. A slight change was made in the constitution after which the following officers were elected: President, Dexter O. Tiffany; vice president, George P. Mellick; secretary, J. Doull Milller; secretary for golf, James Stowell Anthony; treasurer, Josiah Browne; members of governing committee from the club-at-large, H. W. Beebe, T. F. Sykes, Clifton Wharton, Jr.; nominating committee for next year, B. VanD. Hedges, J. E. Morse, Carl Pfeiffer.

CYCLING COMMENT.

Thomas U. Smith and Carl Walz rode to Elizabeth yesterday morning on the '96 Cleveland racing tandem. They found the roads in good condition and made fast time.

The hurry for new wheels still continues and the F. L. C Martin Cycle Company are busy supplying the great demand. Among their latest customers are J. F. Reinhart, of Dunellen, a Crescent, No. 9; J. King, a Crescent, No. 1; George Burgess, a Cleveland model 22; J. W. Drayton a Cleveland model 18; F. C. Kirchoff, a Cleveland model 22

AN ALLEY RUNAWAY.

A Horse Becomes Frightened and Damages a Fire Alarm Box.

James Gray, a farmer, left his horse and wagon in the rear of Miss A. E. Lincoln's store on Park avenue yesterday afternoon while he did some trading. Just before Mr. Gray was ready to leave, the horse became frightened and started on a run through the lane. When he reached the sidewalk, Patrolman Vanderweg saw the animal and hurried across the street. The horse turned toward the railroad causing the wagon to catch in the iron pipe which contains the wires for the fire alarm box on that pole. The pipe was considerably twisted, but no further damage resulted as the officer caught the horse in time.

First Assistant Fire Chief James A. Martin was notified of the damage, and he secured the services of Linesman Herbert Chamberlain, of the Telephone Comprny, who quickly repaired the same.

A MAY WALK.

The Saengerbund Society Arranges Some Warm Weather Events.

The Gesang and Turn Verein Society met last evening in Saengerbund Hall and transacted business of importance to the members. The arrangements for the dance to be given Monday evening, April 13th, were about completed and the committee reported progress. The members decided to hold their annual May walk, but there will be a change in the destination. The matter was referred to the Board of Trustees, who will report later. It was also decided to take Hyde's Park for another year, and the shooting section will hold frequent matches during the season.

Ignatz Kohner presented the society with a membership roll handsomely framed. The work was done by Mr. Kohner and is a fine specimen of penmanship.

Henry Vogel was elected vice president in place of John Richter, deceased.

THE JUNIORS' EXCURSION.

A Big Time for Those Who Go to Asbury Park August 20th.

There was a large attendance of the members at the meeting of Franklin Council, No. 41, J. O. U. A. M., held last evening, including a delegation of ten brothers ftom Central Lodge, of Westfield. The initiation of four new members was witnessed with a great deal of pleasure. The members decided to run their annual excursion, Thursday, August 20th, to Asbury Park, and Isaac Squires, Firman A. Long, Harry M. Cooke, Theodore A. Kurzhals, Jr., and Peter T. Bogert, were appointed a committee to arrange for the day's outing. Routine business occupied the balance of the evening.

After the meeting of the council the excursion committee met and selected Isaac Squires, chairman; Harry M. Cooke, secretary, and Firman A. Long, treasurer.

Party for the Little Ones.

A pleasant social event was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Horace Martin, on Fairview avenue, last evening, when their son, Horace Martin, Jr., celebrated the anniversary of his birthday. Mrs. Martin arranged the affair and invited about twenty-five of her son's young friends to spend the evening. The playing of the latest games, together with dancing, helped to make the time go all too quickly and it was with regret that the young people left for home, after a bountiful supply of refreshments had been served. All present wished their young host many happy returns of the day before going.

Cottages on the Mountain.

William C. Smith has received the contract for the masonary work on three new summer cottages which are to be erected on the mountain this summer by persons who are struck with the pictureesque and desirable location for summer recreation. The work is now under way. The Mountain Park Inn is receiving its first coat of paint.

GREAT LESSON TAUGHT.

REV. MR. DWIGHT DRAWS CONCLUSIONS FROM CHRIST'S DEATH.

It Has Brought Peace to Many Hearts and Changed the World—It Has Compelled Men to Follow Christianity.

The second of the series of union meetings in connection with Holy Week, was held in the First Baptist church last evening. Rev. D. J Yerkes, D. D., opened the services and Rev. W. R. Richards, D. D., led in prayer. The sermon was preached by Rev. M. E. Dwight, and he took for his text, Romans 5:8, "Christ Died For Us." He said in substance as follows: "They are four short words but they form a sentence that tells of the greatest event in the world's history and expresses the greatest truth that has ever been known. It has brought the peace of God to many hearts and changed the world. Wherever it has gone, it has compelled men to think and follow along the lines laid down by Christianity. But have not others died for us? Did not the Pilgrims, the revolutionary heroes and our patriot countrymen all die that we might enjoy all the privileges and blessings of this country of ours? Are we going to rank Christ's death with these? No! His death stands apart from all others unique in its pre-eminence and purpose. It is the death scene of a perfect and divine love. We strive to tell of the death of Christ, but our best efforts are mere shadows of the real meaning. The illustrations of those, whose love has conquered death, help us to understand it. But they died for their friends and Christ died for his enemies.

"The death of Christ was unique in its purpose. Christ died to become the propitiation for the sins of the whole world. To exclude this idea of propitiation from the Bible makes it unintelligible. Exclude this idea and with what can the guilty conscience be appeased, how can we know that God has forgiven us. I am persuaded that it is enough for you that the Scriptures say so, but if any one doubts this doctrine, the experience of all mankind is that true peace of mind can only be found in the belief that Christ died for us, the just and the unjust.

"His purpose was as grand as it was peculiar. He died for the sins of all the world. He took not only one sinner's place but every sinner's place. He was what John the Baptist said, the Savior of the world. It is indeed true that only those that believe in Him will be saved by Him. A man must believe in the Savior to be saved.

"There is a granduer about it when we consider the scope of it. Others died for only part, but He died for all. But grander still appeals this purpose when we consider that it is already being accomplished. His death is actually lifting up this world. The world is rising more and more, mankind is being upraised and lifted. The human race shall be redeemed and only a small portion lost. The little flock may seem small but it is gradually growing greater. Multitudes are fleeing from the sins of unbelief to the forgiving arms of Christ. Then, on the last day, will it best be seen that Christ is really the Savior of the world. Does not the granduer of this object attract us to Him. I wish that the simplicity of these four words might penetrate our hearts. Whosoever believing, and calling upon His name, shall be saved."

The service closed with the benediction by Rev. C. R. Barnes, D. D.

RED MEN'S DAY.

An Indian Invasion of Plainfield Planned by Paugh-Caugh-Naugh-Sinque Tribe.

An Indian invasion of Plainfield is being planned for Thursday, April 16th, when Paugh-Caugh-Naugh-Sinque Tribe, No. 193, Improved Order of Red Men, will duly celebrate their second anniversary in true Indian fashion. An Indian masque ball and peace dance will be held in the Columbia Cycle Academy, and a great feast will follow. Nearly every tribe in the State will be represented by braves in full costume, while a large delegation of the great chiefs is expected. The Plainfield braves are making great preparations for the event.

Hope Chapel's New Society.

A meeting of young people was held in Hope chapel last evening for the purpose of organizing a Young People's Society. Rev. Mr. Newell presided. A large number of those present entered heartily into the work. A constitution was drawn up and adopted. The officers of the old society were elected to be the officers of the new society. After the business had been disposed of, the entertainment committee took charge and served refreshments and general sociability reigned.

Besides these items of general interest the air is full of rumors of pleasure galore trips to Washington and other places of resort, small companies without number and larger dances to be followed by more weddings and receptions.

SILVER WEDDING ANNIVERSARY.

Mr. and Mrs. D. P. Hicks Have Been Married Twenty-five Years.

Mr. and Mrs. D. P. Hicks, of 824 West Third street, celebrated in an appropriate manner the twenty-fifth anniversary of their marriage last evening. Friends and relatives had gathered to such an extent that the house was filled to its utmost capacity, about 150 being present.

The marriage ceremony was performed over by Rev. W. C. O'Donnell, pastor of the Monree Avenue chapel. After the ceremony had been performed Rev. Mr. O'Donnell made a few remarks fitting to the occasion, and ended by kissing the bride. In a few well-chosen remarks Mr. O'Donnell presented the happy couple with a coal hod. Mr. Hicks replied in a humorous manner.

The presents received formed a very handsome group, the display being a useful as well as an ornamental one. A silver water set was given by Rebecca Lodge, a mahogany table by Queen City Lodge, I. O. O. F., while Mr. Hicks' fellow patternmakers at the Pond Tool Works, sent a large lamp, and Rebecca Lodge also gave a crazy quilt, portions of which were contributed by various members of the lodge.

At the close of the evening refreshments were served and music rendered by several of those present, and it was nearly midnight before the last guest had departed for home.

HE IS THE MAN.

Harry Roberts, Identifies the Man Who Stole His Father's Rig.

Some time ago exclusive mention was made in the Daily Press that a man was held in custody at White Plains, N. Y., who confessed to stealing a number of horses, and that it was thought that he was the individual who hired a rig from Dan Roberts livery stable in this city and never returned it. Yesterday, Harry Roberts went to White Plains and was taken in among the prisoners at the jail where the horse thief was incarcerated, and quickly identified him as the man who had hired the rig from his father. When confronted with the charges, however, the fellow absolutely refused to say a word as to where he had disposed of the property though he already told where he had sold a number of horses that he had stolen. The fellow's name is John Towers. Harry will go to White Plains again to see if he can learn where the rig was sold.

Entertained at Euchre.

A very pleasant evening was spent at the home of the Misses Marlow, of Dunellen, last evening, by the members of the Young People's Progressive Euchre Club of Dunellen and North Plainfield. Euchre occupied the attention of the young people for the early part of the evening. The first prizes were won by Miss Maud Benton and Charles Coriell. The winners of the second prizes were Miss Carlotta Williams and Fred Haynes. Dainty refreshments were then served and dancing and music made the remainder of the evening pass only too quickly.

BOROUGH G. O. P. DELEGATES.

Representatives Elected to the State and Congressional Conventions.

A Republican caucus was held in the North Plainfield schoolhouse last evening for the purpose of electing three delegates to attend the Third Congressional District Convention to be held in New Brunswick, Thursday, April 9th, and three delegates to attend the Republican State Convention to be held at Trenton, Thursday, April 16th, at which time delegates-at-large will be chosen to go to the National Convention to be held at St. Louis.

Mayor B A. Hegeman, Jr., called the meeting to order, after which W. Wallace Howland was selected as chairman and S. B. Joseph secretary. The latter read the call of the meeting. Hon. Charles Place then stated that the call was issued in the name of the township and therefore the latter was entitled to one delegate and the borough according to the number of legal voters.

Assemblyman Chas. A. Reed said that the call included the township as it takes in all the voting places. The borough was still a part of the township and it was only fair that there should be one from each polling place.

From the borough, H. N. Spencer and C. A. Reed were selected to go to New Brunswick and Geo. W. Bullman from the township.

The delegates chosen to attend the State Convention were Charles S. Smineck and L. B. Woolston from the borough and Chas. Sebring from the township. Mr. Place was nominated but declined.

The secretary cast the ballot for each delegate, and they were empowered to select their own alternates.

There being no further business the meeting adjourned.

A MIDNIGHT PROWLER.

Quietude of a City Family Disturbed by the Strange Actions of a Man.

A man, whose purposes appeared anything but the best, has been causing considerable excitement in a Westervelt avenue household. For some time it has been known that a man was hanging about the neighborhood. Several days ago a young man, evident Spanish, visited the house when the elder daughter was at home alone. He inquired for all the family and learning they were all out, tried to persuade the young lady to give him her picture so that he might make a crayon portrait of it. When she refused, he offered to go upstairs with her after it if she was afraid. She still refused and he finally left after insisting on shaking hands with her.

Night before last, the eldest son was out late in the evening. The family heard some one come upon the front piazza, jingle their keys and try to unlock the door. Supposing it was the son, they paid no attention to it. Later, however, the son came in. He had not been in very long when the same performance was repeated. This time the family heard it and started to investigate. As soon as a lamp was lighted, the intruder skipped. The husband rushed to the door and seeing a form disappearing in the darkness, fired two shots at it from a revolver. Nothing more has been seen or heard of the midnight prowler.

NO INJUNCTION FROM BAKER.

The Trolley Road Contractors Agree to His Plan.

About 100 men went to work on the trolley extension this morning and the work proceeded quite rapidly, at noon the rails being laid almost to Putnam avenue. Unless something else happens to prevent the laying of the track the Netherwood branch will be concluded in a short time.

There is no danger of an injunction now from H. H. Baker, at least. After a consultation with John Adelman, superintendent of the street railway, Mr. Baker declared himself satisfied if the pole in front of his house could be moved to the edge of his lot. Mr. Adelman agreed, and the pole will be changed at once.

—An evening social will be held at the residence of Miss Mollie Noel, 446 West Second street, April 23rd.

During the winter of 1893, F. M. Martin, of Long Reach, West Va., contracted a severe cold which left him with a cough. In speaking of how he cured it he says: "I used several kinds of cough syrup but found no relief until I bought a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, which relieved me almost instantly, and in a short time brought about a complete cure." When troubled with a cough or cold use this remedy and you will not find it necessary to try several kinds before you get relief. It has been in the market for over twenty years and constantly grown in favor and popularity. For sale at 25 and 50 cents per bottle at Armstrong's pharmacy, Park and North avenues.

MR. MIDDLEDITH'S SIDE

THE BROKER SAYS THE CHARGES AGAINST HIM ARE FALSE.

Refused to Give Up Certain Knowledge and, He Claims, the Cigarette Company Had Him Indicted For It.

The New York World this morning published the following in connection with the charges preferred against James Middledith, who resides at the corner of Park avenue and East Ninth street, this city:

Jas. Middledith and John T. Kirby, who were arrested Wednesday night after the Grand Jury had indicted them for circulating false and malicious reports about the National (Admiral) Cigarette Company, will be arraigned before Recorder Goff, in General Sessions, Monday.

Assistant District Attorney Battle said yesterday that there was another man to be arrested, who has been indicted under the name of John Doe.

The papers in the case show that on Tuesday last a messenger from the office of C. I. Hudson & Co., asked that reporters from the two Wall street news distributing agencies should hurry at once to that office. The runners were quickly there, for seconds count in Wall street and within a few moments the news-slip of Dow, Jones & Co's agency announced that the factories of the National (Admiral) Cigarette Company had been closed.

Lawyer M. S. Gutterman, of the firm of Einstein & Townsend, who represent the National Cigarette Company, was seen yesterday at his office, 32 Liberty street, by a World reporter.

"The spreading of the false rumors about the only rival the trust has," said Mr. Gutterman, "was very detrimental to our clients. The reports reached all the members of the Stock Exchange. The story was made out out of the whole cloth. There was no foundation for it whatever. On the very day that the circular was issued our clients were putting in new machines, increasing their capacity about 33 per cent.

"Immediately steps were taken by us to ascartain the source of these false statements. The reports were issued Tuesday. The next day the Grand Jury found an indictment against the two men. Mr. Middledith is supposed to be connected with the firm of C. I. Hudson & Co., of 36 Wall street. Mr. Hudson, I understand, is a Governor of the Stock Exchange. It is our opinion that these false reports were circulated for the purpose of advancing the prices of Tobacco Trust stock."

Mr. Middledith sent the following to The Evening Post last night:

"Mr. Middledith and Mr. Kirby are both innocent of the charges preferred against them by the National Cigarette Company, as will be proven. The motive of the latter company they prefer not to discuss just now. Mr. Kirby is a reputable exporter, and Mr. Middledith has been on the Street for thirty years. Neither was interested in any stock speculation."

Although the indictments charge Mr. Middledith and Mr. Kirby with circulation of the false news, there is believed to be an intention to smoke out larger game. Intimations were heard of disclosures that would involve others in a scheme to serve peculation in tobacco by false reports or any disreputable means. It is possible that to the Stock Exchange authorities may be furnished abundant material for an investigation of some importance, although this is not yet clear. The supplying of false information about a business to a newspaper, the offense charged in the indictments, is classed as a misdemeanor, for which the maximum penalty is one year's imprisonment, a fine of $500 or both.

Mr. Middledith was seen by a Press reporter this morning and stated that the charges were brought against him because he refused to give information that was desired by the National Cigarette Company, and that when the charges were cleared away, as he felt certain they would be when brought before a Court, he should institute a suit for $50,000 damages against those who had preferred the charges against him. The warrant for Mr. Middledith's arrest was served Wednesday night just as he was preparing to leave for Plainfield, when all the Courts had adjourned, and it was thought that he would have to go to jail in default of getting a Judge to grant him bail. However, Mr. Middledith had plenty of influential friends who quickly rallied to his support, and a few hours after his arrest he had secured the necessary bail and was on his way home.

—Ground was broken this morning at the corner of Fairview avenue and Allen place, Watchung Park, for a house for John C. Abbott.

WORK OF THE W. C. T. U.

Temperance Women Discuss Plans for the Efficiency of Their Society.

The regular monthly business meeting of the W. C. T. U. was held yesterday afternoon in their rooms on Watchung avenue. Mrs. T. H. Tomlinson, president for the month of March, presided, and a good-sized number of members were present. Reports were read from the committees on evangelistic services, foreign and flower work and narcotics. The evangelistic committee reported that the Sunday services were well attended and that the interest was increasing. Mrs. DeForest for the flower committee stated that bouquets, provisions, clothing, jelly and tracts had been supplied to needy families and in other ways the committee had carried out its objects.

The members set Thursday, April 23d, as "Paper day," and clippings from papers on various subjects will be read. April 30th was set aside for "German work," and Miss Using, of New York, will make an address. Mrs. Cahoone was selected a member of the resolution committee, for the summer school of methods, and the members decided to send a resolution advising the establishment of anti-cigarette leagues among the schools. Mrs. Krom will prepare the resolution. Next Thursday afternoon at 3 o'clock Miss Lundon, of Flemington, will address Swedish women of Plainfield in the W. C. T. U. rooms. Miss Lundon is a talented speaker and she will talk in the Swedish language. It was decided to serve tea after the meeting and Mrs. Winters and Mrs. Honeyman were appointed a committee to arrange for the same.

Mrs. T. W. Powell, of Grandview avenue, was elected as one of the vice-presidents for the Grace M. E. church to take the place of the late Mrs. Griffen, and Mrs. P. H. Brown was elected as vice-president from the Mt. Olive Baptist church.

Miss Clementine R. Yates was selected as corresponding secretary, and Mrs. Winters was made superintendent of Sunday-school work. Mrs. Tomlinson urged those present to try and secure new members for the union and thus make it possible for them to present a good report at the State Convention.

A prepared catechism on the last annual report of the State organization was introduced and the members responded to the first five questions. At each meeting the above nnmber will be used to acquaint all with the work of the State body.

WORK OF THE Y. M. C. A.

The Board of Directors Hear Some Encouraging Reports.

The regular monthly meeting of the Board of Directors of the Y. M. C. A. was held at the building last evening. On motion, the grounds in the rear of the building were ordered graded in order that they might be used for basket ball and other outdoor sports. Stephen Cahoone, chairman of the committee on educational work, reported attendance upon the twenty-nine sessions of the educational classes. A. C. LaBoyteaux, chairman of the religious work committee, reported thirteen sessions of the three Bible classes and the five young men's meetings. The boys Bible class and the boys afternoon meeting were told of in the report of George H. Batchelor, chairman of the committee on Junior work. The report of the rooms committee showed that a liberal use had been made of the building during the past month. The General Secretary's report gave an idea of what the association had done in dealing with individual men. Considerable interest was reported in connection with the evangelistic Bible class during the past month, especially on the part of five young men who were faithfully dealt with at the close of the class. The physical director reported the average attendance at the various classes as follows: Business men's, 11; young men's, 10; boys, 26. Reports were also received from the assistant secretary, the music and membership committees, and a verbal report from the committee on literary work.

Dr. Lewis to Preach.

Rev. M. B. Kelly, who is to supply the Seventh-Day Baptist pulpit, is detained until April 18th. Dr. Lewis will preach tomorrow morning from I. Peter, 1:3-5. Theme, "Easter and Immortality." Appropriate music will be furnished by the choir, under the leadership of D. E. Titsworth.

It will be an agreeable surprise to persons subject to attacks of bilious colic to learn that prompt relief may be had by taking Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. In many instances the attack may be prevented by taking this remedy as soon as the first symptoms of the disease appear. 25 and 50c bottles for sale at Armstrong's pharmacy, Park and North avenues.

ENGLAND IN EGYPT

French Premier Says Her Occupation Causes Much Uneasiness.

TURKEY'S MANDATE NOT OBTAINED

France and Russia Working Together for Their Common Interests—A Reservation Established—Deputies Pass a Vote of Confidence.

Paris, April 3.—In the chamber of deputies yesterday M. Bourgeois, prime minister and minister of foreign affairs, made reply to the interpellations submitted by MM. Delafosse, Pierre Alype and Lebon in which they asked for information on the situation in Egypt. M. Bourgeois declared that Great Britain had installed herself in Egypt, without having been invested with a mandate to do so by the powers or by the sultan of Turkey, and had thereby caused permanent uneasiness. The sultan's mandate had not been procured, although Egypt was a dependency of the Ottoman empire, whose integrity the powers had agreed to respect. The action of the Russian and French delegates on the Egyptian debt commission in protesting against the illegal appropriation of Egyptian funds for the Soudan expedition had established a reservation in regard to the Egyptian question. M. Bourgeois added that Russia and France were never more closely associated than at present. The cabinet, he concluded, was continuing the negotiations concerning Egypt with firmness, and was inspired with confidence in defending with Russia their common rights and interests. Upon the conclusion of M. Bourgeois' statement the chamber, by 309 to 215, adopted a vote of confidence in the government.

After a Conference of the Powers.

The consensus of opinion in the lobbies is that part of M. Bourgeois' reply to the interpellations clearly indicated that he was trying to procure a conference of the powers on the Egyptian question.

LOCK-OUT AT LYNN.

Pickets Employed To Warn Workmen Away from the National Shoe Co.

Lynn, Mass, April 3.—The twenty-five lasters employed by the National Shoe company have been discharged because of a demand for an increase of half a cent a pair for lasting two grades of shoes manufactured by the company. The Lasters' union has declared a lockout at the National Shoe company's factory, and put pickets on duty in the vicinity of the building to warn all lasters to keep away from the shop until the trouble is settled. Some time ago an injunction was obtained from the Essex county superior court restraining Horace M. Eaton and others of the Lasters' union from interfering with the help, but there is some doubt whether or not the old injunction will hold good in the present trouble.

THE MATABELE UPRISING.

Plans To Oust the Natives from Their Strongholds in the Hills.

Cape Town, April 3.—The Matabele revolt, according to advices from Buluwayo, is now confined to the Matoppo hills, where the rebellious Matabeles are concentrated. The executive authorities of the Chartered company represent that horses and an abundant supply of arms, ammunition and provisions are required, and when these have been collected it is proposed to sweep the hills with several columns of troops of about 250 men each. Five hundred mounted men are accompanying Cecil Rhodes from Salisbury to Gwelo.

FEARS FOR THE FLEET.

Three Sealers Known To Be Badly Crushed by the Ice.

St. Johns, N. F., April 3.—The owners of the sealing fleet are very apprehensive for the safety of the disabled ships now in the ice fields. The severe gale and snow storm which raged last night and to-day, it is feared, have caused havoc among the floes and steamers. The Walrus, Vanguard and Kanger are known to be badly crushed by the bergs. News of some of the other ships is expected to-day or to-morrow.

New Trial for Crowley.

Boston, April 3.—The full bench of the supreme court yesterday sustained the defendant in the case of the commonwealth vs. Richard Crowley. Crowley, who has been in jail almost a year under conviction of manslaughter, will be given a new trial. He was found guilty of the killing of John F. Burns in Roxbury.

For Good Roads.

Springfield, Mass., April 3.—The road supervisors and superintendents of fifteen towns and cities in this section of the state formed yesterday in this city the Connecticut Valley Highway association. The association will seek to advance the cause of good roads in this part of the state.

Senators at Portsmouth.

Portsmouth, N. H., April 3.—Yesterday U. S. Senators Chandler and Gallinger visited the navy yard and were shown, by Commander Reed, the site selected for the proposed new dry dock and the advantage of a dock here, and the needs of the yard were fully explained by the officer.

Central Vermont Railroad Receivers.

Chicago, April 3.—Judge Grosscup, in the federal court, yesterday appointed Charles L. Hayes and E. C. Smith, receivers for the Central railway of Vermont. The appointment was ancillary to that of judge Hoyt H. Wheeler of Vermont, on March 14.

BRUNSWICK'S GREAT FIRE.

Blocks of Business Houses Reduced to Ashes and Ruins.

Brunswick, Ga., April 3.—The fire which commenced yesterday at noon and burned until midnight last night destroyed fully half a million dollars worth of property, cost one human life, caused one man to be mashed and crippled, and prostrated four men, who are suffering in various stages. The property destroyed includes the wharf property and warehouses of the Plant system; a number of freight cars, 25,000 barrels of resin, 1,000 barrels of spirits of turpentine and various small fish and oyster hovses on the edge of the water of Bay street. On the far side af Bay street the fire swept Briesenick's three-story building and the wholesale grocery and liquor stock of R. Douglas and other business houses and the three story Ocean hotel. Extending up Monk street several retail stores and two warehouses were reduced to ashes. On Day street, from Monk street up, an entire block of brick buildings occupied by business firms were consumed. The scenes and excitement during the fire were beyond description.

INDIANA'S FINAL TRIAL.

To Determine Whether Repairs Shall Be Made By Contractors or Government.

Washington, April 3.—The battleship Indiana will probably be ready to leave the Port Royal dry dock on Tuesday next, April 7, according to advices received at the navy department. A board of officers to conduct the final trial of the vessel will be appointed without delay and will go on board the Indiana at Port Royal. Although the Indiana has been accepted by the government and has been in commission several months, the contract requires that final payment of the full amount of the agreed price shall not be made to the builders, the Cramp company of Philadelphia, until four months after her acceptance, and the trial referred to will be to determine whether any necessary repairs shall be made by the contractors or by the government. About $60,000 has been withheld from the contractors to cover any expense for which the contractors may be responsible. The trial will take place at sea for forty-eight hours, probably on the trip from Port Royal to Hampton roads.

WILL BE FREE TEMPORARILY.

Jury Disagrees in the Mr. and Mrs. Angelier Murder Case.

Baltimore, April 3.—Mrs. Mattie V. Angelier and her husband, Frank, charged with the murder of Charles F. Parker, the Massachusetts salesman, will have temporary freedom, at least, after having been looked up since January 11. The jury in their case, which had been out twenty-four hours, came into court last evening and said they could not agree on a verdict. They were discharged, and, upon application of attorney William F. Campbell, Judge Wickes fixed the jointed bail of the prisoners at $10,000. It was learned that the rumor in reference to the jury standing eleven to one in favor of acquittal was correct, the obstinate juryman being the second on the panel, John W. Roland, who stood out for a verdict of murder in the second degree. Last night they were released in the sum of $10,000.

VANDALS NOT KNOWN.

Excitement in Jackson, Miss., Over the Effort To Tear Down the Capitol.

Jackson, Miss., April 3.—There is still much excitement here over the attempt made Wednesday night to tear down the state capitol. The building is old and in such a delapidated condition that the removal of the smallest support would cause collapse. The state officials talk of moving out. That the attempt to destroy the building was not successful was due solely to the fact that Secretary of State Power was working late, and, hearing the vandals at work, went out to see what was the trouble. They fled at his approach, and are not known. Two large stones were removed from a corner of the building.

Armenian Memorial Window.

London, April 3.—Friends of Armenia have announced their intention to place a stained glass window in the church at Hawarden as a memorial to the Armenian martyrs.

RELIGION DISCUSSED

Members of the House Indulge in a Heated Argument.

ITS FORMER POLICY REVERSED

Passage of the Sundry Civil Appropriation Bill—Documents Relating to the Venezuelan Affair Asked For—The Dupont Case in the Senate.

Washington, April 3.—Now that the sundry civil appropriation bill has been passed, the house to-day has nothing but routine business to occupy its attention. The final discussion of the bill caused a repetition of the religious discussion which raged when the District of Columbia appropriation bill was under discussion. For three hours and a half the house indulged in a heated argument on religion, and, as a result, the policy of the house as expressed at that time by a decided refusal to appropriate money for the charitable and benevolent institutions of the District, was in effect reversed. The inciting cause of the debate was the amendment to the sundry civil bill, which was adopted in committee of the whole on motion of Mr. Evans, rep., Ky., giving Howard university in Washington $32,600, the appropriation having been omitted from the bill by the committee reporting it. There was a digression from the main question when Mr. Hepburn, rep., Ia., responded to the remarks of Mr. Sayers, dem., Tex., charging the democrats of the south with not only failing to provide equal educational advantages to the negroes with the whites, but robbed them of their civil rights. His statements were vigorously combatted by Mr. Sayers and others. When the matter got into the house a yea and nay vote was taken on the amendment and it was agreed to—yeas, 128; nays, 105. This debate practically closed the consideration of the sundry civil appropriation bill and no further amendment of note was made. It was passed as reported from the committee of the whole. Mr. Hitt, rep., Ill., reported from committee on foreign affairs the resolution asking the president to transmit to congress all correspondence in the state department since December 1, 1895, relating to offers of mediation or intervention by the United States in the affairs of Venezuela, and it was agreed to.

In the Senate.

The senate to-day is still engaged in discussing the postoffice appropriation bill on the amendment relating to the consolidation of suburban postoffices and changing them into stations and sub-stations. Although Senator George finished his speech against the seating of Mr. Dupont as a senator from the state of Delaware, Senator Peffer had no opportunity of calling up his resolution for the investigation of recent bond sales and the Cuban joint resolution of Senator Call also remained on the table. Mr. George's argument occupied in all ten hours' time. It closed with an assertion that if Mr. Dupont obtained the seat he would be elected to it, not by the legislature of Delaware, but by the senate of the United States. No action was taken on the report, and it is very uncertain when the vote will be reached.

The boat will be constructed of mahogany above the water line and American steel below.

Benjamin Franklin Tweed Dead.

Boston, April 3.—Prof. Benjamin Franklin Tweed died in Cambridge yesterday in his 86th year. He was professor of rhetoric, logic and English literature in Tufts college from 1855 to 1864. He was superintendent of public schools in Charlestown and the Charlestown district from 1870 to 1876; supervisor of public shools in Boston from 1876 to 1880, and in 1853 received the honorary degree of A. M. from Harvard university. Mr. Tweed was the author of Tweed's grammar.

LIVER CLOGGING.

When Your Stomach Clogs Your Liver See to Your Digestion.

Not one person in a thousand knows that the cause of biliousness is the clogging of the liver by the poisons of indigestion. Nor that the only proper cure for it is a tonic to aid the stomach.

But modern medicine declares the truth of it. And the Shakers have proved it by the wonderful success of their Shaker Digestive Cordial.

One of the most important uses of the liver is to arrest and destroy all poisons which try to find their way into the blood. When it is clogged it can't do this.

Undigested food ferments and putrefies in the stomach, and the poisons of putrefaction clog and paralyze the liver, after which they find their way into the blood.

Here is the true explanation of all the distressing disorders and complications caused by indigestion.

Shaker Digestive Cordial is the only tonic cordial which aids the stomach in a natural way to digest its food. By this means it cures indigestion, restores the liver and frees the body from poison and disease.

Headache, dizziness, neuralgia, mental depression, weakness, bad taste, fever, flatulence, constipation, loss of appetite, anæmia, rheumatism, and many other disorders are relieved and cured by Shaker Digestive Cordial.

At druggists. 10c for a trial bottle. Write for book to The Shakers, 30 Reade street, New York.

REFUGEES AT MARASH

Condition of the Armenians Beyond Human Imagination.

FOUR THOUSAND ALREADY DEAD

Cold, Famine and Smallpox Carrying Off the Sufferers—An Appeal Issued for More Funds To Continue the Work of Relief.

New York, April 3.—Spencer Trask, chairman of the executive committee of the National Armenian Relief Fund committee, has received the following cablegram from Marash: "There are 12,000 refugees here; 4,000 have died. The problem of how to help sufferers here and in Zeitoun comes upon us with crushing force. The misery is past human imagination—cold, famine, smallpox. We are using $500 a week for food, clothing and bedding, and it is barely inside starvation rates. Cannot more be sent? Do those who contribute wish us to continue giving at such a low rate? The medicines of the city are exhausted and we have sent for more to Aintab. We forward detailed reports of all moneys used. Tomorrow we cut down one-half on our help for lack of funds. Thousands of pounds are needed to save these people from a miserable death; when will it come?" In speaking of the present distress in Armenia, Mr. Trask said: "The need is equally as great in Harpoot and many other sections as it is in Marash. Practically all the relief work in sixteen centers is in the hands of trustworthy American residents and Miss Barton's Red Cross agents; they confidently look to the people of America, at whose request the work was begun, not to abandon them in their heroic efforts in this unparalleled suffering of our fellow Christians. The committee urges that special Easter offerings both from churchs and individuals be sent at once to the authorized treasurers of the National Armenian Relief fund and of the Red Cross, who forwarded to Turkey by cable $10,000 more yesterday to Miss Barton."

ITS BENEVOLENT WORK.

Anniversary of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society at Providence.

Fall River, Mass., April 3.—Yesterday afternoon the Woman's Foreign Missionary society held its anniversary in St. Paul's M. E. church. Rev. J. A. L. Rich offered prayer and Mrs. Warren A. Luce read the Scripture lesson. Miss Josephine Carr of Warren, R. I., the conference secretary, read the annual report, showing seventy-one auxiliaries, with 2,600 members. The sum of $3,864 has been raised during the past year. The New England branch has raised nearly $40,000. The society maintains hospitals, lay and boarding schools, and scholarships, and has in all forty-six branches of work. The address of Miss Mabel C. S. Hartford of China reviewed in general the late massacres of missionaries in China, of which she was an eye witness, barely escaping with her life. Rev. Julius Soper, D. D., of Japan gave a description of the work of the society in that empire.

Cutter Silk Failure.

West Bethlehem, Pa., April 3.—The liabilities of the Cutter Silk Manufacturing company of New York city and this town are stated to be about $500,000, of which nearly $300,000, it is said, is due to Schafer, Shram & Vogel for advances on manufactured goods. About $200,000 is due to other creditors for merchandise, etc., against which there are assets consisting of the factory and plant here; also raw material and goods in process of manufacture, together with whatever equity there may be in the goods in the hands of Schafer, Shram & Vogel.

Cleveland's Fierce Blizzard.

Cleveland, April 3.—The blizzard which struck Cleveland yesterday and raged with increasing fury until early this morning, was the fiercest of the winter. A number of accidents are reported. Richard Frank, a printer, was struck by a cable car which the storm prevented him from seeing. Both legs were crushed and had to be amputated. In many places the snow drifts reached a height of about eight feet.

"Brick" Pomeroy Very Low.

New York, April 3.—The well-known western editor, Mark M. Pomeroy, better known as "Brick" Pomeroy, is seriously ill at his residence at Blythebourne, L. I., of dropsy. His weakness has been extreme for some time, and his attending physician to-day pronounced his case as hopeless.

Requisition Papers for Rech.

Philadelphia, April 3.—The requisition papers for John Rech, the accused murderer of his alleged wife, Bessie Weaver, at Estelville, N. J., were sent here last evening from New Jersey and Rech will probably be taken to the county jail at Mays Landing this afternoon.

New York Appropriation Bill.

Albany, April 3.—The senate finance committee has agreed to report favorably the annual appropriation bill. Among the changes is an increase by $20,000 of the appropriation for Superintendent Colvin of the Adirondack state survey.

Good Friday in New York.

New York, April 3.—All of the city departments are closed to-day, Good Friday, except the few that the law requires to be kept open, Mayor Strong having approved the board of aldermen's resolution to this effect.

Three Jurors in the Graves Case.

Buffalo, April 3.—Three jurors had been obtained in the trial of Capt. Jesse Graves when court adjourned last night and the panel was exhausted.

M. E. CONFERENCE.

Subjects Discussed at the Afternoon Session in New York City.

New York, April 3.—At the afternoon session of the Methodist Episcopal conference there was considerable discussion upon the question of giving financial aid to St. Christopher's home and the Home of Deaconesses. Some of the delegates were of the opinion that they had already too many collections and financial burdens on their shoulders. One of them, Dr. McAnney of Mount Kisco, who called himself a "hayseeder," declared that if additional collections were imposed upon rural clergymen the latter would come to the annual conference looking more cadaverous than they do now. It was finally decided to recommend to the conference that annual collections be held in support of these homes. It was also decided on the motion of Dr. King to recommend favorably to the Woman's Home Missionary society the claims of the De Peyster home for support. The general conference of the Methodist Episcopal church for several years past has declared that the work of the Freedman's society is of great importance. The anniversary exercises were opened with singing, after which Secretary Hamilton made an address reviewing the work of the society. He said that nearly 8,000,000 of lately enfranchised colored people appeal for Christian leadership; with equal emphasis comes the cry from multitudes of the poorer white people of the south. After the speaking a collection was taken up and a handsome sum was realized. There was a reception last night to the members of the New York conference by the Methodist Social union of New York city at Grace Methodist Episcopal church.

A PECULIAR CASE.

Quadruple Town Suit To Decide Where Several Illegitimate Children Belong.

Winsted, Conn., April 3.—In the common pleas court here yesterday afternoon arguments were heard in the case of the town of New Hartford vs. the town of Canaan. This case has been in the court for about four years and during the last six months has been set down for trial three or four times and as often deferred for one reason or another. It is a quadruple fight in which New Hartford, Canaan, Goshen and Norfolk take part. The circumstances out of which the suit originated are very peculiar. About fifty years ago there lived in Meeker town, a territory of abandoned land and forest near the line of Norfolk, Canaan and Goshen the families of Abiron Bailey and Lewis Root. They were never heard from except on election days, when the first politician to reach them on election morning gave them a free ride of five miles to the polls in order to capture their votes. The families of Bailey and Root got along harmoniously until it began to appear to their husbands and their wives that a mistake had been made in their mating. To get out of the tangle they concluded to swap wives, and the trade resulted in Root giving Bailey a pair of stags and a jug of rum to boot in exchange. The result of that trade was a half dozen illegitimate children, who are now in middle life and paupers, and the court is now called upon to decide where they belong and which of the four towns shall support them.

No Larger Force Needed.

Cape Town, April 3.—Gov. M'GRATH INQUEST

Philadelphia Police Must Now Show Their Hands.

CASE MAY END IN A MEDICAL CLASH

Sensational Story to the Effect That the Girl Bought Chloroform Intending To Kill Langdon and Herself.

Philadelphia, April 3.—The inquest on the death of Annie McGrath will be commenced to-day and now the police will have to show their hands, in part at least. Dr. Laffman, the analytical chemist, who made the examination of the girl's blood and viscera, has finished his work, but he refuses to tell the result, but from what is known, it is likely that Dr. Laffman will testify that he has been unable to discover any traces of poisoning. It is then expected that the police will endeavor to have Langdon held on the ground that the cause of the girl's death is involved in doubt, and that as he was the last person who was with her when she was alive, he should be compelled to stand trial for her death. If the efforts of the police to hold Langdon are successful the case may eventually narrow down to a conflict of testimony between medical experts.

Sensational Solution of the Case.

An afternoon paper published a long article purporting to throw light upon the mystery surrounding the death of Annie McGrath. The story shows that the girl bought chloroform and that she made particular inquiry upon the effect of chloroform poisoning upon a young and old person. From this the paper deducts the theory that the girl committed suicide and implies that she also attempted to kill Samuel P. Langdon, the man who was supporting her. The motive for the girl's desperate act was furnished in the story by the threat of her sister to inform their parents that Annie was living with Langdon as his wife if she did not immediately break her connections with her lover. The main fact of the story upon which the publication was based is true. The girl did buy chloroform and the druggist from whom she bought it admits to the essential truth of the publication. The rest is mere speculation. The girl may have killed herself and she may also have attempted the life of her lover, but there are no facts known to bear out this theory.

IN CHARGE OF POLICE.

American Schooner Captured by a Gunboat and Taken to Colon.

Colon, Colombia, April 3.—The American schooner George W. Whitford of New York has been seized by the gunboat Cordova six miles off Manzanillo. The schooner was without cargo, but the captain of the gunboat threatened to sink her and put an officer on board and conveyed her here, accusing her of having contravened the customs laws. J. L. Pearcy, United States consul here, is actively endeavoring to obtain the release of the vessel, whose documents have been sent to the United States consul general at Bogota. In the meantime a force of police have been stationed on board the schooner. In boarding the schooner the gunboat fouled and damaged her, and the captain of the schooner has declared his intention of seeking indemnity for the damage to his vessel and for her detention.

Washington, April 3.—With a view to its reorganization, Mr. McCall of Massachusetts has introduced in the house a bill for the appointment of a commission to investigate the consular service. The commission is given power to inspect consulates and consular stations wherever located, and for defraying its expenses $10,000 is appropriated. No salaries are to be paid to the members.

An April Fool Joke.

Altoona, Ia., April 3.—The story sent out from Cincinnati that W. A. Ambrose, Altoona's absconding city solicitor, was in that city and could be captured at any time was probably an April fool joke. The police of this city have received no word from the Cincinnati authorities, and the report, in all likelihood, is a hoax.

Washington, April 3.—The senate has confirmed the following nominations: John B. Dusenberry of New Jersey, assistant appraiser of merchandise at New York. Charles W. Comstock, United States attorney for Connecticut. Postmasters—Pennsylvania, Albert Snyder, Greencastle; E. C. McKay, Connantville.

The Trenton True American observes that Morton is the only sound money candidate for the Republican Presidential nomination.

If the Hon. Garret A. Hobart's aspirations, real or supposed, are discussed at all in New Jersey, it must be seriously, says the New York Sun, replying to a question of a correspondent who asked if Mr. Hobart was a candidate for the Vice-Presidential nomination. That gentleman has not been a subject for humorous treatment at any time since the election of Governor Griggs last fall.

Assemblyman Reed, of Somerset county, has proved himself one of the best qualified legislators in this State. Since Senator Thompson has retired from active politics and has accepted a position as clerk of the court of chancery, the Republicans of Somerset county could not do better than to elect Mr. Reed to the Senate.—Elizabeth Journal.

Nothing wrong about that except the Democrats are going to elect the Senator and their candidate will doubtless be Hon. Wm. J. Keys, against whom Mr. Reed with his usual keen perception of possibilities will without the shadow of a doubt decline to run.—Bound Brook Democrat.

John C. Rankin was re-nominated for Mayor of Elizabeth yesterday. There is a disposition among the Republicans to make somewhat of a martyrdom campaign for Mr. Rankin, since he has been the object of the disgraceful onslaught of a mercenary paper. That is not the question, however, that should govern the selection of a city executive. But it must be admitted that there is a natural sympathy inherent in most men to rally to the support and vindicate a brother who has been assailed beyond the limits of decency, and this feeling is likely to become a potent factor in the Elizabeth municipal campaign.

Died Soon After His Wife.

Patrick Donnelly, whose wife died only a few days ago, also succumbed to the inevitable, yesterday, from old age and the shock of his wife's death. Mr. Donnelly was eighty-one years of age, and has lived for forty-two years in this city, where he has won the respect of all with whom he came in contact. He was an old member of the T. A. B. society. The funeral will be held from his late residence, 627 West Third street, Sunday afternoon at 130 o'clock and from St. Mary's church at two o'clock.

And now that the patrons of Sandford's theatre in New York have been induced to stray away from the beaten path of laughter which it has been their pleasure to tread, by the introduction of melo-drama with apple blossoms and human interest accompaniment, let us come together back to that merry world of comedy farce whose best exponent is without any doubt embodied in George W. Monroe, the comedian at whom you have all laughed in his exerutiatingly funny play of 'My Aunt Bridget." George W. Monroe comes into the Sandford Theatre after the scent of apple blossoms has departed. His engagement will begin on Monday, April 6th, and will last throughout the week with the usual Tuesday and Saturday matinee. Mr. Monroe and his clever company are going to present that laughing success "A Happy Little Home," and if we are not very much mistaken it will inaugurate a veritable festival of hilarity at Manager Sanford's east-side playhouse, for it is said to be the funniest comedy exploited in several seasons.

The Diamond Found.

The diamond earring which Mrs. William N. Tier lost a few days ago was found yesterday afternoon concealed in a knothole in the walk in front of James Donahue's home on East Front street by John H. Mr. Donahue had, as he thought, searched every nook and corner in that vicinity looking for the stone, but this little obscure knothole had escaped his glance. The stone was a valuable one.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the eustachian tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube be restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give one hundred dollars for any case of deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

OPPOSITE MUSIC HALL.

THE MOONSHINER OF FACT.

Vastly Different from the Wild Creature Pictured to the Reading Public.

He is neither a bandit nor a highwayman, a disturber of the peace, nor, in respect to formularies other than the revenue statutes, a law-breaker. Least of all, perhaps, is he a desperado. Within a month of the present writing, a traveler on one of the Tennessee railways entered the smoking car of the train.

In the rear seat sat an officer in charge of a "covey" of moonshiners flushed by him on the mountain the night before. There were 12 in the party; they had yielded without resistance to one man; and—most singular circumstance of all, in the south—the deputy had not found it necessary to put them in irons.

At their trial the members of this party will doubtless plead guilty to a man, though a little hard swearing would probably clear half of them; they will beg for mercy or for light sentences; and those of them who promise amendment will most likely never be again brought in on the same charge, for the mountaineer is prone to keep his promises, amendatory or otherwise.

A venerable judge, in whom judicial severity is tempered by a generous admixture of lowing kindness and mercy, and whose humane decisions have made his name a word to conjure with among the dwellers in the waste places, tells a story which emphasizes the promise-keeping trait in the mountain character.

A hardened sinner of the stills, whose first and second offenses were already recorded against him, was once again brought to book by the vigilance of the revenue men.

As an old offender, who had neither promised nor repented, it was likely to go hard with him; and he begged earnestly, not for liberty, but for a commutation of his sentence which would send him to jail instead of the penitentiary, promising that so long as the judge remained upon the bench he would neither make nor meddle with illicit whisky.

He won his case, and was sent to jail for a term of 11 months. This was in summer, and six months later, when the first snows began to powder the bleak summits of Chilhowee, the judge received a letter from the convict. It was a simple-hearted petition for a "furlough" of ten days, pathetic and eloquent in its primitive English and quaint misspelling.

Would the good judge let him off for just ten days? Winter was coming on, and the wife and children were alone in the cabin on the mountain, with no one to make provision for their wants. He would not overstay the time, and he would "certain shore" come back and surrender himself.

His petition was granted, and, true to his word, the mountaineer returned on the tenth day, and gave himself up to the sheriff. He served the remainder of his sentence, and, after his release, kept his pledge so long as the judge remained on the bench. — Lippincott's Magazine.

MILLIONS IN COUNTERFEIT COIN

Large Quantities of Spurious Stuff Passed in New York Daily.

The making and passing of small counterfeit coins is said to be an industry almost entirely confined to the Italians. Indeed, the racial aspect is one of the most interesting features of counterfeiting. While the Italian is content with the small profits resulting from "shoving" spurious nickels, dimes and quarters, the American counterfeiter devotes his talents to producing bank notes of the larger denominations. "Sweating" gold is the favorite scheme of the patent, industrious Russian, who keeps his large family of children employed in this slow but sure method of defrauding the government. To the ingenious Frenchman we are indebted for the cunning glass dollar, which has deceived even the most expert. The Bowery crook still depends on the confederate bill as a means of turning an honest penny, and the police reports would go to show that this old swindle is not too threadbare to catch its victim.

The Italians have been always the most persistent "shovers of the queer," and, while the individual amounts have been small, the profits in the aggregate foot up large sums every year. Probably the greater part of this spurious coin is passed by the push-cart men, whose calling gives them great facilities for getting rid of it with little danger of detection. The victims are mostly persons hurrying homeward to the ferries at dusk, who stop to purchase fruit from the carts that line the gutters of certain streets during the rush hours.

If the peddler is disposed to be dishonest he can swindle with the greatest ease, for everything is in his favor. The customer is in a hurry and seldom more than glances at his change. As it is counted out piece by piece into his open hand he can see that the amount is correct, but there is no tell-tale ring, as if the money had been put down on a counter. In the dim light, which the peddler's torch makes more uncertain, there is little chance to detect the counterfeit coin. Not until he has reached the ferry does he find out that he has been swindled and then it is too late, for the push-cart men are constantly on the move.—N. Y. World.

COPYRIGHT, 1894, BY BRET HARTE.

Luckily, however, the explanation of the chief offender and the timely discovery of his papers enabled the division commander to keep the affair discreetly silent, and to enjoy equal secrecy on the part of Brant. The latter, however, did not relax his vigilance, and after the advance the next day he made a minute inspection of the ground he was to occupy, its approaches and connections with the outlying country and the rebel lines, increased the stringency of picket and sentry regulations, and exercised a rigid surveillance of noncombatants and civilians within the lines—even to the lowest canteener or camp follower. Then he turned his attention to the house he was to occupy as his headquarters.

It was a fine specimen of the old colonial planter's house, with its broad verandas, its great detached offices and negro quarters, and had, thus far, escaped the ravages and billetting of the war. It had been occupied by its owner up to a few days before the engagement, and so great had been the confidence of the enemy in their success, that it had been used as the confederate headquarters on the morning of the decisive battle. Jasmine and rose, unstained by the sulphur of gunpowder, twined around its ruined columns and half hid the recessed windows; the careless flower garden was still in its unkeqt and unplucked luxuriance, the courtyard before the stables alone showed marks of the late military occupancy and was pulverized by the easy horsehoofs of the waiting staff. But the mingled impress of barbaric prodigality with patriarchal simplicity was still there in the domestic arrangements of a race who lived on equal terms with strangers and their own servants.

The negro servants still remained with a certain cat-like fidelity to the place, and adapted themselves to the northern invaders with a child-like enjoyment of the novelty of the change. Brant, nevertheless, looked them over with an experienced eye, and satisfied himslf of their trustworthiness; there were the usual number of "boys," gray-haired and grizzled in body service, and the "mammies" and "aunties" of the kitchen. There were two or three rooms in the wing which still contained private articles, pictures and souvenirs of the family, and a "young lady's" boudoir which Brant with characteristic delicacy kept carefully isolated and intact from the military household, and accessible only to the family servants. The room he had selected for himself was nearest it—a small, plainly furnished apartment with an almost conventual simplicity in its cold, white walls and draperies and the narrow, nun-like bed. It struck him that it might have belonged to some elder daughter or maiden aunt who had acted as housekeeper, as it commanded the wing and the servants' offices with easy access to the central hall.

There followed a week of inactivity, in which Brant felt a singular resemblance in this southern mansion to the old casa at Robles. The afternoon shadows of the deep verandas recalled the old monastic gloom of the Spanish house, which even the presence of a lounging officer or waiting orderly could not entirely dissipate, and the scent of the rose and jasmine from his windows overcame him with sad memories. He began to chafe under this inaction, and long again for the excitement of the march and bivouac — in which for the past four years he had buried his past.

He was sitting one afternoon alone before his reports and dispatches when this influence seemed so strong that he half impulsively laid them aside to indulge in a long reverie. He was recalling his last day at Robles, the early morning duel with Pinckney, the return to San Francisco, and the sudden resolution which sent him that day across the continent to offer his services to the government. He remembered his delay in the western town where a volunter regiment was being recruited, his entrance into it as a private, his rapid selection, through the force of his sheer devotion and intelligent concentration, to the captaincy of his company, his swift promotion on hard-fought fields to the head of the regiment, and the singular success that had followed his resistless energy which left him no time to think of anything but his duty. The sudden intrusion of his wife upon his career—even in this accidental and perhaps innocent way, had seriously unsettled him.

The shadows were growing heavier and deeper, it lacked only a few moments of the sunset bugle when he was recalled to himself by that singular instinctive consciousness — common to humanity—of being intently looked at. He turned quickly — the door behind him closed softly. He rose and slipped into the hall. The tall figure of a woman was coming down the passage. She was erect and graceful, but as she turned toward the door leading to the offices, he distinctly saw the gaudily turbaned head and black silhouette of a negress. Nevertheless he halted a moment at the door of the next room.

"See who that woman is who just passed, Mr. Martin. She doesn't seem to belong to the house."

The young officer rose, put on his cap and departed. In a few moments he returned.

"Was she tall, sir—of a good figure and very straight?"

"Yes."

"She is a servant of our neighbors the Manlys, who occasionally visits the servants here. A mulatto, I think."

Brant reflected. Many of the mulattos and negresses were of good figure, and the habit of carrying burdens on their heads gave them a singularly erect carriage.

The lieutenant looked at his chief.

"Have you any orders to give concerning her, general?"

"No," said Brant, after a moment's pause, and turned away.

The officer smiled. It seemed a good story to tell at mess of this human weakness of his handsome, reserved and ascetic-looking leader.

A few moments afterward Brant was interrupted over his reports by the almost abrupt entrance of the officer of the day. His face was flushed, and it was evident that only the presence of his superior restrained his excitement. He held a paper in his hand.

"A lady presents this order and pass from Washington, countersigned by the division general."

"A lady?"

"Yes, sir—she is dressed as such. But she has not only declined the most ordinary civilities and courtesies we have offered her, but has insulted Mr. Martin and myself grossly, and demands to be shown to you alone."

Brant took the paper. It was a special order from the president, passing Miss Matilda Faulkner through the federal lines, to visit her uncle's home, known as "Grey Oaks," now held and occupied as the headquarters of Brant's brigade, in order to arrange for the preservation and disposal of certain family effects and private property that still remained there, or to take or carry away such property, and invoking all necessary aid and assistance from the United States forces in such occupancy. It was countersigned by the division commander. It was perfectly regular and of undoubted authenticity. He had heard of passes of this kind—the terror of the army—issued in Washington under some strange controlling influence and against military protest, but he did not let his subordinate see the uneasiness with which it filled him.

"Show her in," he said, quietly.

But she had already entered, brushing scornfully past the officer, and drawing her skirt aside as if contaminated. A very pretty southern girl, scornful and red-lipped, clad in gray riding habit, and still carrying her riding whip clenched ominously in her slim, gauntletted hand.

"You have my permit in your hand," she said, brusquely, hardly raising her eyes to Brant—"I suppose it's all straight enough, and even if it isn't, I don't reckon to be kept waiting with those hirelings."

"Your 'permit' is 'straight enough,' Miss Faulkner," said Brant, slowly reading her name from the document before him, "but as it does not seem to include permission to insult my officers you will perhaps first allow them to retire." He made a sign to the officer, who passed out of the door. As it closed he went on in a gentle, but coldly unimpassioned voice. "I perceive you are a southern lady, and, therefore, I need not remind you that it is not considered good form to treat even the slaves of those one does not like uncivilly, and I must therefore expect that you will keep your active animosity for myself."

The young girl lifted her eyes. She had evidently not expected to meet a man so young, so handsome, so refined, and so coldly invincible in manner. Still less was she prepared for that kind of antagonism. In keeping up her preconcerted attitude toward the "northern hireling" she had been met with official brusqueness, contemptuous silence or aggrieved indignation—but nothing as exasperating as this. She even fancied that this elegant but sardonic-looking soldier was inwardly mocking her. She bit her red lip, but with a scornful gesture of her riding whip said:

"I reckon that your knowledge of southern ladies is, for certain reasons, not very extensive."

"Pardon me. I have had the honor of marrying one."

Apparently more exasperated than before she turned upon him abruptly. "You say my pass is all right. Then I presume I may attend to the business that brought me here."

"Certainly, but you will forgive me if I imagined that an expression of contempt for your host was a part of it." He rang a bell on the table. It was responded to by an orderly. "Send all the household servants here."

The room was presently filled with the dusky faces of the negro retainers. Here and there was the gleaming of white teeth, but a majority of the assembly wore the true negro acceptance of the importance of "an occasion." One or two even affected an official and soldierly bearing. And as he fully expected there were several glances of significant recognition of the stranger.

"You will give," said Brant, sternly, "every aid and attention to the wants of this young lady, who is here to represent the interests of your old master. As she will be entirely dependent upon you in all things connected with her visit here, see to it that she does not have to complain to me of any inattention—or to be obliged to ask for other assistance."

As Miss Faulkner, albeit a trifle paler in the cheek, but as scornful as ever, was about to follow the servant from the room, Brant stopped her with a coldly courteous gesture:

"You will understand, therefore, Miss Faulkner, that you have your wish, and that you will not be exposed to any contact with the members of my military family, nor they with you."

"Am I then to be a prisoner in this house—and under a free pass of—your—president!" she said, indignantly.

"By no means. You are free to come and go and see whom you please. I have no power to control your actions. But I have power to control theirs."

She swept furiously from the room. "That is quite enough to fill her with a desire to flirt with every man here," said Brant to himself, with a faint smile, "but I fancy they have had a taste enough of her quality." Nevertheless, he sat down and wrote a few lines to the division commander, pointing out that he had already placed the owner's private property under strict surveillance, that it was cared for and perfectly preserved by the household servants, and that the pass was evidently obtained as a subterfuge. To this he received a formal reply regretting that the authorities of Washington still found it necessary to put this kind of risk and burden on the army in the field, but that the order emanated from the highest authority and must be strictly obeyed. At the bottom of the page, however, was a characteristic line in pencil in the general's own hand: "Not the kind that is dangerous." A flush mounted Brant's cheeks, as if it contained not only a hidden but a personal significance. He thought of his own wife.

Singularly enough, a day or two later, at dinner, the conversation turned upon the intense sectional feeling of southern women—probably induced by their late experiences, and Brant, at the head of the table, in his habitual abstraction, was scarcely following the somewhat excited diction of Col. Strangeways, one of his staff. "No, sir," reiterated the indignant warrior, "take my word for it! a southern woman isn't to be trusted on this point, whether as sister, sweetheart, or wife. And when she is trusted she is bound to get the better of a man in any of those relations!" The dead silence that followed, the ominous joggle of a glass at the speaker's elbow, the quick, sympathetic glance that Brant instinctively felt was directed to his own face, and the abrupt change of subject, could not but arrest his attention—even if he had overlooked the speech. His face, however, betrayed nothing. It had never occurred to him before that his family affairs might be known—neither had he ever thought of keeping them a secret. It seemed so purely a personal and private misfortune—that he had never dreamed of it having any public interest. And even now he was a little ashamed of what he believed was his sensitiveness to mere conventional criticism, which, with the instinct of a proud man, he had despised.

He was not far wrong in his sardonic intuition of the effect of his prohibition upon Miss Faulkner's feelings. Certainly that young lady, when not engaged in her mysterious occupation of arranging her uncle's effects, occasionally was seen in the garden, and in the woods beyond. Although her presence was the signal for the "oblique" of any lounging "shoulder strap" or the vacant "front" of a posted sentry, she seemed to regard their occasional proximity with less active disfavor. Once when she had mounted the wall to gather a magnolia blossom, the chair by which she had ascended rolled over, leaving her on the wall. At a signal from the guard room two sappers and miners appeared, carrying a scaling ladder, which they placed silently against the wall, and as silently withdrew. On another occasion the same spirited young lady, whom Brant was satisfied would have probably imperiled her life under fire, in devotion to her cause, was brought ignominiously to lay in the field by that most appalling of domestic animals—the wandering and untrammeled cow. Brant could not help smiling as he heard the quick, harsh call to "turn out guard," saw the men marched solidly with fixed bayonets to the vicinity of the affrighted animal, who fled, leaving the fair stranger to walk shame-facedly to the house. He was surprised, however, that she should have halted before his door, and with tremulous indignation said:

"I thank you, sir, for your chivalrousness in turning a defenseless woman into ridicule."

"I regret, Miss Faulkner," began Brant, gravely, "that you should believe that I am able to control the advances of farmyard cattle as easily as—" but he stopped as he saw that the angry flash of her blue eyes, as she darted from him, were set in tears. A little remorseful on the following day, he added a word to his ordinary cap lifting when he passed her, but she retained a reproachful silence. Later in the day he received from her servant a respectful request for an interview, and was relieved to find that she entered his presence with no trace of her former aggression—but rather with the resignation of a deeply injured, yet not entirely unforgiving woman.

"I thought," she began, coldly, "that I ought to inform you that I would probably be able to conclude my business here by the day after to-morrow, and that you would then be relieved of my presence. I am aware, indeed," she added, bitterly, "I could scarcely help perceiving, that it has been an exceedingly irksome one."

"I trust," began Brant, coldly, "that no gentleman of my command has—"

"No!" she interrupted him quickly, with a return of her former manner, and a passionate sweep of her hand, "do you suppose for a moment that I am speaking—that I am even thinking of them! What are they to me?"

CYCLING COMMENT.

The F. L. C. Martin Cycle Company received a shipment of fifteen Cleveland wheels yesterday.

The annual century run of the Associated Cycling Clubs of New Jersey will be held on June 13th, either from Newark to Asbury Park or Newark to Princeton and return.

After riding 4,300 miles on his wheel last year Fred Bird, of East Front street, is so pleased with it that he says he will ride it this year and will equal his last year's record.

The Union County Roadsters have declined to change their present quarters to the Laban mansion on Main street, Rahway. The club has now a membership of over 2,000. It is not likely that the club will have a race meet this year.

A request for a franchise is now pending before the South Orange Township Committee to allow the North Jersey Traction Company to build a trolley line in Springfield avenue over the famous Irvington-Millburn bicycle course. The building of the road will spoil the course for racing.

The executive committee of the L. A. W. has unanimously decided to reduce the sanction fees for open race meets from $10 to $5, and $2 for each additional day. This was raised from $2 by the National Assembly. The fee of $25 for national circuit race meets remains the same.

The rain and chilly weather does not lessen the demand for Cleveland and Crescent wheels at the salesrooms of the F. L.C. Martin Cycle Company. Among the latest purchasers are Geo. A. Babcock, of Westerly, R. I., a Cleveland, model 16; A. Krog, Crescent, No. 9; W. A. Pinto, Cleveland, model 18, and a Crescent No. 3; Miss J. Scribner, Mrs. E. F. Ege, Mrs. S.F. Kimball, Clevelands, model 23.

The constant dread of the cyclist is a puncture on the road, and a quick method of repairing one is greatly appreciated by all riders. The latest thing is an "emergency strap." It consists of a rubber patch that can be tightly strapped over the puncture. By placing some chewing gum over the hole in the tire a leak is temporarily stopped. The "emergency strap" is a great improvement over tire tape. The F. L. C. Martin Cycle Company is agent for it.

"Teddy" Goodman, of the Riverside Wheelmen, is on a two weeks' visit to his old home at Lockport, where his grandparents still reside. On last Saturday night he, with his clubmate, "Joe" Judge, participated in the games of the Sixty-fifth Regiment, at Buffalo, and each won a first and second prize. Goodman is considered by far the best board floor rider in New York State. He is well known among the attendants at the local race meets, and has always been a great favorite here.

VARICUS SPORTS.

The New York Athletic Club will hold an open cross-country handicap for all amateurs under Amateur Athletic Union rules on Saturday, April 18th.

A half mile foot race will be run on April 10th at the Gentlemen's Driving Park. The contestants are to be Charles Nichols and William Gratton. The contest will be for a purse.

Arrangements are being made between the managers of the St. Nicholas Skating Club, of New York, and Albert P. Simmonds, on the part of the Plainfield Hockey Club, for a game between the two clubs at the former's rink at New York. If the game is played it will probably be on next Wednesday evening.

AT THE TRAPS.

The threatening weather of yesterday kept many away from the trap shooter's tournament at Elizabeth. The thick mist and heavy rain of the morning prevented any high scores, but it managed to clear off in the afternoon when the wind rose, Apgar carried off the honors among the Plainfield men, winning one event, securing second in three, third in three, and fourth in three. T. H. Keller won one second money, four third moneys, and one fourth money. C. Smith finished second in one event, third in one, and fourth in two.

STRIKES AND SPARES.

Another head-pin tournament is being started among the bowlers of the Crescent Wheelmen for the month of April. It will begin next Monday and three prizes will be given.

The closing night of the head-pin tournament for March at the Crescent Wheelmen's alleys was an exciting time. Wheaton S. Lowry made another attempt to break the record after four times scoring 113, only one pin behind Harry VanEmburgh's record. After rolling nine strikes in eleven frames, his score stood 106, and the excitement rose to a fever heat. When he rolled the ball for his last frame everybody held their breath. The ball went straight for the head pin and struck it squarely. There was a shout of "He's got it," and then the crowd saw that only seven pins had fallen, and instead of a strike he had received a split, making his total 113 for the fifth time. That was the narrowest escape the record had that night.

Pat's Retort.

Pat has turned up again in a collection of anecdotes. Here is a specimen of his wit lately come to hand:

A one-legged Yankee orator, who had been very successfully chaffing an Irishman, was finally asked:

"I say, sor, how did yez lose your leg?"

"Well," replied the Yankee, "I found, when I came to look up my ancestry, that I had a little Irish blood in my veins, and becoming convinced that it had settled in my left leg, I had it cut off at once."

"Be jabers!" cried Pat. "Phot a pity it hadn't shettled in your head!"—Harper's Young People.

Didn't Need Him.

"You talk mighty independent," said the ward heeler, with an ugly scowl, "but let me tell you, boss, you'll never run your little boom through my precinct unless I do the steerin'."

"I think I'll get along without you," replied the candidate. "If I need to have any steering done, sir, there are rudders."

And he sternly bowed him out.—Chicago Tribune.

His First Impression.

"That umbrella you lent me yesterday—" said the man who had just come into the office.

"Yes?"

"Here it is. I came to return it."

"Dear me," was the absent-minded reply, "I had no idea it was in such bad condition as all that!"—Washington Star.

MUCH LITTLE BUSINESS.

THE BOROUGH COUNCIL DISPOSE OF SEVERAL MINOR MATTERS.

Bonds of the Various Officials Filed—A Dispute Over a Bill of Election Officers—The Memorial Day Appropriation.

Much business of great and small importance was transacted at the regular April meeting of the Borough Council last evening, and all the members were present to look after it.

After the minutes of the last meeting were read and approved, Clerk Arnold presented his financial report as follows:

	Balance.	Deficit.
Borough	$1,654.84
Fire department		107.39
Light	1,079.74
Roads	102.10
Poor		102.10
	$3,198.56	$209.49
	$2,989.07 total Balance.

He also reported $8.50 collected as fines and license money. The report was received and filed as was also the report of Tax Collector H. N. Spencer, who reported as follows:

Taxes collected for 1893 since last report, $30.97; for 1894, $133.20; and the following for 1895:

County tax	$57.12
State School	36.72
Borough	27.20
Light	31.28
Road	27.20
Fire Department	19.04
Poor	9.52
Poll	2.00
Dog	2.00
	$212.08
Board of Health	$ 4.08
Special school tax	68.00
	$ 72.08
	212.08
Balance	$ 284.16
Previously reported	37,670.83
	$37,954.99

A communication was received from W. W. Coriell, of Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., as secretary of the Memorial Detail, asking Council to assist them in the proper observance of Memorial Day. It was received and filed.

Dr. J. H. Carman in a letter stated that he had removed from the borough and that he therefore tendered his resignation as a member of the Board of Health to take effect April 1st. The matter was referred to the committee on Streets and Public Health.

A petition was received from R. G. Silvers, H. K. Carroll and others, asking that Westervelt avenue to Brook avenue, and Brook avenue from Westervelt avenue to Chatham street be macadamized. This was also referred to the Street and Public Health Committee.

Residents on Duer street petitioned for a crosswalk on their street across Linden avenue on the south side where it intersects Duer street. The petition was referred to the proper committee, as was also the petition of Robert Carson and others asking that Belmont avenue, from Brook to Mountain avenues, be accepted by the borough. The petitions agreed to give the necessary amount of property to the borough for a street and sidewalks.

George Kirch, of Somerset street, petitioned Council for the priviledge of erecting a wooden shed in front of the property at 196 and 198 somerset street. It was referred to the Fire, Water and Lamp Committee.

At this point Clerk Arnold read the usual batch of bills, among them being bills from D. J. Carney and W. N. Pangborn for $4.20. Mr. Pangborn said that he had performed services for which Mr. Carney had presented a bill—that of carrying the election returns to Somerville to file with the County Clerk. He asked that the bills be referred and investigated. It was so ordered. Mr. Carney told a Press reporter that Mr. Pangborn was mistaken as to the services for which he made the charge. He did not take the returns to Somerville, but took the registry lists before election, which the law says shall be filed with the County Clerk, therefore his charge was for an entirely different service.

It was so ordered and the balance of the bills were ordered paid, after certification by the auditing committee.

Mr. Woolston said that owing to the small number of bids received for furnishing crushed stone, he desired to wait till the next meeting before making a report.

A resolution was offered by Mr. Peck, that the Mayor and Clerk negotiate a loan of $1,000 and charge the same to the fire department account. It was adopted.

Mr. McLaughlin offered a resolution that $25 be given for Decoration Day observance to be used by the G. A. R. Posts of this city. Mr. Valiant stated that the Council should put the matter clear before the public and that the resolution should read $25 for the G. A. R. Posts of this city. The former resolution was withdrawn and Mr. Schutt offered one covering the points mentioned. The resolution was adopted unanimously.

W. C. Smith was given the floor and spoke in behalf of the appropriation and urged that it be made. He cited other places where it was done and he thought the borough should do it also.

Mr. Woolston and other members favored the appropriation and there was not a dissenting vote.

The following bonds, with amount and bondsmen, were presented: Chief Marshal William A. Wilson, $500, W. C. Smith and F. M. Whitely; Overseer of Poor D. R. Weaver, $500, J. P. Humble and Augustus Winckler; Constable Peter Hansen, $500, Jacob Voehl and Henry Hansen; Constable J. W. Van Horn, $500, Jacob Voehl and Thomas Rutledge; Collector H. N. Spencer, $15,000, Jacob Voehl, J. H. Cooley and A. I. Smalley. They were referred to the laws, ordinances and election committee and later were reported back correct.

The ordinance relating to the renumbering of Westervelt avenue was taken up and passed to a second reading and laid on the table for final adoption.

The street and public health committee reported that $2,663 had been expended on the streets this year.

Mr. Woolston said that Mr. Cooley had asked Council to lay a crosswalk on Rockview avenue in front of his property. He saw no reason why it should be placed there, but thought one should be placed on Rockview avenue at its intersection with Mercer avenue. A resolution to that effect was adopted.

Mayor Hegeman at this time appointed F.M. Whitely, Jules Stephany and W. N. Pangborn as special marshals, and Mr. Lounsbury offered a resolution that they be confirmed which was done.

In regard to the resignation of Dr. Carman, Mr. Valiant moved it be accepted and that the Clerk express to him the Council's appreciation of his excellent services. It was so ordered.

The Mayor then appointed Dr. D. C. Adams in Dr. Carman's place.

The Mayor stated that the Commissioners would probably be ready to report on the Watchung avenue extension in about two weeks and advised that a resolution be offered that the Council meet again on Friday, April 17th.

The resolution was offered by Mr. McLaughlin and he set the hour of meeting at 8 o'clock, sharp. Council then adjourned.

IN HIS NAME.

King's Daughters Hold a Pleasant and Profitable Sale.

Funds are a very necessary adjunct to charitable work and to increase the amount of them in the treasury, the Golden Rod Circle of King's Daughters held a fair yesterday afternoon and evening, at the home of E. P. Stevens, 65 Grandview avenue. The booths were prettily arranged in the back parlor and here delicious home-made candies, cakes, bread and lemonade were sold, while one booth was devoted to groceries. They were presided over by the following: Candy table, the Misses Emma Stevens and Libbie Stevens; grocery store, the Misses May Conroy and Emma LaBoyteau; cake table, Miss Lizzie Hoagland; bread table, Miss Bertha Stevens; lemonade booth, Miss Mary Hoagland.

In the dining room, tables were set and here the visitors were served to light refreshments by the Misses Agnes LaBoyteau, Flossie Conroy, Lucetta Clark and Mabel Stevens. The president of the circle, Mrs. A. M. West, had general charge of the fair and assisted in making the fair a success.

Although the attendance was not large in the afternoon, in the evening quite a number attended and a brisk sale of the good things followed. During the evening an informal musical programme was given by the Misses May Conray, Libbie Joseph and Mabel Benner. The proceedings of the fair will be devoted to some charitable purpose.

C. G. McDavett, of New York, and George P. Smith, of Plainfield, a committee from the National Interscholastic Athletic Association, met Harry Cornish, of the New Manhattan Athletic Club, on Thursday evening relative to the running of the national meet by the N. M. A. C. Nothing definite was decided at the conference, however.

THE GREATEST TRAGEDY.

UNION GOOD FRIDAY SERVICE COMMEMORATES CHRIST'S DEATH.

A Large Congregation Gathered in Grace P. E. Church to Hear Local Clergyman Preach From the Words of the Cross.

The tie which binds together Plainfield's Christians of all denominations is never felt more strongly than during Holy Week, when all meet together in a common service, to worship the Lord who was crucified for all alike, whether Presbyterian, Baptist or Episcopalian.

The Union Good Friday service was held this year in Grace P. E. Church, and a very large congregation filled the beautiful building. It was an unusually solemn and impressive service from beginning to end. The cross upon the altar, draped heavily with black, was a solemn reminder of the greatest tragedy in the world's history, which that congregation had met to comemorate.

The service began with the entrance of the choir, singing the processional, carrying a tall, black-draped cross, and followed by the clergymen who were to assist in the service. The Penitential Office and prayers followed, led by Rev. Jocelyn Johnstone, after which Dr. C. R. Barnes stepped forward to the lectern and read the lesson. Reverently the choir and congregation sang, "When I survey the wondrous Cross;" then followed the meditations on the words from the cross. The first, "Father forgive them, for they know not what they do," was commented upon by Rev. Jocelyn Johnstone. We, he said, were we to be called upon to face death, would think first of our unworthiness to enter Heaven, and would confess our sins. But with Jesus there was no such confession. He had done no wrong; He had no such fear for Himself, and his prayer was for His enemies.

Rev. J. W. Richardson spoke upon the second word, "Verily I say unto thee, today shalt thou be with me in in Paridise." If Christ was willing to make this promise to such a man at such a time, how much more willing He must be to make it to us who love and try to serve Him. It should take the dread of death away from us entirely; it is no dreamless sleep that Jesus promises, but as the literal translation gives it, a "pleasure garden," that you may enter "today."

"Behold the Lamb of God" was now sung, then Dean E. M. Rodman spoke upon "Behold thy Son, behold thy Mother." In these words Christ sanctified the relations of the home; let us have a care that our homes are such as He can approve.

"My God, my God, why hast Thou forsaken me?" was the words taken up by Dr. W. R. Richards. It might be as well, he said, if I should simply keep silent and let you think of these words. But there is one comfort that we may take to ourselves from them; we may have the companionship and sympathy of our Saviour in times of darkness and doubt. He has been through the shadows before us.

Rev. C. E. Herring spoke upon "I Thirst." It was not alone bodily thirst that our Lord felt; He thirsted for love, and for souls. He does still. He thirsts for yours, my brother. Have you given it to him?

Choir and people sang "Sweet the moments, rich in blessing," then Dr. Robert Lowry spoke upon the words "It Is Understood." The work of redemption was finished. Like all the works of God, it is complete. The great battle with the power of evil is over; Christ won it on Calvary.

The final word, "Father, Into Thy Hands I Commend My Spirit," was commented upon by Dr. C. R. Barnes. Walk in the way of service that Jesus took, if you want to have the outlook into eternity that He had. Then you can peacefully commit your spirit to the loving Father, and in the midst of the cloud you will see the Good Shepherd, and "so shall you be forever with the Lord."

An offering was then received, while the choir sang "Come Unto Me." Then choir and congregation united in singing "Just as I Am." A moment of silent prayer, then closing prayers and benediction, by Dr. W. R. Richards, then singing "All Hail the Power of Jesus Name," choir and clergymen filed out of the chancel, leaving the congregation to go silently homeward, touched, impressed, and awed by the most solemn service of the Christian year.

TO SING SWEET CAROLS.

SPECIAL EASTER SERVICES TO BE HELD IN ALL THE CHURCHES.

Musical Programmes to be Prominent Features in Every Church.—Extensive Decorations of Flowers and Palms.

Weather Observer Neagle tells The Press that we are to have fair and warmer weather for tomorrow, but if Aeolus does not cease his windy tactics and Old Sol does not send forth more piercing rays of warmth, Easter day will not combine all the pleasurable elements for mankind that the mind delights to picture as ideal. CLOSE TO BEING A CENTENARIAN.

Miss Susan Honeyman Passes Her Ninety-First Birthday.

One of the pleasant features accompanying old age is to be kindly remembered by those younger in years. Such was the case Wednesday afternoon, when Mrs. Susan Honeyman, of Grove street, celebrated the ninety-first anniversary of her birthday at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Dr. D. C. Adams, of Grove street. It was a delightful event, and the hostess enjoyed it to the fullest extent. Those present were the family of her son, J. Newton Honeyman, her daughter, Mrs. N. P. Todd, of Atlantic Highlands, and Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Dunham, of Bound Brook. During the afternoon two very interesting letters were read, one from her daughter, Mrs. Carmon Parse, who is now in Knoxville, Tenn., and the other from her seven-year-old great great granddaughter, Cozella Corbett, of Le Roy, Minn.

The afternoon was one of real pleasure to all and the excellent refreshments served added not a little in completing the event. Each one wished their hostess many years of true happiness and health.

SUING FOR A DIVORCE.

Mrs. Aten Names Desertion as the Charge for Her Prosecution.

Charles A. Reed, as special master in Chancery, this morning took testimony in the divorce proceedings of Elizabeth Aten against her husband, Alfred Aten. Aten is a moulder and formerly worked at the Pond Machine Tool Works and at Potter's Press Works in this city but is now located at Worcester, Mass. The couple were married in 1892 at Westfield by Justice Collins, the bride being a Somerville girl. Aten, however, proved an unfaithful husband and after a year of unhappiness left his wife and went to Massachusetts. There, so it is said, he became infatuated with another girl and was engaged to marry her, when the latter learned of his first escapade in the matrimonial line and jilted him. Mrs. Aten names desertion as the charge on which she prosecutes her suit. Lawyer John Frech, of Somerville, is conducting her case. Aten makes no defense. The testimony will be submitted to Chancellor McGill, who will probably grant a divorce. Both the husband and wife are about twenty-eight years of age.

MISS HUMBLE'S RECEPTION.

A Number of Young People Pleasantly Entertained Last Night.

Miss Mattie Humble gave a very pleasant reception to a few of her friends last evening, at her home on Somerset street. The rooms were very prettily decorated with pinks and roses, presenting a bright and cheerful appearance. The evening was passed in playing games and listening to excellent instrumental and vocal music, after which refreshments were served. Those who accepted Miss Humble's hospitality were Miss Stackhouse, Miss Jenkins, Miss Lizzie Stafford, Miss Margaret Schuck, Miss Linbarger, Robert Davis, Wm. Simmonds, Bert Steiner, James Stafford, Wm. Moore, Walter Linbarger, of Plainfield, George Richardson and Wm. Richardson of Dunellen.

The annual century run of the Associated Cycling Clubs of New Jersey will be held on Saturday, June 13th. The route will be either Newark to Asbury Park, or Newark to Princeton and return. It will pass through Plainfield in either case.

During the winter of 1893, F. M. Martin, of Long Reach, West Va., contracted a severe cold which left him with a cough. In speaking of how he cured it he says: "I used several kinds of cough syrup but found no relief until I bought a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, which relieved me almost instantly, and in a short time brought about a complete cure." When troubled with a cough or cold use this remedy and you will not find it necessary to try several kinds before you get relief. It has been in the market for over twenty years and constantly grown in favor and popularity. For sale at 25 and 50 cents per bottle at Armstrong's pharmacy, Park and North avenues.

DIDN'T STOP TO DISPUTE

MRS. BISHOP ORDERS BOYS OFF HER PROPERTY WITH A REVOLVER.

A Party of City Young Fellows Want to Make a Short Cut and Bring up Against a Woman With a Will.

A party of young men from this city had the novel and not particularly pleasant experience of being ordered around at the point of a revolver yesterday afternoon. The party consisted of Bertram Rockwell, Archibald Butler, Will Pike, Garfield Pike, David Scott, Lester Baldwin, William DeLong and Thomas Blair, and they had taken a stroll on the mountain during the afternoon. After visiting the "lookout," they started to walk over to see the Mountain View Hotel. On their way over they had to pass by the solitary house that is occupied by Mrs. Bishop. Instead of going around by the road they took the short cut that passed close to the house. Several of the young men had already gone by when a woman appeared in the doorway and ordered them back. As several of the party were past the property the remaining ones followed despite the orders of the woman. They went over to the hotel and went through it.

As they wished to return to the "lookout" the party started to recross the disputed property, taking care to give the home of Mrs. Bishop a wider berth than before. They had not gone very far, however, when Mrs. Bishop appeared again, this time leading her dog. She walked straight up to Garfield Pike, who happened to be in the lead and, pointing a revolver at him, ordered him and his companions to get off her property. The sight of the revolver rather surprised the young men but several of them prepared to fight. Pike then inquired how far down her property extended and she told him to the road.

Deciding that discretion was the better part of valor, the young men retraced their steps and went back by the road while Mrs. Bishop retired to the house.

Mr. Jaquett in His New Store.

One of the best equipped gents' furnishing goods store in the city is the one conducted by H. M. Jaquett, on East Front street. Mr. Jaquett is now located in his handsome new store and is ready to do business. He has a full and complete line of white shirts, neckwear, collars and cuffs, all in the latest styles. He has also a fine line of men's suits and trousers. A special feature will be the children's department with suits and trousers to fit any child. Don't forget he carries a complete stock of the latest style hats, and the best part of it all is that these goods can be purchased to suit anyone's pocketbook. Those who visit this store will find the genial and popular Jerry VanWinkle, Jr., who studies to please his customers.

Amherst College Concert.

The Amherst College Musical Association gave a concert in Union Hall last evening before a large and decidedly friendly audience. The organization consists of a glee club, a banjo club and a mandolin club. The glee club is composed of fresh and excellent voices, among which are some basses of splendid sonority. Their singing was spirited and tuneful, and it had a heartiness and a sincerity that were very very attractive. The banjo and mandolin playing were remarkably good. The programme was of a popular order, and it was frankly and interestingly rendered. The audience was vigorously applausive, and almost every selection was encored.—Boston Herald. The club will give a concert in the Casino Monday evening.

Mischievous Boys.

A crowd of boys have lately been invading the property bordering Green brook, just west of the Washington avenue bridge and Abraham Angleman and Lemuel E. Hart, who live on West Front street, have been complaining about certain eggs and pigeons that have been missing. Signs have been put up and it will go hard with any other offenders that are caught.

Missionary Anniversary.

Next Wednesday evening the Woman's Home Missionary Society of the First M. E. church will celebrate its anniversary in the church. An excellent programme has been arranged and it is expected that one of the best speakers in the denomination will deliver an address.

It will be an agreeable surprise to persons subject to attacks of bilious colic to learn that prompt relief may be had by taking Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. In many instances the attack may be prevented by taking this remedy as soon as the first symptoms of the disease appear. 25 and 50c bottles for sale at Armstrong's pharmacy, Park and North avenues.

TRADE IS IMPROVING

In Some Branches, However, the Gain Is Hardly Noticeable.

BACKWARD SEASON A HINDRANCE

Spring Purchases Must Lessen the Already Small Stock and Compel Buying—Low Prices Still Generally the Rule.

New York, April 4.—Dun's review of the state of trade for the week just closing will, to-day, say: The improvement expected with spring weather begins, though in some branches of business scarcely visible. As consumers make spring purchases they must lessen stocks and compel buying. The stocks taken in advance of consumers' demands last summer have been distributed far more slowly than was expected, but months of waiting have lessened the load which it is hoped spring buying will clear away. The backward season has been a hindrance, and the number of hands unemployed in important industries, and the low prices of farm products. Apprehensions of foreign or financial difficulties have hindered, but are now scarcely felt. Gold exports are rumored, but at this season are so far natural that they have no such power to cause alarm as they had in winter.

Iron and Steel Industry.

The gigantic steel combination is expected to have a great influence in sustaining markets and stimulating confidence, and, though such operations often miss the success they seek, they rarely fail to kindle speculative buying for a time. The sudden advance of $2 a ton in billets a week ago has raised Bessemer pig $1 at Pittsburg, and the demand for structural forms increases in expectation that prices will rise. Nail associations have given notice of another advance of 15 cts. at the end of this month. Bars have been greatly demoralized, some manufacturers now hoping to reestablish the combination, as steel bars will become dearer. But No. 1 foundry is slightly lower at Philadelphia, and the demand for finished products does not yet improve. The steel concerns propose to restrict production by allotment.

Boots and Shoes; Cottons and Woolens.

Less encouragement appears in the boot and shoe trade, as buyers hesitate, though leather is still firmly held. Hides continue to fall sharply, having declined since January 1, 18.5 per cent. against only 7.8 per cent. in leather and 10.9 per cent. in boots and shoes, with part of the factories idle or working short force. The demand is not yet up to the average, though prices are about as low as ever. Shipments from Boston for the month were the lowest in five years, and for the quarter nearly 20 per cent. less than last year, and only 1.6 per cent. larger than in 1894. The woolen manufacturer does not gain in orders, and a large part of the machinery is stopped. Prices of wool have fallen 7½ per cent., the average of 104 quotations being 13.62 cents. Sales in March were smaller than in any other month since June, 1894. Cotton mills still pile up goods in advance of orders, as reductions in prices have failed as yet to stimulate buying.

COAL MINERS' STRIKE.

Dangerous Condition of Affairs Reported at Barnesboro, Pa.

Phillipsburg, Pa., April 4.—Phillipsburg coal operators interested in mines at Barnesboro report a somewhat dangerous condition of affairs at that place, on account of a strike by the drivers for $1.80 per day. The three mines of the Aniston company were idle, but the company finally granted the demand. The Sterling company's No. 11 mine is idle, while the Delta company has succeeded in obtaining a few men to go to work. Those who are at work, fearing an attack on the part of those on strike, have armed themselves and threaten to shoot if interfered with. Barnesboro is a new mining town in Cambria county, this state.

Civil Service Extended.

Washington, April 4.—The president has further amended the civil service rules by placing under the classified service the assistant attorneys and law clerks of the department of the interior. This order includes about thirty persons whose salaries range from $2,000 to $2,750 per annum.

Schooner Captain Skips Out.

Gloucester, Mass., April 4.—Captain Orren Hawkins, of the schooner Rienzi that arrived here a few days ago, is missing and his whereabouts are unknown. On arrival here the fish were sold by the captain who took the proceeds, and, it is stated, left for Liverpool, N. S.

To Encourage Female Emigration.

Montreal, April 4.—A meeting for the purpose of organizing an association for the promotion of female emigration to the northwest territories has been held in Toronto. The Canadian Pacific Railway officials have offered reduced rates to such emigrants.

Snow Storm at Bangor.

Bangor, Me., April 4.—Bangor was cut off from communication with Boston by wire nearly all of yesterday owing to the heavy snow storm, which loaded down the wires, so damp was the snow. About six inches of snow fell here and the wind blew a gale.

In Favor of One Cent Postage.

Washington, April 4.—Finley Acker of the Trades' league of Philadelphia yesterday afternoon addressed the house postoffice committee in favor of a bill making the rate on letter postage one cent for each half ounce.

THE WAR IN CUBA.

Gen. Weyler Highly Nervous and the Insurgents Hopes Are Bright.

Havana, April 1, via Tampa, Fla., April 4.—Army operations have been pushed with great vigor for the past month. The insurgents have been kept moving, their camps have been destroyed and a dozen of their hospitals have been burned during the month that has just passed, but the government has not forced a single battle upon the rebels. The only serious engagements have been those in which the insurgents, having the advantage of position or numbers, assumed the offensive and defeated the regular troops of Spain. There have been many rear guard skirmishes, which appeared in the Spanish official reports as battles and victories for the crown, but upon investigation appeared to be massacres of unarmed citizens, and there have been more tales of horrors committed than battles fought.

Insurgents' Hopes Never Brighter.

The insurgents have gained more in the past month than in any two that have preceded it. Weyler's decrees compelling people to abandon their homes in the interior has driven many peaceable inhabitants into the rebel armies. The harsh measures adopted toward suspects in cities and towns have also increased the number of recruits from families of the better class in cities. The landing of four important expeditions has given inspiration to the Cuban arms. Their hopes were never brighter. Hot weather is already here, and the rains are not far off. The limited time remaining for military operations this spring makes it plain that Spain cannot crush the rebellion before the wet season sets in, and the serious problem of caring for the lives of her soldiers presents itself. A Spanish officer says that the losses of the army through fevers and other sicknesses have been 12,000 since September, and over 25,000 during the year ending March 1.

Weyler Extremely Nervous.

There is much dissatisfaction among officers of high grade. Gen. Weyler has been in a highly nervous state for several days, and many stormy interviews between him and men he has sent for have taken place. His troubles with the politicians are only beginning. Since advices that the United States will not recognize the belligerency of the Cubans, Weyler has begun anew the executions of prisoners of war. Three have been shot at Cabanos prison within a week, and more are doomed to the same fate.

AMERICAN TIN PLATE.

Remarkable Growth of the Industry During the Past Year.

New York, April 4.—The quarterly review of the American tin plate manufacturing industry, published in the Mental Worker this week, shows that seventy-three firms are now ready to engage in the manufacture of tin plates in the United States. Thirty-four of these corncerns are what is known as dipping plants, which merely coat black steel sheets purchased in the market and finish them into tin plates. The remaining thirty-nine concerns are tin plate works proper, that is to say, plants which roll and coat their own steel sheets. These thirty-nine works possess an aggregate of 172 hot mills, used for manufacturing the black steel plates which when coated constitute tin plates. In the first quarter of the year seventeen such mills were added to the works, increasing their annual capacity by over 500,000 boxes and bringing the present potential capacity of American tin plate mills up to about 5,200,000 boxes a year. Thus American tin plate manufacturers are now in a position to fill the whole of the consumptive demand for tin plates in the United States, apart from that proportion used by the packers and by the oil trade, which is still held by the Welsh trade.

BERMUDA RELEASED.

The Steamer Will Leave Puerto Cortez for New Orleans To-day.

London, April 4.—A private dispatch was received here last night announcing the release of the steamship Bermuda at Puerto Cortez. The vessel will sail to-day. Her destination is given as New Orleans. Ninety boxes of ammunition found aboard of her and which were seized are held by the Hondurian authorities. Col. Nunez is a passenger on the vessel.

An Oakdale, Mass., Shoemaker Missing.

Worcester, Mass., April 4.—Joseph Gilmette, aged 55, of Oakdale, has been missing since Thursday night. His friends and relatives fear he has been foully dealt with or that he has been accidentally drowned in the mill pond of the West Boylston Manufacturing company. The missing man is a shoemaker and has a family of five sons and three daughters.

THEY ARE FOR REED

New Hampshire Delegation Solid for the Maine Man.

A LETTER FROM THEM TO MANLEY

If Forced To Make a Second Choice They Will Try To Represent the Wishes of Their Constituents.

Concord, N. H., April 4.—Following is a copy of a self-explanatory, original telegram signed by the entire New Hampshire delegation to the republican national convention, which was sent from this city last night to J. H. Manley at Washington: "The New Hampshire delegation were accredited to St. Louis by the state and districts conventions with the definite knowledge that they unitedly and earnestly favor the nomination of Mr. Reed and we shall give him our cordial support to that end. If forced to make a second choice, we shall try to represent faithfully the wishes of our constituents."

Senator Allison's Views.

Washington, April 4.—Senator Allison was very much amused when he saw a special dispatch in a New York newspaper announcing on what was said to be "the best authority" that he would within a few days write a letter defining the motives which led him to enter the contest for the republican nomination at St. Louis. The senator said with positiveness that he had no idea of writing a letter on that or any other subject connected with the republican convention. The article also stated that Mr. Allison was 71 years old. He could not see how this result was reached, for the reason that he was born March 2, 1829.

Quay Delegates Chosen.

Easton, Pa., April 4.—The republican convention of the eighth congressional district elected Gen. Frank Reeder and J. M. Dreisbach delegates to the St. Louis convention. They were not instructed but both are pronounced Quay men.

Instructed for Morton.

Batavia, N. Y., April 4.—At the thirtieth congressional district republican convention, held here, delegates to the national convention were elected and instructed to support Morton.

MURDER THE CHARGE.

A Well-Known Horseman of Providence in Serious Trouble.

Providence, April 4.—James Carpenter, a well known horseman of this city, was arraigned before Judge Sweetland shortly after 6 o'clock last evening charged with violently assaulting H. H. Morse, a hostler. He pleaded not guilty and the case was continued for trial until April 10 under $7,000 bond. At this time Morse was lying at the hospital in a precarious condition. At 7.45 o'clock he died. The direct cause of death was peritonitis. In a statement made to Coroner Lincoln before his death Morse stated that Carpenter knocked him down and kicked him in the abdomen last Tuesday in an altercation over $42, which Morse says Carpenter owed him. Carpenter will be rearrested and charged with murder.

POSTAL MONEY ORDERS.

Large Increase for the Last Quarter Over That of Any Preceding Quarter.

Washington, April 4.—Postmaster General Wilson has issued a statement showing a large increase in money order business for the last quarter over that of any preceding quarter, the receipts aggregating $105,755,971. The net revenue, $275,000, has never been equalled, except in the quarter ended December 31, 1893. The value of domestic orders issued was $49,000,000 against $44,000,000 in 1894 and the receipts were larger than those of the corresponding quarter of 1894 by $36,000.

Weather Too Bad for Practice.

New Haven, Conn., April 4.—The plans of the Yale 'varsity crew have become badly twisted. The fourteen candidates have been here since college closed on Tuesday and the weather has been so rough on the harbor that the men have been unable to go upon the water at all. Bob Cook and ex-Captains Johnson and Bolton were expected on Wednesday, but none of them has yet appeared.

Correspondent Rule Held Under Bail.

Washington, April 4.—James F. Rule, Washington correspondent of the Knoxville Journal and private secretary to representative Henry R. Gibson of Tennessee, has been held for the action of the grand jury in $300 bonds for criminal libel preferred by representative Franklin Bartlett of New York. Representative Gibson signed his bond.

One or the Other.

"It's hard to give satisfaction," said the new congressman, wearily.

"It's very difficult to tell what people are going to say about you," assented his wife.

"Yes. But it's pretty sure to be one of two things. They'll either say you're extremely ordinary or else that you're a freak."—Washington Star.

More Entertaining.

"Dickie, you must not play with that little boy in the lower flat—his family isn't as good as ours."

"Why, mamma, his family is a heap better'n ourn; he's got a cousin 'at's crazy, an' a brother 'at's in jail, an' a blind uncle, an' a deaf grandma."—Chicago Record.

In combination, proportion and process Hood's Sarsaparilla is peculiar to itself, and unequalled in true merit.

No other medicine ever possessed so much curative power, or reached such enormous sales, or made such wonderful cures, as Hood's Sarsaparilla.

It is undoubtedly the best medicine ever made to purify, vitalize and enrich the blood.

That is the secret of its success.

Read this statement:

"When my son was 7 years of age, he had rheumatic fever and acute rheumatism, which settled in his left hip. He was so sick that no one thought there was any help for him. Five sores broke out on his thigh, which the doctor said were sores. We had three different doctors. Pieces of bone came out of the sores. The last doctor said the leg would have to be cut open and the bone scraped, before he could get well. Howard became so low that he would eat nothing, and one doctor said there was no chance for him.

"One day, a newspaper recommending Hood's Sarsaparilla was left at our door. We decided to try this medicine. Howard commenced taking it the last of February, after having been sick for a year and a half. He hadn't taken it a week before I saw that his appetite began to improve, and then he gained rapidly. I gave him five bottles, when the sores were all healed and they never broke out again. Your Spring clothing

Rather early to speak of it, but if it needs cleaning or dyeing, it isn't too early to have us do that work for you. This is our dull season—our employes are here ready for work. We'd like to have your goods now. We can give them better attention than in the rush of the spring season. Then we'll have to have more time or rush them at the expense of good work. Now we can take our time, do the work better than if hurried and you'll have the clothing all ready for warm weather.

Look in the closet or trunk and find your spring wear that needs cleaning and dyeing and bring it to us now, or better still, our wagon will call for it if you will send us word.

SUNDAY CLOSING LAW

New York Excise Commissioner Will Not Enforce It.

A DUTY OF LOCAL PEACE OFFICERS

Mr. Lyman Very Busy Organizing His New Department—He Decides on Maynard N. Clement of Canandaigua as His Chief Deputy.

Albany, April 4.—State excise commissioner Henry H. Lyman has decided upon Maynard N. Clement of Canandaigua as his principal deputy, with a salary of $4,000. There were several applicants for the place. Mr. Clement was strongly recommended by the judges of his locality and others for the place now held by Mr. Lyman. Col. Lyman replied to a number of questions submitted to him last night. In his reply to the question whether he would enforce the Sunday closing feature of the law through his confidential agents he said that he would prefer that the peace officers of the different localities should enforce those provisions of the law, and he did not consider it incumbent on him to enforce Sunday closing through his agents. He explained that he did not expect any clashing or shifting of responsibility between district-attorneys and attorneys appointed by him in prosecuting cases. The attorneys of the department were to attend to proceedings of a civil and quasi-civil character. He said that as yet he had no knowledge what the action of the civil service commission would be with reference to placing the confidential agents under civil service rules. He was unable to say how the confidential agents would be distributed, or how many New York and the other large cities would have.

Working Night and Day.

In answer to inquiries as to how he was getting along with the organization of his department, Mr. Lyman said: "I am first required by the excise law to prepare the necessary books for my office and prepare and furnish to each special deputy commissioner and each county treasurer in the state the necessary account books, papers, application and consent blank bonds for applicants and the necessary blanks for reports, all of which must be uniform throughout the state. All this must be done as soon prior to May 1 as is possible so that the public and applicants may become familiar with the method of transaction of business adopted by the department. I am also required to prepare and send to the special deputies and county treasurers proper books, blank reports, etc., as soon prior to April 15 as is possible. It is obvious that the seasonable accomplishment of this work is a heavy task. I have utilized all the assistance I can obtain which may be useful. We are working day and night and hope that the public may not become unduly impatient in view of the magnitude of the work and the short time to which we are limited for its performance."

RECH AT MAYS LANDING.

Speedy Justice Expected in the Case of the Wife Murderer.

Mays Landing, N. J., April 3.—When John Rech stepped off the train of the West Jersey railroad near here last evening he looked into the faces of a crowd of several hundred people who had gathered to wait for him. Not the slightest demonstration or even a remark against the prisoner was made. Only the crowd surged and pushed, all anxious to see Rech. As the sheriff started from the depot with him Rech gave one scared look around at the crowd, and, on being reassured by the sheriff, kept his eyes towards the ground and never once looked up until safe within the jail. Jersey justice will probably be swift in Rech's case, as the grand jury meets in nine days and his trial will probably follow in a few days.

GOOD ROADS IN CONNECTICUT.

Time Allowed for Application for State Bounty Extended.

New Haven, Conn., April 4.—The Connecticut highway commission has notified the town officers of the state that the time for filing applications for the state bounty for improved roads has been extended to May 1, after which the bounty of $75,000 will be apportioned. As a number of towns, in addition to those applying last year, have made application, there is no doubt that the full sum will be called for, which means, under the law, a total expenditure for good roads this year of $225,000 in the state. The commission has fixed April 13 as the date for resuming work on the improved roads.

Charged with Stealing Calves.

El Paso, Tex., April 4.—Israel M. King, who is a member of the New Mexico legislature from Silver City, is under arrest in Juarez, Mexico, on the charge of stealing Mexican calves while driving cattle over the border at Palemas. He will have to stay in jail until his bond is approved at Chihuahua. The Washington authorities have been appealed to.

Does Not Want the Position.

Albany, April 4.—Col. Lyman has been notified that one of his four men named for a temporary clerkship in the state excise department, William L. Charlton of Peekskill, has declined to accept the office on the ground that it will not pay him well enough.

Mr. Harrison To Retain His Seat.

Washington, April 4.—House elections committee No. 1 has unanimously agreed to report in favor of Mr. Harrison, the sitting member, in the case of Robinson against Harrison in the Third Alabama district.

NORTH ATLANTIC SQUADRON.

Proposed Cruise Abandoned and the Warships Will Be Kept Intact This Summer.

Washington, April 4.—Secretary Herbert left Washington last night for Fort Monroe, Va., to spend about a week in inspecting the North Atlantic squadron, which has been held there since December last. During the secretary's stay the squadron will go outside the Virginia capes for two or three days of exercise at sea, and Mr. Herbert will have an opportunity of seeing what the officers and men of the squadron have learned since he accompanied them on their cruise last year. The battleship Indiana, now in dry dock at Port Royal, S. C., is expected to reach Hampton roads on Thursday next, and she will be immediately attached to the squadron. It is the intention of the navy department to make the squadron permanent, and during the coming summer a programme of evolutions will be executed along the Atlantic coast. The causes which operated to keep the squadron intact are apparently still alive. It was the intention of the department at the beginning of the winter just ended to send the squadron on a cruise to the West Indies and the Venezuelan coast. An itinerary of the cruise was prepared and made public, but shortly thereafter the president's Venezuelan message went to congress, the relations between the United States and Great Britain became somewhat strained for a time, and the cruise in British West Indian and Venezuelan waters was abandoned. Since that time the squadron has been lying in Hampton roads, and nothing as to the intention of the government respecting it has been made public.

NEW YORK M. E. CONFERENCE.

Work of Selecting Delegates to the General Conference To Be Completed To-day.

New York, April 4.—The New York Methodist Episcopal conference will to-day complete the work of electing delegates to the general conference at Cleveland, three remaining to be chosen, four, the Rev. James R. Day, D. D., chancellor of the Syracuse university; the Rev. E. S. Osbon of Kingston; the Rev. James M. King, D. D., of the Union Methodist Episcopal church, New York city, and the Rev. C. C. McCabe, D. D., corresponding secretary of the Missionary Society of the Methodist Episcopal church, having been elected yesterday afternoon. Two lay delegates were also elected to the general conference. They were John E. Andrus of Yonkers and Albert D. Peaks. The pastoral "time limit" question was discussed by the lay electoral conference, which passed a resolution to the effect "that the time limit be retained," by an almost unanimous vote.

PENSION RULINGS.

Important Decisions by Acting Secretary Reynolds.

Washington, April 4.—Acting Secretary Reynolds of the interior department has decided that the government cannot withhold a pension granted under the act of June 27, 1890, to reimburse itself for moneys erroneously paid as pension under the general law, when such pension was not procured by fraud. Another ruling concerning attorneys is that where an attorney, in his appeal with a view to showing right to a fee, attacks his client's title to pension, such objection cannot be considered in determining the merits of the appeal and the appeal itself will be dismissed. An important decision of Judge Reynolds is that the presumption from the fact that a soldier, while in a rebel prison, enlisted in the rebel army, is that he voluntarily aided and abetted the rebellion. But this presumption may be set aside by proof that it was his intention by enlisting to escape to the union forces.

LAWRENCE MILL SHUT DOWN.

About 2,500 Operatives, Most of Them French Canadians, Made Idle.

Lowell, Mass., April 4.—The No. 2 mill of the Lawrence Manufacturing corporation has been shut down in conformity with the decision of the directors to discontinue manufacturing cloth. Other portions of the cloth plant will be closed as fast as stock in process is finished up. The change in policy will throw out something less than half of the 5,000 operatives. Most of them are French Canadians whose labor as compared with that of operatives engaged on fine work in other mills, is relatively unskilled. Many of those people return to Canada every spring to stay through the summer and the only change to them will be that they go this year a little earlier than usual, and find some other place to work in the fall.

Death of Judge H. R. Russell.

Bridgeport, Conn., April 4.—Judge Robert Henry Russell of the Stamford probate court died yesterday afternoon of pneumonia, aged 64. He had been judge of probate in that town twenty-seven years, was manager of the Dewitt publishing house in New York, secretary and treasurer of Christ church, director of the Stamford library, and president of the Union Cemetery association.

Divorce Laws for the Territories.

Washington, April 4.—Tne house bill requiring a residence of one year in suits for divorce in the territories has received the favorable endorsement of the committee on territories. The committee amended the bill so as to provide that it shall not affect suits already begun.

Corcoran Again with the Brooklyns.

New Haven, Conn., April 4.—Tommy Corcoran, the Brooklyn National league baseball shortstop of this city, has accepted the terms of the Brooklyn team and will join his former comrades in Brooklyn at once. He expects to fill his old position again this year.

WILL NOT RESIGN

French Cabinet Not Disturbed by the Senate's Action.

CONFIDENCE OF DEPUTIES SUFFICIENT

President Faure Greatly Encouraged at the Decision of the Ministry To Stick to Their Posts—Senate's Action Generally Disapproved.

Paris, April 4.—The cabinet will meet again to-day to discuss the foreign complications. The action of that body last night in unanimously deciding to remain in office after the senate had declined the government a vote of confidence, the cabinet members deeming the approval accorded by the chamber of deputies sufficient justification for them to stick to their post, has greatly encouraged President Faure. The action of the senate meets with general disapproval. When an interpellation of the government's foreign policy was submitted in that body last evening, M. Bourgeois, prime minister and minister of foreign affairs, asked that the questioning be deferred, as he could give no reply beyond that which he had made in the chamber of deputies. He added that the adjournment of the interpellation would not lessen the senate's rights, while it would give the government the authority and strength necessary to pursue its negotiations regarding the Egyptian and other foreign questions. The senate refused to agree to M. Bourgeois' proposal, whereupon he declared that he should make no reply to the interpellation, having no further explanation to furnish. The following resolution was then submitted: "The senate, noting the declaration of the government that it cannot add to its explanation of the chamber of deputies on Thursday, and regretting that those explanations are insufficient, refuse to grant the government a vote of confidence and passes to the order of the day." This was adopted by a vote of 157 to 77. The senate adjourned until April 22. Immediately thereafter the ministers retired and held a council at the foreign office. A delegation from both the senate and chamber of deputies have visited M. Bourgeois and assured him of their esteem and confidence.

FOR HIS WIFE'S AFFECTIONS.

Frederick S. Clark Brings Suit in Chicago Against an Alleged Titled Englishman.

Philadelphia, April 4.—A special dispatch from Chicago says: Suit for $50,000 damages on the charge of alienation of his wife's affections have been begun by Frederick B. Clark, a real estate dealer, against Bertrand Shadwell, an Englishman who claims to be a member of a titled family, and lives as a man of wealth on Ashland boulevard where Mrs. Clark is now living. A few days ago Mr. Clark began proceedings for divorce, naming Shadwell as co-respondent. In 1878 Mrs. Clark obtained a divorce from Rev. W. H. Baldwin, a Presbyterian minister in the east, from whom she separated in 1874. In 1880 she married Clark in New York and three years later came to Chicago to live. Mrs. Clark went to Europe and lived there eleven years during which time she met Shadwell, who became a frequent visitor at the Clark home here when the mistress returned. She is 51 years old. Mrs. Clark formerly resided in Philadelphia and Delaware Gap, N. J.

HAWAIIAN CABLE PROJECT.

Substitute for the Various Bills Already Before the House.

Washington, April 4.—Representative Bennett of New York has laid before the house commerce committee a substitute for the various Hawaiian cable bills already introduced. It provides that the cable shall extend from San Francisco to Honolulu, thence to the Midway islands and to China and Japan. The government is to make a subsidy of $160,000 for twenty years, government business to be carried free of cost all the time. The tolls to China and Japan are fixed at $1.25 a word, and to Honolulu at 25 cents a word, with press dispatch rates at one-fourth of these amounts. The general sentiment of the committee is reported to be favorable to the proposition, although some thought the amount of the subsidy should be reduced.

Co-Receivers for Peck Bros. & Co.

New York, April 4.—Judge Beekman of the supreme court has appointed Joseph Porter of New Haven, Conn., co-receiver of Peck Bros. & Co. corporation, manufacturers of plumbers' supplies, with a bond of $75,000, with John M. Peck and Charles H. Downs, who were appointed receivers on March 16.

From Journalism to Missionary Work.

New York, April 4.—Alexander Schaap, who has been in journalism for many years, connected with the foreign departments of various American newspapers, and of late cable editor of the Journal, has accepted a call as missionary of the New York conference of the Swedish Lutheran Augustana synod.

Lingane Trial Nearly Finished.

Providence, April 4.—The Lingane trial, in which sensational charges of bribery on the part of Lingane were made yesterday, is nearly finished, and, according to the attorney-general, only one more witness is needed in the rebuttal. The argument for Lingane to-day will be made by ex-congressman Chas. H. Page.

To Await Retirement.

A New Jersey farmer figured it out one rainy day that he had walked 300 miles in cultivating one acre of corn. He thereupon sold his farm and moved to a town, where he walked 600 miles to find a job.—Exchange.

The broad tire bill has become a law, and a signal stroke in favor of good roads is accomplished thereby. Township committees are empowered to give a rebate tax to any farmer or teamster who uses a broad tire on his wagon.

The Bound Brook Chronicle this week publishes a half column article reviewing the record of Assemblyman Reed. Among the complimentary allusions to genial Charles were these:

In the session just ended Somerset's Assemblyman, Charles A. Reed, was a prominent figure. He was chairman of the committee on incidental expenses, and as such made a record for economy. In 1893, under Democratic rule, the incidental expenses amounted to about $16,500; in 1894, $10,000; 1895, $6,700, and this year to but $6,200.

He was recognized as one of the leaders on the floor of the House, and as a man actuated by honest motives, having the courage of his convictions and one safe to follow.

DIDN'T LIKE "CHEESEBOX."

But the Judge Discharged the Man Who Called the Name.

Another hackmen's quarrel was brought to City Judge De Meza this morning to settle. James McArdle, who is in the employ of Mrs. Patrick Lynch, was the plaintiff and had been arrested on the complaint of John Goodman who charged McArdle with calling him a "cheesebox," and otherwise being disorderly at the North Avenue station.

McArdle was represented by Charles J. McNabb who pleaded not guilty for his client. Lawyer McNabb presented the case in a very able manner and the Judge dismissed the complaint on the grounds of insufficient evidence.

The breath of a chronic caterrh patient is often so offensive that he becomes an object of disgust. After a time ulceration sets in, the spongy bones are attacked, and frequently destroyed. A constant source of discomfort is the dripping of the purulent secretions into the throat sometimes producing inveterate bronchitis which has been the exciting cause of pulmonary disease. The brilliant results by its use for years past properly designate Ely's Cream Balm as by far the best and only cure.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the eustachian tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube be restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give one hundred dollars for any case of deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

MISCELLANEOUS ITEMS.

—The Greek nose was straight and tolerably prominent.

—The one prudence in life is concentration; the one evil is dissipation.—Emerson.

—Among the 1,000 persons making up the population of Alfred, Me., are 24 between the ages of 80 and 90 years.

—Springfield, Ill., is built on 5½ square miles of ground and has 30,000 population, who owe $902,350 and own $5,857,495.

—Among the Mongolians, Indians and negroes, the internal cavities of the nose are more largely developed than among the Caucasians.

—A woman working in a factory at Coloma, Mich., for 75 cents a day, last week fell heir to a fortune of $62,000 through the death of an uncle in Germany.

—The tapir's snout is an extension of his nose. This singular animal is regarded by some naturalists as the intermediate class between the elephant and the pig.

—The whale's nose is on top of his head, at least his nostrils are situated there, through which he expels the columns of water during the action known as "spouting." Whales only spout when they are feeding.

—The shovel fish uses his nose as a tool to make his living. By means of his nasal proturberance he turns over the mud of the bottom of the sea and unearths the worms and small shell fish on which he feeds.

—The treasury circulation statement issued February 1 gives the amount of gold in the United States, outside the treasury, as $499,110,535. The amount of all kinds of money in circulation is placed at $1,589,720,607, an increase since January 1, 1896, of $10,513,883. The per capita circulation is $22.47.

—Strangely enough, the city of Philadelphia has never had a fitting monument to its most illustrious citizen, Benjamin Franklin. But it will have at least two in the near future. Justus C. Strawbridge, of Philadelphia, has commissioned John J. Boyle to model a statue of Franklin, and another statue of him will soon be erected by the Fairmount Park Art association.

THE NEGRO IN THE SOUTH.

Customs in Regard to His Treatment Are Slowly Changing.

The southern people say that a northern man, after living south a few years, is a fierce negro-hater, far outdoing the southern man in his antagonism to the negro race, much more intolerant of the negro's inherent characteristics. It is, however, the northern people who are helping the negroes to educate themselves. This is not said in criticism of the southern people, for conditions were made for them long ago, and their feelings and opinions in regard to the whole negro question are the result of hereditary environment, which will in time be changed by the new conditions.

It is simply impossible for them to look at the negro as we do. Illustrations of this are constantly met in going about the city. One morning, when starting for the fair grounds, a 'bus driver on his way back from the grounds drew up his horses to the walk, where several were waiting for the car, and said if we would make up a load he would turn around. When we started off there was room for two more in the 'bus and room for one on the seat with the driver. I sat next to the driver on the inside, and we had gone only a few rods when a neatly dressed, very respectable young colored woman and a boy, also well dressed, signified by a slight gesture that they wanted to ride. The driver did not see it, so I said: "There are two passengers." He drew up to the walk and the woman and boy got in. The driver looked around at them, and then, utterly regardless of their feelings, said in a loud voice: "If I had known it was a nigger I wouldn't have stopped." But he did not turn them out. A few rods further an Italian, dirty and ill-kept, stood with his harp by his side, as if he also were waiting for a ride, and our driver pulled up his horses and pointed to the seat beside him; but the harpist was not ready to go, so we drove on.

It is simply a confliction of ideas, not personal antipathy. A young southern woman was shocked because we two northern women went to lunch in the negro building. She acknowledged that a colored cook always prepared her meals, and a colored waiter always served her, but to go to a restaurant where a colored man's brain managed the business, and a colored man or woman might occupy a table next to you—that she could not conceive of a white person's doing.

The negro has, however, made a great stride by this exhibition. Not so much by the simple showing what they can manufacture as by the fact that they are allowed to do it in such a peaceable and even friendly way, and have brains enough to manage their department, and to manage it so well. It seems there was some misunderstanding at the outset, for their are notices put up all through the negro building stating that colored people are not restricted to their own building, but are at liberty to go wherever they please inside the grounds, enjoying the same privileges as their white neighbors.—Springfield (Mass.) Republican.

An Electric Hen.

An electric hen has recently been invented, which is claimed to be superior to the natural article of flesh, feathers and blood, except that it cannot lay eggs. When the electric incubator has produced the chickens, an electric foster-mother takes them in charge. The upper part is devoted to the freshly hatched, while the lower part is so arranged that the young can run around on the ground and at the same time find heat and protection when they require it.—Chicago Chronicle.

NAPOLEON AND LOUISA.

Meeting of the Emperor and Queen of Prussia at Tilsit.

It was at this crisis of Prussia's affairs that the king, after much urging, consented to summon his queen. The rumors and insinuations concerning the czar's undue admiration of her, so industriously spread by Napoleon, had made him over-sensitive; but as a last resort he felt the need of her presence. She came with a single idea to make the cause of Magdeburg her own. She had suffered under the malicious innuendos of Napoleon regarding her character; she had shared the disgrace of the Berlin war party in the crushing defeat at Jena and Auerstadt: she had been a wayfarer among a disgraced and helpless people; but her spirit was not broken, and she announced her visit with all the dignity of her station. The court carriage in which she drove, accompanied by her ladies in waiting, reached Tilsit on July 6, and drew up before the door of the artisan under whose roof were the rooms of her husband. Officers and statesmen were gathered to receive and encourage her with good advice; but she waved them away with an earnest call for quiet, so that she might collect her ideas.

In a moment Napoleon was announced. As he climbed the narrow stairway she rose to meet him. Friend and foe agree as to her beauty, her taste and her manners; her presence, in a white dress embroidered with silver, and with a pearl diadem on her brow, was queenly. In her husband's apartment she was the hostess, and as such she apologized for the stair. "What would not one do for such an end!" gallantly replied the somewhat dazzled conqueror.

The suppliant, after making a few respectful inquiries as to her visitor's welfare and the effect of the northern climate on his health, at once announced the object of her visit. Her manner was full of pathos and there were tears in her eyes as she recalled how her country had been punished for its appeal to arms, and for its mistaken confidence in the traditions of the great Frederick and his glory. The emperor was abashed by the lofty strain of her address. So elevated was her mien that she overpowered him; for the instant his self-assurance fled, and he felt himself but a man of the people. He felt also the humiliation of the contrast, and was angry. Long afterward he confessed that she was mistress of the conversation, adding that she stood with her head thrown back like Mlle. Duchesnois in the character of Chimene, meaning by this comparison to stigmatize her attitude and language as theatrical.

So effective was her appeal that he felt the need of something to save his own role, and accordingly he bowed her to a chair, and in the moment thus gained determined to strike the key of high comedy. Taking up the conversation in turn, he scrutinized the beauties of her person, and, complimenting her dress, asked whether the material was crape or India gauze. "Shall we talk of rage at such a solemn moment?" she retorted; and then proceeded with her direct plea for Magdeburg. In the midst of her eloquence, when the emperor seemed almost overcome by her importunity, her meddling husband most inopportunely entered the room. He began to argue and reason, citing his threadbare grievance, the violation of Ansbach territory, and endeavoring to prove himself to be right. Napoleon at once turned the conversation to indifferent themes, and in a few moments took his leave.

"You ask much," he said to the queen on parting; "but I promise to think it over." The courageous woman had done her best, but her cause—if, indeed, it was ever in the balance—was lost from the moment she put her judge in an inferior position. Her majestic bearing was fine, but it was not diplomacy. She might, nevertheless, have succeeded had she been the wife of a wiser man. Long afterward Napoleon thought she might have had considerable influence on the negotiations if she had appeared in their earlier stages, and congratulated himself that she came too late, inasmuch as they were already virtually closed when she arrived.—Prof. Sloane, in Century.

PUNG RIDING IN BOSTON.

A Very Unique Way of Indulging in Fun.

Speaking of sleighs, the practice of pung riding on the part of young girls seems to be alarmingly on the increase. It has been common enough in other years, but recently it has, to judge without an actual census, been unprecedented. The driver of a grocery wagon says that he can get along with the boys, but that the girls beat him. "You can lick off the boys," he says, "but how are you going to lick off girls?"

Certainly they won't take no for an answer, and generally they do not observe the formality of asking permission to mount a sleigh. They jump on anywhere—on the runner, on the evener, on the seat with the driver; they tumble in backward over the tailboard, and drag screaming behind, holding on by the tips of their fingers. Some of the girls who thus assault the passing sleighs are alarmingly small, and others are alarmingly large. Some are also alarmingly well dressed. The centers of the pung riding diversion are such streets as Columbus avenue, West Newton street, and other South end thoroughfares, but the sport is not unknown on Commonwealth avenue, and even Beacon street! To leave out of the discussion the question whether the amusement is a decorous one, it certainly should be discouraged, because it is dangerous. In these days of electric cars, young children should hardly be allowed to run at large on the streets, especially in the pursuit of an amusement that often absorbs their attention so completely that they cannot be depended upon to look out for passing cars.—Boston Transcript

He Had Been a C... for Years, But Had Never ...

I had been walking all day to reach the hamlet of Bentonville, and as I entered the place at sundown and was inquiring my way to a tavern a rough-looking man accosted me with:

"Look a-here, stranger, I don't quite like your looks."

"Sorry for that, but I can't help it," I replied.

"No, I don't like your looks," he continued. "Fact is, you 'pear to be a suspicious character, and I guess I'll lock you up."

"Have you the authority to do that?"

"I should smile that I had! I'm a constable, and I shall lock you up as a suspicious character."

I tried to argue the matter with him, but he was "sot" and ugly to boot, and he was taking me to the lockup when two or three men interferred to the extent of suggesting that I be taken before the justice of the peace for immediate examination. After some hesitation this was agreed to, and a crowd numbering a score of people accompanied us. The "jedge" was eating supper, but he hurried up and came over to his office in the back end of a store and opened court. When all was ready he asked of the officer:

"Tom, what's the charge agin' the prisoner?"

"Suspicion," replied Tom.

"Suspicion of what?"

"Dunno. Jest suspicion."

"I declar', but I don't see nuthin' suspicious about him," said his honor, as he looked me over. "Stranger, who be you?"

I told him.

"Whar' ye from?"

"Blissfield."

"Whar' ye goin'?"

"On to Mountville to-morrow."

"Nuthin' suspicious about that. What made ye think him suspicious, Tom?"

"Dunno, but it come over me that he was."

"Do you want to sw'ar out a warrant agin' him?"

"Guess not."

"Then the prisoner is discharged."

I went to the hotel and got supper and after the meal sat down on the veranda for a smoke. In the course of five minutes the same constable walked up the steps and approached me and said:

"Stranger, I've cum to apologize."

"For arresting me? Yes, you were hasty, but it's all right."

"Thank ye. You see, it's jest this way; I've bin constable in this county fur 22 years and never arrested a critter yit. Got to thinkin' of it to-day, and made up my mind to uphold my dignity or bust a leg, and as you looked like a cuss who hadn't any friends and wouldn't kick about bein' locked up, I run you in. Cum, hev a drink with me and I'll resign to-morrer."—M. Quad, in Detroit Free Press.

THE LADY AS A COMPANION.

She Is Helpful and Comforting to Her Family and Friends.

She is the woman who with her husband and sons is the best companion. She surrounds herself, unconsciously, with a spiritual atmosphere that is a rest to the weary, especially to the weary man. She is not a bigot. She is in sympathy with whatever work the man may be doing; in many ways she may help him with it, but when he has thrown off the trammels of labor he finds in her all the sweetness, all the rest and all the happiness that can be given by a woman who sets her life so that it is "like perfect music unto perfect words." It is curious that two great writers, Amberly and John Stuart Mill, each dedicated their great books to their wives, whom they describe as perfect helpers and perfect women, using almost the same words! Words are inadequate to describe the lady. Disraeli says of his wife that she was "the most severe of critics, but a perfect wife." In thinking of women, who can forget what Carlyle put upon the tombstone of that nervous, jealous creature, who yet loved him well? After giving her name and age he speaks of her value to her husband, and ends by saying: "And the light of his life is as if gone out."

The public woman is given to talking much about the woman who never marries. I do not think her life is quite rounded, but many times she is the mother where there is no mother, and the adviser and companion where there is no wife. She can do much good to so many. She can give of her time and her love to the poor and needy, and always she can make herself useful because she has spare time; she is the pleasing companion with whom many friends find rest and from whom to many friends comes pleasure. She can teach that boy who has no mother how to say his prayers, and there is more meant in that than the mere act of praying. As I look at it it seems to me the teaching a boy the respect due to God and woman; the teaching a boy the love due to mother and wife, and the keeping always and ever in a man's heart a fresh spring of spirituality great enough to flood his whole system and wash out all commercial meanness and worldliness and make him wholesome and clean is woman's noblest work.—Ladies' Home Journal.

The Acme of Forensic Force.

"And now, gentlemen of the jury," shouted the young lawyer, running his long fingers through his flowing locks, "now, gentlemen of the jury, I ask you as men, and citizens of this great and glorious republic, if the spotless character of my client is to be permitted to suffer from the words uttered by that—by that—by that vermiform appendix who sits in the witness box with perjury stamped all over him!"—Indianapolis Journal.

Cause for Nervousness.

Wife—What! another box of cigars gone? I should think it would make you nervous, smoking so many.

Husband—It does make me nervous! I don't believe that fellow will trust me for apother box.—Puck.

THE FASHIONS.

Notes on the Latest in the Line of Ladies' Dress.

Incipient paniers are appearing upon models for spring gowns.

Fancy taffeta silks will be in high vogue the coming season.

Muslins, chiffons, lawns of every tint and device, and many other dainty varieties of dog-day attire, now fill the shop windows of fancy dry goods and importing houses of the city.

Chine and cloudlike ribbons for trimming spring hats show palm figures on Persian and glace grounds, shaded leaves in sateen broche, iridescent ribbons bordered with velvet, and exquisite Dresden patterns outlined with narrow threads of gold or bronze.

In Venetian and Pompadour laces, chiffon, point d'esprit and silk-wrought mousselaine de soie, the graceful and picturesque Marie Antoinette fichu is now in highest favor. It forms a most becoming and effective addition to toilets for indoor wear, and during the coming summer it will be used as a model for light, dressy out-of-door wraps.

Many of the elegant costumes now worn are so striking and noticeable that it is imperative to have the bonnet or hat en suite, or there would be a disastrous mixture of colors and fabrics, but by following certain matters in the costume the likeness between the gown and the head-covering can be followed without actually duplicating any of the materials.

The detachable stock collars are a very handy bit of decoration. They are made of every sort of ribbon in satin, silk and velvet, in plaids of every clan, in tiny stripes and checks, in cashmere effects, and in Persian gauze in chine or Dresden patterns. One can hardly have too many of these useful and ornamental trifles, and the cost is nothing if one has a knack of turning a pretty bow. Sold in the shops they range in price from 55 cents to three dollars each.

Smooth-surfaced ladies' cloth will take first rank this spring as a fabric for elegant gowns for visiting, church and dinner wear. Some of these will be made of the cloth alone, others will be elaborated by additions of lustrious corded silk and costly passementeries. Tweeds, cheviots and mohairs will form the leading goods for traveling and shopping gowns, made with gored skirts, box coats, or open-fronted princesse jackets, with machine-stitched edges and handsome buttons, these being the only bit of decoration on the gown.

Changeable effects in satins, silks, and silk and wool mixtures will continue to be the correct fashion, notwithstanding their prolonged favoritism. Shot repped fabrics are in great use, and will appear in many novel combinations. Changeable faille silks, brocaded delicately with self-colored devices, or striped or dotted, make pretty vests and sleeves for fine wool toilets, and also the iridescent taffeta silks figured with small Dresden patterns woven in soft, beautiful colors.—N. Y. Post.

WASHING FLANNELS.

A Knowledge of the Proper Method Is Important to the Housewife.

It is important that every woman should know how the woolen winter underwear should properly be washed, and to insist that her laundress should follow her directions exactly. The time-honored joke that the father's new winter flannels will fit baby next year approaches so closely to the truth that some of us can hardly smile at it. Probably, however, in the hands of the average washerwoman the all-wool fabric will be converted into material so stiff and board-like that baby would resent its touching his tender skin.

Flannels should be soaked for several hours in water made soft by the addition of a teaspoonful of borax to each gallon of liquid. The water in which the woolens are washed must be warm, but not hot, and to it is added a large spoonful of ammonia. A strong suds is made of some mild soap and the flannels are put in and washed at once. As soon as they are clean they may be transferred to rinsing water of the same temperature as that from which they have just been taken. They should be pressed between the hands to remove the superfluous water, but must never be wrung. If properly washed they are now white and soft, and must be hung up at once until almost dry, when they are rapidly ironed. In bright sunny weather they can be dried out of doors; but if the weather is damp, so that the process may be protracted, or if the temperature is at the freezing point, they are best kept indoors to dry. They must not be allowed to become so dry as to require a second dampening. Flannels thus washed should be so soft and pliable through two seasons' wear as to make them amply repay the owner for the high price such garments cost. —Harper's Bazar.

Potatoes.

Potatoes baked in their skins should have a piece cut off the ends before baking, in order that the steam may escape. Prepared in this way they are light and dry when eaten. When boiled, they may be prepared in the same way, and the skin removed just before serving to each individual. Potatoes are unquestionably dryer and finer of flavor when boiled in this way, than when pared before cooking. The utmost care is necessary to prevent their being cold when eaten, as they grow cold rapidly after skins are removed; and of all things potatoes should be hot in whatever form they are served, unless it be in a cold salad. It is not regarded in good form to place boiled potatoes upon the table in their skins.—Womankind.

A Serious Infirmity.

"No, doctor; I have no imfirmities whatever; I rise before daylight."

KEPT AHEAD OF THE BULLETS.

Astounding Swiftness of Foot Shown by a Georgia Razor-Back.

Col. Taylor Jenkins, who lives a few miles north of Blakely, is known throughout that section as one of the most truthful men in it. At least, so says the Early County Times. Recently, while Mr. Jenkins was out hunting, his dogs began barking at something in a large hollow log. It was a wild hog. He took the hog home and dropped it in his cornfield. It is there now. A few weeks ago Mr. Jenkins went out to kill it, thinking he could easily do so with his unerring rifle. He searched about till he "jumped" it. Down a corn row it went like lightning. He leveled his rifle and "cut down" on it, but never touched a hair. He "jumped" it again and shot again, but no hog. Again and again he "jumped" it and shot at it, with the same result. He began to wonder what could be the matter. The corn rows were as straight as moonshine whisky and his gun true as the third party to Tom Watson, yet hit it he couldn't. To shoot at the hog as it ran off down the corn rows was just like shooting at it standing, so far as getting a "bead on it" was concerned. To make sure that he didn't "wobble" off the hog he put up a small target and "cracked down" at it five times, then took his ax and chopped in and found five balls all in one hole in the middle of the spot. That settled it—that the fault was not in him or the gun, but the hog had outrun the bullets.

LONDON DOGS OUT CALLING.

Their Cards Go Up with Those of Their Mistresses.

It appears, from an article in the Figaro by M. Paul Megnin, that in London at the present time it is not only the fashion for a lady to provide her lapdog with a little wardrobe and even a handkerchief, but to have visiting cards made for it, too. When a fashionable lady pays a visit, taking her lapdog with her, she sends up the dog's card along with her own.

M. Megnin says he was visiting the editor of one of the leading sporting papers in London, when the servant brought in two cards, one that of a lady and the other as follows:

MRS. FRIVOLITY.
Collie.

Asked if he knew the name on the card, M. Megnin said he presumed it was some dog fancier. He was greatly surprised to see a lady come in, accompanied by a handsome collie.

M. Megnin went to a stationer's shop and ordered 100 cards for his little dog. He was again surprised to find that the stationer had some ready printed, neatly packed in pretty little card cases.

BEN FRANKLIN'S BIG HEAD.

How He Wore His Wig in His Pocket at the French Court.

The difficulties encountered recently by the lineal descendants of that great man, statesman, patriot and everything else that men properly hold in estimation — Benjamin Franklin — in having themselves enrolled among the Colonial Dames, recall an anecdote of him, says the Washington Post, embalmed in the family records of the sage of Monticello, but which, so far as the writer knows, has never been published. When about to present himself for the first time at the court of Versailles he was informed by the master of ceremonies that a wig was a sine qua non. Now, his head was so large that no ordinary wig would begin to fit it, and the situation was embarrassing in the extreme. However, one was found sufficiently large to pass him through the antechambers, after which he was permitted to remove the ridiculous conventional appendage and place it in his ample pocket, whence it never again emerged to public gaze.

Cox and His Brownies.

Palmer Cox says the idea of writing about the brownies came to him from reading Scotch traditions concerning these amusing little elves. They were, he says, almost unknown in America until he began writing about them, but in Scotland they had existed in the folk lore for 500 years. The Scotch brownie, according to Mr. Cox, was a beneficient sort of sprite, whose only three emotions were joy, wonder and terror. It was supposed they were never seen by human beings, but went about at night performing helpful deeds for the country folk, at the same time getting a deal of fun themselves out of kindly pranks.

Trained Goats.

In Swizerland and other mountainous countries the goat leads long strings of animals daily to and from the mountains, but it is in South Africa that it is particularly kept and employed as a leader of flocks of sheep. Should a blinding storm of rain or hail drive the silly sheep before it, or cause them to huddle together in a corner, so as to suffocate each other, the trained goat will wake them up, and by a method best known to himself will induce them to follow him to a place of safety.

Not Scientific.

A song with the title: "There's a Sigh in the Heart," was sent by a young man to his sweetheart; but the paper fell into the hands of the girl's father, a very unsentimental physician, who exclaimed:

"What wretched, unscientific rubbish is this? Who ever heard of such a case?"

He wrote on the outside:

"Mistaken diagnosis; no sigh in the heart possible. Sighs relate almost entirely to the lungs and diaphragm!"

Titled Thieves.

CYCLING COMMENT.

William Townley, driver of Alert hose wagon, has received his new '96 Spalding wheel.

W. Gordon Williams, of East Front street, has purchased a Warwick wheel which he will ride this year.

Sammy Robinson, of the Pond Tool Machine Works, will ride a World wheel this year. John S. Johnson, the racing man, is the designer of the wheel.

The New Jersey State Division, of the L. A. W., will manage its own meet this year, having decided not to give it to one club, as has been the case in former years. The place where it is to be held has not yet been decided. If Plainfield only had the facilities for conveying a crowd to the Crescent Oval, she would have a fair show of securing the meet.

This week's bulletin of the L. A. W. Racing Board contains the names of a number of new official handicappers, among whom is John C. Wetmore, of Elizabeth. It also contains a list of a number of riders who have been declared professionals, all at their own wish, however. The only prominent Eastern riders are C. M. Murphy, of Brooklyn, and L. A. Callahan, of Buffalo. Among the sanctions granted was one to the King's County Wheelmen, of Brooklyn, for a meet on June 27th.

The League of American Wheelmen is a good thing, and the cyclists of this county are beginning to appreciate it. Every week during March applications for membership poured in a way that astonished Secretary Bassett, but the week ending March 30th, was a record breaker, for during that week 1,033 applications were received. Out of that number New Jersey only furnished 80 of them. It would seem that Plainfield alone should furnish nearly that number, for the great majority of riders in this city are not members of the league.

INS AND OUTS.

The Young Men's Association of Monroe Avenue chapel will hold its next meeting on Thursday, April 16th, when the question of a base ball nine will be thoroughly discussed. If the same enthusiasm is shown as was last year, a team will be organized.

On account of the cold weather, the candidates for the High School baseball team did not practice yesterday afternoon. Should the weather be favorable, they will meet this afternoon and practice. There is plenty of material in the school for a good team and all that it needs is plenty of practice. Charles Noble, the energetic manager, will return to his duties on Monday after the Easter vacation, and will push the work forward as rapidly as possible.

The McAll Auxiliary.

The monthly meeting of the Plainfield McAll Auxiliary was held at the Public Library Building, Wednesday morning at 11 o'clock. The resignation of the secretary, Miss Sadie Hilliard Hunter, was accepted with deep regret, as she has been an efficient officer. Miss Annie J. Bronson was elected to fill the unexpired term of Miss Hunter. It was also decided that the regular meeting should be omitted in May owing to the annual meeting of the American McAll Association to be held in the Westminister church, at Elizabeth, on May 6th and 7th. The delegates appointed being Mrs. Isaac L. Miller, president, Mrs. James Petrie and Mrs. A. C. Baldwin, vice-presidents, Mrs. James M. Middledith and Miss Annie J. Bronson. It was earnestly requested that as many members as possible attend the meeting at Elizabeth.

Barry's Investigation Postponed.

After the borough Council meeting last evening the Mayor and the license and marshal committee met to investigate the case of Special Marshal Wm. Barry, but after consideration it was thought best to lay the matter over until Barry could be given an opportunity to be present and vindicate himself, if possible.

STRIKES AND SPARES.

The individual bowling record for March at the Park Club was won by Laurens H. VanBuren, who rolled 267.

The frequenters of the Park Club were rather surprised several nights ago by the individual bowling record for April falling into the hands of one of the members who is an infrequent contestant at the alleys. John Drayton was the one and he rolled 226. This score is likely to win as with the approach of spring the interest in bowling is dieing out and very few high scores are made.

WORKING YOUNG CHRISTIANS.

Monroe Avenue Association Raise Money For Use of the Chapel.

The Young Men's Association of Monroe Avenue chapel held a regular meeting last night. President Randolph called the meeting to order, and after devotional exercises led by Rev. W. C. O'Donnell, the different committees for the recent concert reported. The treasurer's report told that $20.05 had been made on the musical concert last February and that $68.74 had been realized on the recent concert of the Syracuse University Glee, Banjo and Mandolin Club. All bills were ordered paid and the treasurer reported that the unexpended balance in the treasury after all bills had been paid, would be $38.49.

Fifty dollars was appropriated to assist in furnishing Epworth House, and Adam Neuman and Blanchard Randolph were appointed a committee to confer with James McGee on the subject. John Thompson was elected a member.

An Immense Purchase.

It takes nerve to go into any auction room and put down five thousand dollars in cash for a lot of wet goods. That's what Edward White did this week in one of the large auction houses in New York, where the stock of the importing house of W. L. Wellington, whose stock of fine dry goods was slightly damaged by water, was sold. The entire stock was sold by order of the fire insurance company, and Mr. White secured many of the best goods offered, thirty-five thousand yards in all, at a price that permits him to sell at one-quarter of their real value. The goods will be on sale Monday morning. For full particulars see his advertisement.

Cheaper to Have Paid at First.

A week ago a woman living on Grove street, near Greenbrook road, was arrested and fined $10 by Justice Crosley for maintaining a nuisance on her property. She raised a great fuss over the conviction and was given a few days in which to pay the fine. She showed no disposition to pay the fine, however, and a levy was made on her piano. She claimed the piano belonged to her daughter, but as the daughter is under age, this argument did not stand. She finally agreed to pay the fine and also considerable costs incurred by the officials in the endeavor to collect it.

Charged With Trespassing.

Tunis Vail was arraigned before City Judge DeMeza on the charge of trespassing on the Jersey Central Railroad. Thomas Bowser, his colored companion, was not present, so the Judge reserved his decision until Tuesday morning.

—A fire being built in one of the upper rooms in Miss Hart's boarding-house on Watchung avenue caused a stream of sparks to fly out of the chimney last night. A pedestrian, thinking the chimney was on fire, notified the fire department. A fireman was sent to investigate and found the true cause.

COLORS FOR THE VOLUNTEERS.

Major Pattie Watkins to Visit the Local Post Next Thursday.

Major Pattie Watkins, who commands the New York city and New Jersey Division of the Volunteers, comprising seventeen organized and officered posts, will visit Plainfield Post on Thursday next and present the colors of the organization and the American standard. The meeting will be in Reform Hall which has been secured permanantly as the armory of the Volunteers. A street parade in which each of the thirty-six soldiers will carry the stars and stripes will preceed the presentation. An important feature of the meeting will be the excellent singing of Major Watkins, who is famous as the "Welch Nightengale."

The local corps of the regular Salvation Army are having a hard tussle to maintain an existence, but the headquarters are determined that the barracks shall remain open for one year at least, and to that end have signed a lease for the hall in the Elkwood building, guaranteeing that if the local soldiers cannot pay the rent of $75 per month, the headquarters will make good the deficiency. The army meetings are meagrely attended and the officers are surrounded by circumstances which makes their work extremely discouraging. But with that Christian servitude which has distinguished the army ever since its formation, they go plodding on with a diligent spirit that cannot but command the respect and admiration of people who realize their unflinching devotion to the cause of saving souls.

A Hot Firm.

The combination of George O. Stevens and William N. Runyon is a hot one, though they are engaged in a coal business. But, of course, this is a mere figurative saying, more expressive to the mind of a business world than to those who have a strict regard for the elementary rules of rhetoric. The young men are popular, have a large circle of friends, are known to be thorough business-like, handle a good mine of coal, and, in fact, have every element to make them successful, as no doubt they will be.

A Hatter ot Selection.

Mrs. Cleveland, so it is authoratively stated, selects all of Mr. Cleveland's wardrobe for him. Most men prefer to do this for themselves. There are certain articles of wear, however, they should never select, among which may be numbered eye glasses and spectacles. These, if you wish to aid and not injure the eye, should always be chosen by an expert optician, such as you will find at Colliers, 103 Park avenue.

WIFE OF REV. CHAS. H. PARKHURST.

She Tells How Paine's Celery Compound Has Benefited the Famous New York Preacher.

Dr. Parkhurt's best aid in his untiring crusade against crime in the great metropolis is his wife. In looking after her husband's health, Mrs. Parkhurst is doing more than all the members of the women's campaign. "Am I worried about the doctor?" says Mrs. Parkhurst. "Not at all. I feel that he is tired, but he recuperates, and I never try to hinder him from a piece of work, because I feel he will have the strength for it. My greatest pleasure is in helping him to carry out his ideas." Mrs. Parkhurst wrote to Wells & Richardson Company, January 22, 1896.

"Dr. Parkhurst has used Paine's celery compound for two weeks with beneficial results. It has helped to keep him up while very tired."

In a subsequent letter to the same druggists on January 28, she said: "I am sure the Paine's celery compound is doing Dr. Parkhurst good. I am under obligation to Mrs. for bringing it to our notice." If it were possible to reproduce in cold type the emphatic tone in which men and women from every part of the United States speak and write of Paines celery compound, not a word more would be needful.

Unfortunately, when published in the stereotyped pages of a daily paper of a daily paper, these enthusiastic letters can't help losing part of their earnest, persuasive character.

Paine's celery compound is not one of the many sarsaparillas or nervines that manage to make themselves public, as far as far as their mere names go, but without making themselves known to suffering people by actual use. Paine's celery compound has been used and enthusiastically recommended by the most judicious, considerate, careful men and women in every city in the United States, as an absolute cure for nervous debility and exhaustion, neuralgia, sleeplessness, melancholia, hysteria, headaches, dyspepsia, rheumatism, kidney trouble, and all blood diseases. It is the best spring remedy in the world.

Bright and breezy April days, have a stronger charm of hope about them than any other days of the year. Now is the season appointed by Nature herself for new growths, and a casting-off of the old parts that have served their purpose, and are outworn and diseased. That terrible throbbing of the heart, the neuralgia, the headache, the leaden weight over the eyes and in the forepart of the head, need only Paines celery compound to vanish forever.

Paine's celery compound has come legitimately by its poesent tremendous reputation, as an invigorator, nerve-regulator, blood-restorer, and body-recuperator. There is nothing experimental about it.

No remedy in existence ever received such emphatic and plain spoken testimonials from sick, ailing, tired and run down men and women.

It is no half-way cure that is attempted by Paine's celery compound but a clean sweep of every trace of neuralgia, rheumatism, constipation, headache, dyspepsia, and blood impurity from the system.

Take Paine's celery compound in the spring to purify the blood, strengthen the nerves, and make health!

IT IS THE DAY.

BY STANLEY WATERLOO.

It is Easter. It is the day perhaps nearest to the hearts of those who hold the Christian faith. It is the anniversary of the day upon which the gentle crucified Jew, Jesus, whom we accept as the Son of God, came forth alive again from a coffin made from a space hewed in a rock and blocked by a great stone.

That rising was in the sequence of events which made Christian the world of to-day. That rising was what is making strong the course of the controlling mass among the creatures who flit about upon this particular planetary crust, and who have a belief in their own immortality. Had the more potent portion of humanity not accepted Christ as risen, there would have been some other belief, some other hope and grasping for after-death welfare among the inhabitants of this one among the millions and billions of planets revolving in all space. The rising completed the Christian story. The Son had gone to the Father as an emissary, forever pleading in behalf of the creature we call man, Himself a man, He went back to Heaven to be ever our Ambassador. And so it is that throughout the Christian world it is the sweetest of all hopeful days, this anniversary of that day when Christ ascended to His own again.

What matters it that learned skeptics say that Easter is but the adaptation to Christian use of an ancient holiday in glorification over life and spring and the birth of all things. It matters not what the beliefs or legends were before, since we accept the story of the Child of Bethlehem, and stake our future upon the promise of the man grown who died for us. The heathen legends of the early man are but as nothing, whether the Son of the Ruler of the Universe came to us nearly 2,000 years ago or yesterday. We accept the belief and we are happy in Easter day.

It is wonderful and very sweet, the thought of that morning when the gentle, murdered Man, who was both Man and God, felt from the Father the quickening pulse and knew that His awful trial was over and that the world had been redeemed.

It was of all mornings the most beautiful, if we may judge from the weak human story, or if we judge from our own conception of what it must have been. The gloom of night was dissipating, the lighter haze of morn was apparent upon the far distant Judean hills, though there was darkness in the valley still.

But in an instant, just as the morning broke, all changed. There was a rustling of wings, the wings of angels, in the semi-darkness; the huge stone which filled the entrance of that cavern tomb rolled away as lightly as if it were something a wind might lift. There was a sudden light about the place and, at the same moment, above the far eastern hills, the sun, earth's light and one of God's ownings, flung forth a million brilliant banners. It was day. And, just as day came, went from earth the Son who is pleading for us with the Father.

It is very sweet and wonderful, the story of this Easter day, one of the greatest observed in our religion. It is the day recognized as full of all hope and promise. It is beautiful in the manner of its observance, with its flowers and its ringing anthems and with its atmosphere of the springtime and of faith and courage. It is blessed, this Easter day.

HOW EASTER DAY IS FIXED.

It has been over 1,500 years since the rule was adopted which makes Easter the "first Sunday after the first full moon after the sun crosses the line." By this arrangement of things, Easter may come as early as March 22, or as late as April 25, but must forever oscillate between the dates mentioned.

The word "Easter" is said to be from the German "oster," (rising), and is the Christian passover or festival of the resurrection of Christ. The English name for the day is probably derived from that of the old Teutonic goddess Osten, whose festival occurred at about the same time as our celebration of Easter. The proper time for celebrating the festival was a theme which gave rise to much heated discussion among early Christians. The question was fully considered and finally settled at the council of Nice, 325 A. D., by adopting the rule which makes it fall upon the first Sunday after the first full moon occurring after March 21. During the present century Easter has fallen from one to four times on every date between March 22 and April 25, except March 24, which has been skipped entirely.

When Easter Eggs Meant Marriage.

In the 16th century if a girl accepted an Easter egg from a man it was considered to mean the plighting of her troth to him. Moreover, it set a date for the wedding, or approximately, as it was equivalent to a promise to marry him before St. John's day, which comes the 24th of June.

Her Easter Egg.

She loved to paint, and many days she toiled
To find the shades that blended well together;
So careful was she lest it should be spoiled,
She handled it as carefully as a feather.
But when, alas! she went to fondly stroke it
She let it slip upon the floor and broke it.

Her Terrible Revenge.

Jeannette—I hear that horrid Jamesley girl won Cholley Smythe away from you.

GLADNESS AFTER SADNESS.

After the winter, the spring; after the snow, the sun and flowers; after the sadness the gladness; after the burial the resurrection; after the visit to the tomb, that the Marys might anoint their Lord, their return to announce Him: "He is not here; He is arisen. Behold the place where the Lord lay!"

The earth is growing green. The gardens are yellow and purple and white with the crocuses and hyacinths and snowdrops. The woods are sweet with arbutus, the meadows are starred with cowslips, the rocks are white with bloodroot and saxifrage, the copses are purple with anemones and liverworts, and the spring beauties hide in the swamps. The aspen willow buds are dusty with golden meal. The maples are all a-bristling with their crimson bloom. The magnolia and the forsythia and the Judas tree, with their wide-awake flowers bedecking the brown stems, shame the sluggard foliage. The earth is growing fair, the robins and bluebirds have come home again, and the swallows and orioles are on their way. It is sweet to live, for it is the season of the resurrection and the life.

"The resurrection and the life." Those are the words of nature and its Lord. The Lenten sorrow is over. The wintry torpor ends. Let us awake, let us arise, let us be glad, let us be strong that we may work! Christ sleepeth no longer. Resurrection and life are His words of activity, and words of joy in activity. What a work is there all waiting for the Christian and the man!—N. Y. Independent.

EARLY CHRISTIAN EASTER.

Easter day, as commemorating the central fact of our religion, is the chief festival of the Christian year, and has been from the earliest times observed with state and ceremony. The manner of celebration must, of course, differ from that of the early Christians, but the spiritual meaning is ever the same.

We find no trace of the observance of Easter, as a Christian festival, in the New Testament. The earliest Christians were so absorbed in events that the sanctity of special times or places was not thought of by them. Says St. Chrysostom: "The whole of time is a festival with Christians because of the excellency of the good things which have been given;" and the ecclesiastical historian Socrates writes that "the apostles had no thought of appointing festival days, but of promoting a life of blamelessness and piety."

The human instinct, however, which craves the commemoration of marked epochs in personal, social, ecclesiastical or national life, soon made itself manifest, and found satisfaction in the public celebration of an event which was the foundation of the Christian faith.

As we accept the time appointed, and hail with gladness the beautiful Eastertide, let us spare a grateful thought to those who labored so earnestly, not only to preserve for us this sacred festival, but also to bring about uniformity in the time of its celebration.—N. Y. Advertiser.

In Days to Come.

He pressed a kiss upon her brow.
"Darling!" he cried, impetuously; "I love you more than all the world besides."
"Alfred," rejoined the woman of the future, "that is all right, but I positively cannot afford to get you a new silk hat for Easter."
Whereat he wept miserably, and insisted that it served him right for having married such a brute.—Puck.

An Easter Crush.

It was an Easter bonnet reposing on a chair,
The professor never saw it, as himself he seated there.
"Will you be at church to-morrow?" he asked to break the hush,
And she madly, wildly answered: "No, 'twill be an awful crush."

Resurrection.

BY ERNEST McGAFFEY

The moonbeams touched the cedars tall
That stood by Jesus' tomb,
All faintly, as the candles will
That light a spacious room;
While here and there a lonely star
Looked earthward through the gloom.

A hush was on the darkened land,
A calm lay on the sea,
A silence fraught with meaning vague
Of miracles to be;
And loosed from midnight's failing grasp
The wandering winds went free.

And when the rock-bound sepulchre
In darkness stood alone,
With trace of moon and waning star
Across its outlines thrown,
Nor door was seen, but in its stead
A rough-hewn, mighty stone.

But when the dawn-burst filled the skies
And night was changed to day,
A flash of mystic wings was seen
Within the morning gray,
The angel messenger who came—
And rolled the stone away.

AN EASTER MISSION.

BY J. F. HENDERSON.

IT WAS the night before Easter. A bevy of young and middle-aged women, a few of them accompanied by male escorts, were busying themselves about the altar of St. Mark's church, transforming that portion of the sanctuary into a garden of flowers, palms and growing plants. Sid Venner, the popular young lawyer of Stillville, stood in the shadows apart from the group, nervously pulling his mustache and looking somewhat out of sorts. He started and straightened up as a man and a woman entered the church and came down one of the dimly-lighted aisles. The lady—a tall, beautiful girl, with a reed-like grace of movement—was in advance. As she passed close to Sid she recognized him and stopped.

"Oh, Mr. Venner, isn't it a shame?" she broke out, in a charmingly impulsive way. "The Easter lilies ordered from the city did not come. I am so disappointed, and mortified, too, for all the other ladies have furnished something for the church decorations, and I promised the lilies, you know, and now I can do nothing at all. Mr. Macgregor has been searching the town for flowers, but can find none. Dear! dear! if one of you gentlemen could get some Easter lilies somehow—somewhere—I would—well, I'd be eternally grateful!" This half-laughing, half-despairing outburst was addressed both to Sid and her stylishly-dressed escort, who had stopped just behind her, but it seemed to the lawyer that the appeal was specially directed to him. His heart was thumping like a trip-hammer, but he spoke quite calmly:

"I shall be glad to win even your gratitude, Miss Lloyd. I will get the lilies for you."

"Oh, will you truly? Can you?"

"I can and will."

"You need not trouble yourself, sir," spoke up the other man, in a voice as cold and cutting as steel. "If Miss Lloyd wants Easter lilies I will get them for her—provided they are to be had."

The significance of the tone and words was not to be mistaken. There was a moment of profound silence; then Sid Venner, with admirable self-control, said:

"I have given you my word, Miss Lloyd. My offer has no proviso attached to it." He smiled audaciously in the flushed, scowling face of Bruce Macgregor; then bowed easily to Helen Lloyd, as he added: "The lilies will be here in good season, I promise you. But to fulfill my mission, I must be off at once. Good night." He strode down the aisle to the church door, and was gone.

Just as the town clock struck nine Sid Venner, seated in a piano-box buggy behind a quick-stepping horse, went spinning out of Stillville along the road leading eastward. "Fifteen miles to Princeton," he mused, with a grim smile. "A drive of 30 miles before I sleep. But I happen to know 'Squire Wymple has a lot of Easter lilies on his place, and I must have them at all hazards. Wonder if Bruce Macgregor will dare to follow me. I saw him watching me as I drove out of the stable."

Sid, it need scarcely be said, was over head and ears in love with Helen Lloyd. His suit had seemed to progress favorably enough until Bruce Macgregor appeared on the scene. Then there was a change. Macgregor was the city cousin of Alice Hartley, and Alice was the particular friend of Helen Lloyd; so it was but natural that the young man and Helen should be thrown much together. In fact, he all but monopolized that young lady's society. During the entire period of Lent—a most propitious season for cozy tete-a-tetes—he had been Alice's guest and Helen's devoted slave. Sid had sternly held himself under control as he watched his own chance of happiness slip away from him. He was stunned, crushed, humiliated, and in the bitterness of the disappointment could not understand that he was really to blame for the coldness that gradually came between him and the girl. He had no doubt that Macgregor and Helen were infatuated with each other.

It was a surprise to him when she spoke to him in the old familiar way to-night. It made his blood tingle. One thought was uppermost in his mind now. He must get the Easter lilies. He must show Helen that obstacles were not to be considered by him where her wishes were concerned. Squire Wymple, the justice of the peace at Princeton, was his closest friend, and he had often been the squire's guest at his pleasant home just outside of town. It was nearing midnight as Sid approached the Wymple homestead. The house was dark and apparently deserted.

"All in bed, I suppose," he mused, as he reined up at the roadside and jumped to the ground. "Carriage gate locked. I'll just hitch here and walk to the house."

He took a lighted lantern from the buggy, passed through a small gate and walked toward the house. A big watchdog came bounding toward him, barking viciously.

"I HAD TO COMMIT BURGLARY TO GET THEM."

"Down, Tiger; down! Don't you know me, old fellow? Come, Tiger."

In an instant the animal began to express his joyful recognition of a valued friend by wagging his tail, whining and jumping up and down round the newcomer. Sid went to the door and rang the bell. There was no response. After trying for 15 minutes to rouse somebody he was forced to the conclusion that the family was away from home.

"Here's a go!" growled Venner.

But after a minute's reflection his face brightened and he made his way to the large greenhouse at the rear of the dwelling. He examined the door by the light of the lantern and found it securely locked. Fortunately, however, he discovered a sliding panel of glass which he opened without difficulty. He crawled through the aperture and soon found several pots of beautiful Easter lilies in bloom. On a leaf torn from his blankbook he wrote a few words of explanation to Squire Wymple, leaving the note on the shelf from which he took the flowers. A few minutes later he was hurrying toward his buggy, carrying four pots of Easter lilies. As he approached the road he was astonished to see two vehicles instead of one. In the second one sat a man, who called out to Sid:

"Is this Mr. Venner?"

"It is. Ah, Mr. Macgregor, is that you? Beautiful night for a drive, eh?" Sid coolly placed his property in the rear of the buggy-box.

"What have you there?" asked Macgregor, with an attempt to appear unconcerned.

"The Easter lilies I promised to get for Miss Lloyd," replied Sid, as he stepped into his buggy and took up the reins.

"Will you sell them to me?"

"Hardly."

"I suppose I can get some where you got those?"

"You'll have to ask the dog. The people who live here are not at home, but the dog and I are old friends. Good-night, Mr. Macgregor."

He wheeled his horse round in the road and sent him dashing away at his best speed toward Stillville.

Long before church time the next morning Sid called with a carriage for Helen Lloyd. He had the lilies, and he took her to the church to dispose of them as she saw fit. "I had to commit burglary to get them," he told her, "but I could do even that for you, Miss Lloyd."

After that it was easy to reach an understanding. They were entirely alone in the church, and the nodding palms and graceful Easter lilies were discreetly silent about the little scene that was enacted in their shadows.

"And to think you were jealous of Mr. Macgregor!" pouted Helen, after it was all settled. "Foolish man!"

And when the Easter anthem was sung by the choir that morning Miss Lloyd's friends remarked the unusual power and feeling with which she rendered those passages expressive of great joy and exultation.

A few days later Sid Venner received a letter from Squire Wymple, in the course of which the squire wrote: "You are welcome to the flowers, of course, but who is Mr. Bruce Macgregor? A gentleman of that name hunted me up Sunday morning and wanted me to issue a warrant for the arrest of Sidney Venner for robbing a greenhouse. Think of that! I had to tell him that I was the victim, and you a privileged character."

A DIFFERENCE IN TIME.

"There," said Mrs. Uptodate, twisting about to look over her shoulder at her Easter gown, "my mind is at rest; it is perfect!"

"What is perfect?" growled her husband; "not the coffee we had at breakfast."

"It seems to me, Henry, that you are not in a fit frame of mind for Sunday,

"COME, HENRY," SHE SAID.

and Easter Sunday at that. Oh, how I shall enjoy the envy of the Smithers girls as I sail up the aisle!"

"Humph! I didn't enjoy that coffee. I suppose the cook's mind was on the envy of the cook across the way, and she—"

"It was all the fault of that dining-room clock. It is half an hour slow, and you always forget to regulate it. I'll do it myself to-morrow."

"I guess I'll go downstairs now and—"

"Well, don't hurry back, for not one step will I go to church until those Smithers girls have passed. Our pew is so far in front that they can only see as I go up the aisle and—"

"Look here, Melinda Uptodate, I'm a deacon in the church. I can't be late, it sets a bad example!"

"Can't help the example. If we don't go together, folks will say we have quarreled—and I'm going late. Henry—ah, he's gone."

An hour later, Mrs. Uptodate entered the dining-room.

"Come, Henry," she said, glancing at the clock, "I haven't seen the Smithers girls pass, but they must have while I was looking in the glass."

"Why, how few people are on the street!" she cried, as they started, "we must be delightfully late."

"Delightfully early, dear; I—"

"But it was 12 minutes past 11 by the dining-room clock, and it is slow!"

"Not now, my dear; I—forgot to tell you that I just set it three-quarters of an hour ahead."

They walked on in silence.

Her Reason.

AN EASTER GREETING.

BY ELISA ARMSTRONG.

It was Easter day and Ethel had just dropped in to ask her dearest Fannie to go for a walk; she was now watching her make an elaborate toilet and occasionally casting dissatisfied glances at her own apparel.

"Dear me, don't you think it looks very much like rain?" she asked, glancing out of the window.

"Not at all; those are only wind clouds. Isn't my hat a beauty? I don't believe anybody has as pretty a one!"

"Ah—er charming. By the way, I suppose I shall be thought quite a society girl; you know the swellest people always wear old clothes on Easter."

"Indeed? It's very nice to wear old clothes to-day if you have the courage. I haven't myself—I'd hate to know that people were saying that it was because I could not afford new ones."

"I never thought of it in that light. Besides, Harold Closefystte says he does hate to see a girl think of nothing but dress; it shows such a lack of intellect."

"H'm; I suppose he prefers she should think of nothing but him. As for himself, he has no thoughts to spare on any subject."

"You think so? But then he does not call upon you often enough for you to really know him. Do you know, dear, I'm really uneasy about your health, you look so sallow."

"I'm glad to hear you say that, dear; for you always think differently from anybody else."

"I don't know about that—sometimes I fear lest my opinions are just those of the majority."

"You wrong yourself; you are quite original, dear, almost eccentric, in fact. Well, I am quite ready now. So glad you like my hat!"

"Yes, I forgot to tell you, did I not, that our cook has one just like it? Doubtless we shall meet her this afternoon. Shall we go now?"

MEANING OF EASTER EGGS.

Eggs have always been symbolical of Easter. By the Egyptians they were held as a sacred emblem of the renovation of mankind after the deluge. To the Jews they were emblematic in many ways. They adapted them to suit the circumstances of their history, and were considered typical of their departure from the land of Egypt. Eggs were also used in the feast of the Passover.

Easter day is celebrated in the orient by various sports and festivities. One of these sports among the Christians of Mesopotamia commences on Easter day and continues for 40 days. It is the original Easter sport found in rural America. It consists in "fighting" with one another. The egg that first breaks is won by the owner of the one that struck it. Another egg is at once pitted against the winning egg, and the game continues until there is but one unbroken egg, that one winning all the others which have been cracked.

An emblematical print is employed as an Easter gift in Germany. One of the most unique prints of this character is preserved in the British museum. It represents three hens upholding a basket in which are deposited three eggs ornamented with designs illustrative of the resurrection. Over the center egg is the "Agnus Dei," with a chalice representing faith; the other eggs bear emblems of charity and hope.

In Russia the men call at their neighbors' houses early Easter morning, and, after exchanging the salutations of the day, exchange gifts of eggs. The priest of the parish is presented with a red egg by each of his parishioners. The peasants on Easter day, and for three or four days after, carry one of these eggs in their hands as a token of the resurrection.

COPYRIGHT, 1894, BY BRET HARTE.

"Thank you. I am glad to know that they are nothing, and that I may now trust that you have consulted my wishes and have reserved your animosity for me," returned Brant, quietly. "If that is so, I see no reason for your hurrying your departure in the least."

She rose instantly. "I have," she said, slowly, controlling herself with a slight effort, "found some one who will take my duty off my hands. She is a servant of one of your neighbors—who is an old friend of my uncle's—the woman is familiar with the house and our private property. I will give her full instructions to act for me—and even an authorization in writing if you prefer it. She is already in the habit of coming here—but her visits will give you very little trouble. And as she is a slave—or, as you call it, I believe—a chattel, she will be already quite accustomed to the treatment which her class are in the habit of receiving from northern hands." Without waiting to perceive the effect of her Parthian shot, she swept proudly out of the room.

"I wonder what she means?" mused Brant, as her quick step died away in the passage. "One thing is certain, a woman like that is altogether too impulsive for a spy."

Later, in the twilight, he saw her walking in the garden. There was a figure at her side. A little curious, he examined it more closely from his window. It was already familiar to him—the erect shapely form of his neighbor's servant. A thoughtful look passed over his face as he muttered: "So this is to be her deputy!"

CHAPTER III.

Called to a general council of officers at divisional headquarters the next day, Brant had little time for further speculation regarding his strange guest. But a remark from the division commander that he preferred to commit the general plan of a movement then under discussion to the memories rather than to written orders in the ordinary routine, seemed to show that his chief still suspected the existence of a spy. He therefore told him of his late interview with Miss Faulkner and her probable withdrawal in favor of a mulatto neighbor. The division commander received the information with indifference. "They're much too clever to employ a hussy like that, who shows her hand at every turn—either as a spy or a messenger of spies—and the mulattoes are too stupid, to say nothing of their probable fidelity to us. No, general, if we are watched, it is by an eagle and not a mocking bird. Miss Faulkner has nothing worse about her than her tongue, and there isn't the nigger blood in the whole south that would risk a noose for her, or for any of their masters or mistresses."

It was therefore, perhaps, with some mitigation of his usual critical severity that he saw her walking before him alone in the lane as he rode home to quarters. She was apparently lost in a half impatient, half moody reverie, which even the trotting hoof-beats of his own and orderly's horses had not disturbed. From time to time she struck the myrtle hedge beside her with the head of a huge flower which hung by its stalk from her listless hands, or held it to her face as if to inhale its perfume. Dismissing his orderly by a side path he rode gently forward, but to his surprise, without turning or seeming to be aware of his presence, she quickened her pace, and even appeared to look from side to side for some avenue of escape. If only to end matters he was obliged to ride quickly forward to her side, where he threw himself from his horse, flung the reins on his arm, and began to walk beside her. She at first turned a slightly flushed cheek away from him, and then looked up with a purely simulated start of surprise.

"I am afraid," he said, gently, "that I am the first to break my own orders in regard to any intrusion on your privacy." But I wanted to ask you if I could give you any aid whatever in the change you think of making." He was quite sincere, had been touched by her manifest disturbance, and despite his masculine relentlessness of criticism he had an intuition of feminine suffering that was in itself feminine.

"Meaning that you are in a hurry to get rid of me," she said curtly, without raising her eyes.

"Meaning that I only wish to expedite a business which I think is unpleasant to you, but which I believe you have undertaken from unselfish devotion."

The scant expression of a reserved nature is sometimes more attractive to women than the most fluent vivacity. Possibly there was also a melancholy grace in his sardonic soldier's manner that affected her, for she looked up and said impulsively:

"You think so?"

But he met her eager eyes with some surprise. "I certainly do," he replied more coldly. "I can imagine your feelings on finding your uncle's home in the possession of your enemies, and your presence under the family roof only a sufferance. I can hardly believe it a pleasure to you or a task you would have accepted for yourself alone."

"But," she said, turning from him wickedly, "what if I did it only to excite my revenge; what if I knew it would give me courage to entice my people to carry the way into your own homes, to make you of the north feel as I feel, and taste our bitterness?"

"I could easily understand that too," he returned with listless coldness, "although I don't admit that revenge is an unmixed pleasure even to a woman."

"A woman," she repeated, indignantly. "There is no sex in a war like this."

"You are spoiling your flower," he said quietly. "It is very pretty—and a native one, too—not an invader—nor even transplanted. May I look at it?"

She hesitated, half recoiling for an instant, and her hand trembling. Then suddenly and abruptly she said with a hysteric little laugh: "Take it—then," and almost thrust it in his hand.

It certainly was a pretty flower, not unlike a lily in appearance, with a bell-like cup and long anthers covered with a fine pollen like red dust. As he lifted it to his face to inhale its perfume she uttered a slight cry and snatched it from his hand.

She uttered a slight cry and snatched it from his hand.

"There!" she said with the same nervous laugh. "I knew you would—I ought to have warned you. The pollen comes off so easily, and leaves a stain. And you've got some on your cheek. Look!" she continued, taking her handkerchief from her pocket and wiping his cheek, "see there!" The delicate cambric showed a blood red streak.

"It grows in a swamp," she continued in the same excited strain, "we call it dragon's teeth—like the kind that was sown in the story, you know. We children used to find it and then paint our faces and lips with it. We called it our rouge. I was almost tempted to try it again when I found it just now. It took me back so to the old times."

Following her odd manner rather than her words, as she turned her face toward him suddenly, Brant was inclined to think that she had tried it already, so scarlet was her cheek. But it presently paled again under his cold scrutiny.

"You must miss the old times," he said calmly. "I am afraid you found very little of them left, except in these flowers."

"And hardly there," she said bitterly. "Your troops had found a way through the marsh and had trampled down the bushes."

Brant's brow clouded. He remembered that the brook which had run red during the fight had lost itself in this marsh. It did not increase his liking for this beautiful but blindly vicious animal at his side and even his momentary pity for her was fading fast. She was incorrigible. They walked on for a few moments in silence.

"You said," she began at last in a gentler and even hesitating voice, "that your wife was a southern woman."

He checked an irritated start with difficulty. "I believe I did," he said coldly, as he regretted it.

"And of course you taught her your Gospel—the Gospel according to St. Lincoln. O, I know," she went on hurriedly, as if conscious of his irritation and seeking to allay it. "She was a woman and loved you, and thought with your thoughts and saw only with your eyes. Yes—that's the way with us—I suppose we all do it," she added, bitterly.

"She had her own opinions," said Brant, briefly, as he recovered himself.

Nevertheless his manner so decidedly closed all further discussion that there was nothing left for the young girl but silence. But it was broken by her in a few moments in her old contemptuous voice and manner.

"Pray don't trouble yourself to accompany me any further, Gen. Brant. Unless, of course, you are afraid I may come across some of your—your soldiers. I promise you I won't eat them."

"I am afraid you must suffer my company a little longer, Miss Faulkner, on account of these same soldiers," returned Brant, gravely. "You may not know that this road, in which I find you, takes you through a cordon of pickets. If you were alone you would be stopped, questioned, and, failing to give the password, you would be detained, sent to the guard house and—" he stopped and fixed his eyes on her keenly as he added "and searched."

"You would not dare to search a woman!" she said, indignantly, although her flush gave way to a slight pallor.

"You said just now that there should be no sex in a war like this," returned Brant, carelessly, but without abating his scrutinizing gaze.

"Then it is war," she said, quickly, with a white, significant face.

His look of scrutiny turned to one of puzzled wonder But at the same moment there was a flash of a bayonet in the hedge, a voice called "halt," and a soldier stepped into the road.

Gen. Brant advanced, met the salute of the picket with a few formal words, and then turned toward his fair companion, as another soldier and a sergeant joined the group.

"Miss Faulkner is new to the camp, took the wrong turning, and was unwittingly leaving the lines when I joined her." He fixed his eyes keenly on her now colorless face, but she did not return his look. "You will show her the shortest way to quarters," he continued to the sergeant, "and should she at any time lose her way you will again conduct her home—but without detaining or reporting her."

He lifted his cap, remounted his horse and rode away as the young girl, with a proud, indifferent step, moved down the road with the sergeant. A mounted officer passed him and saluted—it was one of his own staff. From some strange instinct he knew that he had witnessed the scene, and from some equally strange intuition he was annoyed by it. But he continued his way, visiting one or two outposts and returned by a long detour to his quarters. As he stepped upon the veranda he saw Miss Faulkner at the bottom of the garden talking with some one across the hedge. By the aid of his glass he could recognize the shapely figure of the mulatto woman which he had seen before. But by its aid he also discovered that she was carrying a flower exactly like the one which Miss Faulkner still held in her hand. Had she been with Miss Faulkner in the lane—and if so, why had she disappeared when he came up? Impelled by something stronger than mere curiosity, he walked quickly down the garden, but she evidently had noticed him, for she quickly disappeared. Not caring to meet Miss Faulkner again, he retraced his steps, resolving that he would on the first opportunity personally examine and interrogate this new visitor. For if she were to take Miss Faulkner's place even in a subordinate capacity—this precaution was clearly within his rights.

He reentered his room and seated himself at his desk before the dispatches, orders and reports awaiting him. He found himself, however, working half mechanically, and recurring to his late interview with Miss Faulkner in the lane. If she had any inclination to act the spy, or to use her position here as a means of communicating with the enemy's lines, he thought he had thoroughly frightened her. Nevertheless, now, for the first time, he was inclined to accept his chief's opinion of her. She was not only too clumsy and inexperienced, but she totally lacked the self-restraint of a spy. Her nervous agitation in the lane was due to something more disturbing than his mere possible intrusion upon her confidence with the mulatto.

On the contrary, it seemed to be personal to himself. He recalled the singular significance of her question: "Then it is war?" He recalled her strange allusion to his wife; was it merely the outcome of his own foolish confession on their first interview, or was it a concealed ironical taunt? Having satisfied himself that she was not likely to imperil his public duty in any way, he was angry with himself for speculating further. But, although he still felt toward her the same antagonism she had at first provoked, he was conscious that she was beginning to exercise a strange fascination on him.

Dismissing her at last with an effort, he finished his work and then rose and unlocking a closet took out a small dispatch box to which he intended to intrust a few more important orders and memoranda. As he opened it with a key on his watch chain he was struck with a faint perfume that seemed to come from it—a perfume that he remembered. Was it the smell of the flower that Miss Faulkner carried—or the scent of the handkerchief with which she had wiped his cheek—a mingling of both! Or was he under some diabolical spell of that weird girl—and her witch-like flower? He leaned on the box and suddenly started. Upon the outer covering of a dispatch was a singular blood-red streak! He examined it closely—it was the powdery stain of the lily pollen—exactly as he had seen it on her handkerchief.

There could be no mistake. He passed his hand over the stain—he could still feel the slippery, impalpable powder of the pollen. It was not there when he had closed the box that morning, it was impossible that it should be there unless the box had been opened during his absence. He reexamined the contents of the box, the papers were all there. More than that—they were papers of no importance except to him personally; contained no plans nor key to any military secret; he had been far too wise to intrust any to the accidents of this alien house. The prying intruder, whoever it was, had gained nothing! But there was unmistakably the attempt! And the existence of a would-be spy within the purlieus of the house was equally clear.

He called an officer from the next room. "Has anyone been here since my absence?"

"No, general."

"Has anyone passed through the hall?"

He had fully anticipated the answer, as the subaltern replied: "Only the women servants."

He reentered his room. Closing the door, he again carefully examined the box, his table, the papers upon it, the chair before it, and even the Chinese matting on the floor, for any further indication of the pollen. It hardly seemed possible that anyone could have entered the room with the flower in their hand without scattering some of the tell-tale dust elsewhere; it was too large a flower to be worn on the breast or in the hair. Again, no one would have dared to linger there long enough to have made an examination of the box—with an officer in the next room, and servants passing. The box had been removed and the examination made elsewhere.

An idea seized him. Miss Faulkner was still absent—the mulatto had apparently gone home. He quickly mounted the staircase, but, instead of entering his room, turned suddenly aside into the wing which had been reserved. The first door yielded, as he turned the knob gently, and he entered a room which he at once recognized as the "young lady's boudoir." But the dusty and draped furniture had been arranged and uncovered, and the apartment had every sign of present use. Yet, although there was very evidence of its being used by a person of taste and refinement, he was surprised to see that the garments, hanging in the open press, were such as were used by negro servants, and that a gaudy handkerchief, such as housemaids use for turbans, was lying on the pretty silken coverlet. He did not linger over these details, but cast a rapid glance round the room. Then his eyes became fixed on a fanciful writing desk which stood by the window. For in a handsome vase placed on its level top and drooping on a portfolio below hung a cluster of the strange flowers that Miss Faulkner had carried.

CHAPTER IV.

It seemed plain to Brant that the dispatch box had been conveyed here and opened for security on this desk, and in the hurry of examining the papers the flower had been jostled, and the fallen grains of pollen overlooked by the spy. There were one or two freckles of red on the desk, which made this accident appear the more probable. But he was equally struck by another circumstance. The desk stood immediately before the window. As he glanced mechanically from it he was surprised to see that it commanded an extensive view of the slope below the eminence on which the house stood, even beyond his furthest line of pickets. The vase of flowers—each of which was nearly as large as a magnolia blossom and striking in color, occupied a central position before it, and no doubt could be quite distinctly seen from a distance. Of that he would satisfy himself hereafter. But for the present he could not resist the strong impression that this fateful and extraordinary blossom, carried by Miss Faulkner and the mulatto, and so strikingly "in evidence" at the window, was in some way a signal. Obeying an impulse which he was conscious had a half-superstitious foundation, he carefully lifted the vase from its position before the window and placed it on a side table. Then he cautiously slipped from the room.

But he could not as easily shake off the perplexity which the occurrence had caused, although he was satisfied that it was fraught with no military or strategic danger to his command, and that the unknown spy had obtained no information whatever. But he was forced to admit to himself that he was more concerned in his attempts to justify the conduct of Miss Faulkner with this later revelation. It was quite possible that the dispatch box had been purloined by some one else during her absence from the house—as the presence of the mulatto servant in his room would have been less suspicious than hers. There was really little evidence to connect Miss Faulkner with the actual outrage—rather might not the real spy have taken advantage of her visit here to throw suspicion upon her? He remembered her singular manner—the strange inconsistency with which she had forced this flower upon him. She would hardly have done so had she been conscious of it having so serious an import. Yet what was the secret of her manifest agitation? A sudden inspiration flashed across his mind; a smile came upon his lips. She was in love! The enemy's line contained some sighing young subaltern with whom she was in communication—and for whom she had undertaken this quest. The flower was their language of correspondence, no doubt. It explained also the young girl's animosity against the younger officers—his adversaries; against himself—their commander. He had previously wondered why—if she were indeed a spy—she had not chosen—upon some equally specious order from Washington—the headquarters of the division commander, whose secrets were more valuable. This was explained by the fact that she was nearer the lines and her lover in her present abode. He had no idea that he was making excuses for her—he believed himself only just. The recollection of what she had said of the power of love—albeit it had hurt him cruelly at the time—was now clearer to him, and even seemed to mitigate her offense. She would be here but a day or two longer; he could afford to wait without interrogating her.

But as to the real intruder—spy or thief—that was another affair, and quickly settled. He gave an order to the officer of the day peremptorily forbidding the entrance of alien servants or slaves within the precincts of the headquarters. Anyone thus trespassing was to be brought before him. The officer looked surprised—he even fancied disappointed. The graces of the mulatto woman's figure had evidently been not thrown away upon his subalterns.

An hour or two later, when he was mounting his horse for a round of inspection, he was surprised to see Miss Faulkner, accompanied by the mulatto woman, running hurriedly to the house. He had forgotten his late order until he saw the latter halted by the sentries, but the young girl came flying on regardless of her companion. Her skirt was caught in one hand, her straw hat had fallen back in her flight, and was caught only by a ribbon around her swelling throat, her loosened hair lay in a black rippled loop on one shoulder. For an instant Brant thought that she was seeking him in indignation at his order, but a second look at her set face, eager eyes and parted scarlet lips showed him that she had not even noticed him in the concentration of her purpose. She swept by him into the hall; he heard the swish of her skirt and rapid feet on the stairs; she was gone. What had happened—or was this another of her moods?

But he was called to himself by the apparition of a corporal standing before him with the mulatto woman—the first capture under his order. She was tall, well formed, but unmistakably showing the negro type, even in her small features. Her black eyes were excited, but unintelligent, her manner dogged, but with the obstinacy of half-conscious stupidity. Brant felt not only disappointed, but had a singular impression that she was not the same woman that he had first seen. Yet there was the tall, graceful figure, the dark profile and the turbaned head that he had once followed down the passage by his room.

Her story was stupidly simple. She had known "missy" from a child She had just trapsed over to see her that afternoon; they were walking together when the sojers stopped her. She had never been stopped before, even by "patter rollers."* Her ole massa (Manly) had gib leaf to go see Miss Josey, and hadn't said nuffin' about no "orders."

More annoyed than he cared to confess, Brant briefly dismissed her with a warning. As he cantered down the slope the view of the distant pickets recalled the window in the wing and he turned in his saddle to look at it. There it was—the largest and most dominant window in that part of the building—and within it, a distinct and vivid object, almost filling the opening, was the vase of flowers which he had a few hours ago removed, restored to its original position. He smiled. The hurried entrance and consternation of Miss Faulkner was now fully explained. He had interrupted some impassioned message, perhaps even countermanded some affectionate rendezvous beyond the lines. And it settled the fact that it was she who had done the signaling But would not this also make her cognizant of the taking of the dispatch box? He reflected, however, that the room was apparently occupied by the mulatto woman; he remembered the calico dresses and turban on the bed; and it was possible that Miss Faulkner had only visited it for the purpose of signaling to her lover. But the circumstance did not tend to make his mind easier. It was, however, presently diverted by an unlooked-for incident.

As he rode through the camp a group of officers congregated before a large mess tent appeared to be highly amused by the conversation—half monologue and half harangue—of a singular-looking individual who stood in the center. He wore a "slouch" hat, to the band of which he had imparted a military air by the addition of a gold cord, but the brim was caught up at the side in a peculiarly theatrical and highly artificial fashion. A heavy cavalry saber depended from a broad buckled belt under his black frock coat, with the addition of two revolvers, minus their holsters, stuck on either side of the buckle, after the style of stage smugglers. A pair of long enameled leather riding boots, with the tops turned deeply over, as if they had once done duty for the representative of a cavalier, completed his extraordinary equipment. The group were so absorbed in him that they did not perceive the approach of their chief and his orderly, and Brant, with a sign to the latter, halted only a few paces from the central figure. His speech was a singular mingling of high-flown and exalted epithets and inexact pronunciation, with occasional lapses of western slang.

"Well, I ain't purtendin' to any stratutegical smartness, and I didn't gradooate at West Point as one of these Apochryphal engineers; I don't do much talking about 'flank' movements or 'recognizances in force' or 'Ehellon skirmishing,' but when it comes down to square Injin fightin', I reckon I kin have my say. There are men who don't know the army contractor," he added, darkly, "who mebbe have heard of 'Red Jim.' I don't mention names, gentlemen, but only the other day a man that you all know says to me: 'If I only knew what you do about scoutin' I wouldn't be wanting for information as I do.' I ain't going to say who it was, or break any confidence between gentlemen—by saying how many stars he had on his shoulder strap, but he was a man who knew what he was saying. And I say ag'in, gentlemen, that the curse of the northern army is the want of proper scoutin'. What was it caused Bull's run? Want o' scoutin'. What was it rolled up Pope? Want o' scoutin'. What killed Baker at Ball's Bluff? Want o' scoutin'. What caused the slaughter at the Wilderness? Want o' scoutin'. Injin scoutin'! Why, only the other day, gentlemen, I was approached to know what I'd take to organize a scoutin' force. And what did I say? 'No, general, it ain't because I represent one of the largest army beef contracts in the country,' says I; 'it ain't because I belong, so to speak, to the "Sinews of War," but because I'd want about 10,000 trained Injins from the reservations! And the regular West Point high-toned, scientific inkybus that weighs so heavily on our army don't see it—and won't have it! Then Sherman, he sez to me—"

But here a roar of laughter interrupted him, and in a cross-fire of sarcastic interrogations that began, Brant saw with relief a chance of escape. For in the voice, manner and, above all, the characteristic temperament of the stranger, he had recognized his old playmate and the husband of Susy—the redoubtable Jim Hooker! There was no mistaking that gloomy audacity—that mysterious significance—that magnificent lying. But even at that moment Clarence Brant's heart had gone out—with all his old loyalty of feeling—toward his old companion. He knew that a public recognition of him then and there would plunge Hooker into confusion. He felt keenly the ironical plaudits and laughter of his officers over the manifest weakness and vanity of the ex-teamster, ex-rancher, ex-actor and husband of his girl sweetheart, and would have spared him the knowledge that he had overheard it. Turning hastily to the orderly he bade him bring the stranger to his headquarters, and rode away unperceived.

He had heard enough, however, to account for his presence there, and the singular chance that had brought them again together. He was evidently one of those large civil contractors of supplies whom the government was obliged to employ, who visited the camp, half officially, and whom the army alternately depended upon and abused. Brant had dealt with his underlings in the commissariat, and even now remembered that he had heard he was coming, but had overlooked the significance of his name. But how he came to leave his theatrical profession, how he had attained a position which implied a command of considerable capital—for many of the contractors had already amassed large fortunes—and what had become of Susy and her ambitions in this radical change of circumstances, were things to be learned. In his own changed conditions he had seldom thought of her; it was with a strange feeling of irritation and half responsibility that he now recalled his last interview with her and the emotion to which he had succumbed.

He had not long to wait. He had scarcely regained the quarters at his own private office before he heard the step of the orderly upon the veranda and the trailing clank of Hooker's saber. He did not know, however, that Hooker, without recognizing his name, had received the message as a personal tribute, and had left his sarcastic companions triumphantly, with the air of going to a confidential interview to which his well-known military connection had entitled him. It was with a bearing of gloomy importance, and his characteristic sullen sidelong glance that he entered the apartment, and did not look up until Brant had signaled the orderly to withdraw and closed the door behind him. And then he recognized his old boyish companion—the professed favorite of fortune!

For a moment he gasped with astonishment. For a moment gloomy incredulity, suspicion, delight, pride, admiration, even affection, struggled for mastery in his sullen staring eyes, and open, twitching mouth. For here was Clarence Brant, handsomer than ever, more superior than ever in the majesty of uniform and authority—which fitted him, the younger man, through his four years' of active service with the careless ease and bearing of the veteran! Here was the hero whose name was already so famous that the mere coincidence of it with that of the modest civilian he had known would have struck him as preposterous. Yet here he was—supreme and dazzling—surrounded by the pomp and circumstance of war—into whose reserved presence he, Jim Hooker, had been ushered with the formality of challenge, saluting and presented bayonets!

Luckily Brant had taken advantage of his first gratified ejaculation to shake him warmly by the hand, and then with both hands laid familiarly on his shoulder force him down into a chair. Luckily, for by that time Jim Hooker had with characteristic gloominess found time to taste the pangs of envy—an envy the more keen since, in spite of his success as a peaceful contractor, he had always secretly longed for military display and distinction. He looked at the man who had achieved it, as he firmly believed, by sheer luck, and accident and his eyes darkened. Then, with characteristic weakness and vanity, he began to resist his first impressions of Clarence's superiority, and to air his own importance. He leaned heavily back in his chair in which he had been thus genially forced, drew off his gauntlet and attempted to thrust it through his belt, as he had seen Brant do, but failed on account of his pistols already occupying that position, dropped it, got his sword between his legs in attempting to pick it up, and then leaned back again, with half-closed eyes, serenely indifferent of his old companion's smiling face.

"I reckon," he began, slowly, with a slightly patronizing air, "that we'd have met, sooner or later, at Washington, or at Grant's headquarters, for Hooker, Meacham & Co. go everywhere, and are about as well known as major generals, to say nothin'," he went on, with a sidelong glance at Brant's shoulder straps, "of brigadiers—and it's rather strange, only, of course, you're kind of fresh in the service—that you ain't heard of me afore."

"But I'm very, very glad to hear of you now, Jim," said Brant, smiling, "and from your own lips—which I am also delighted to find," he added, mischievously, "are still as frankly communicative on that topic, as of old. But I congratulate you, old fellow, on your good fortune. When did you leave the stage?"

Mr. Hooker frowned slightly. "I never really was on the stage, you know," he said, waving his hand with assumed negligence—"only went on to please my wife. Mrs. Hooker wouldn't act with vulgar professionals, don't you see! I was really manager—most of the time, and lessee of the theater. Went east when the war broke out to offer—my sword and knowledge of Injin' fightin'—to Uncle Sam! Drifted into a big pork contract at St. Louis with Fremont. Been at it ever since. Offered a commission in the regular service lots o' times. Refused."

"Why?" asked Brant, demurely.

"Too much West Point starch around to suit me," returned Hooker, darkly. "And too many spies!"

"Spies?" echoed Brant, abstractedly, with a momentary reminiscence of Miss Faulkner.

"Yes, spies," continued Hooker, with dogged mystery. "One-half of Washington is watching t'other half, and, from the president's wife down, most of the women are secesh!"

Brant suddenly fixed his keen eyes on his guest. But the next moment he reflected that this was only Jim Hooker's usual speech and possessed no ulterior significance. He smiled again and said more gently:

"And how is Mrs. Hooker?"

Mr. Hooker fixed his eyes on the ceiling, rose, pretended to look out of the window; then, taking his seat again by the table, as if fronting an imaginary audience, and pulling slowly at his gauntlets, after the usual theatrical indication of a perfect sang froid, said:

"There ain't any."

"Good heavens!" said Brant, with genuine emotion. "I beg your pardon—really I—"

"Mrs. Hooker and me are divorced," continued Hooker, slightly changing his attitude and leaning heavily on his saber, with his eyes still on his fanciful audience. "There was, you understand," —lightly tossing his gauntlet aside —"incompatibility of temper!—and—we—parted. Ha!" he uttered a low, bitter, scornful laugh, which, however, produced the distinct impression in Brant's mind that up to that moment he had never had the slightest feeling in the matter whatever.

"You seemed to be on such good terms with each other," murmured Brant, vaguely.

"Seemed!" said Hooker bitterly, glancing sardonically at an ideal second row in the pit before him—"yes, seemed! There were—other differences—social and political. You understand that—you have suffered too." He reached out his hand and pressed Brant's in heavy effusiveness. "But," he continued, haughtily, lightly tossing his glove again, "we are all men of the world—we let that pass!" And it was possible that he found the strain of his present attitude too great, for he changed to an easier position.

"But," said Brant, curiously, "I always thought that Mrs. Hooker was intensely union and northern."

"Put on!" said Hooker, in his natural voice.

"But you remember the incident of the flag?" persisted Brant.

"Mrs. Hooker was always an actress," said Hooker significantly. "But," he added cheerfully, "Mrs. Hooker is now the wife of Senator Boompointer, one of the wealthiest and most powerful republicans in Washington—carries the patronage of the whole west in his vest pocket!"

"Yet if she is not a republican—why did she"—began Brant.

"For a purpose," responded Hooker, darkly. "But," he added again with greater cheerfulness, "she belongs to the very elite of Washington society. Goes to all the foreign ambassadors' balls, and is a power at the white house. Her picture is in all the first-class illustrated papers."

The singular but unmistakable pride of the man in the importance of the wife from whom he was divorced, and for whom he did not care, would have offended Brant's delicacy, or at least have excited his ridicule, but for the reason that he was more deeply stung by Hooker's allusion to his own wife and his degrading similitude of their two conditions. But he dismissed the former as part of Hooker's invincible and still boyish extravagance, and the latter as part of his equally characteristic asumption. Perhaps he was conscious, too, notwithstanding the lapse of years and the condonation of separation and forgetfulness, that he deserved little delicacy from the hands of Susy's husband.

Nevertheless he dreaded to hear him speak again of her. And the fear was realized in a question.

"Does she know you are here?"

"Who?" said Brant, curtly.

"Your wife. That is—I reckon she's your wife still, eh?"

"I do not know that she knows," returned Brant quietly. He had regained his self-composure.

"Susy—Mrs. Senator Boompointer, that is"—he seemed to feel a certain dignity in his late wife's new title, "allowed that she'd gone abroad on a secret mission from the southern confederacy to them crowned heads over there. She was good at ropin' men in, you know. Anyhow, Susy—afore she was Mrs. Boompointer—was dead set on findin' out where she was—but never could. She seemed to drop out of sight a year ago. Some said one thing and some said another. But you can bet your bottom dollar that Mrs. Senator Boompointer, who knows how to pull all the wires in Washington, will know if anyone does."

"But is Mrs. Boompointer really disaffected and a southern sympathizer,' said Brant, "or is it only caprice or fashion?" While speaking he had risen with a half abstracted face and had gone to the window, where he stood in a loitering attitude. Presently he opened the window and stepped outside. Hooker wonderingly followed him. One or two officers had already stepped out of their rooms, and were standing upon the veranda, another had halted in the path. Then one quickly reentered the house, reappeared with his cap and sword in his hand and ran lightly toward the guard house. A slight crackling noise seemed to come from beyond the garden wall.

"What's up?" said Hooker, with staring eyes.

"Picket firing."

The crackling suddenly became a long rattle. Brant reentered the room, and picked up his hat.

"You'll excuse me for a few moments?"

A hollow sound shook the house.

"What's that?" gasped Hooker.

"Cannon."

CHAPTER V.

In another instant bugles were ringing through the camp, with the hurrying mass of mounted officers and the tramping of forming men. The house itself was almost deserted. Although that single cannon shot had been created to prove that it was not mere skirmishing of pickets, Brant still did not believe in any serious attack of the enemy. His position, as in the previous engagement, had no strategic importance to them. They were no doubt only making a feint against his position to conceal some advance upon the center of the army a mile or two away. Satisfied that he was in easy supporting distance of the division commander, he extended his lines along the ridge ready to fall back in that direction while retarding the advance and masking the movements of his chief. He gave a few orders necessary to the probable abandonment of the house, and then returned to it. Shot and shell were already dropping in the field below. A thin ridge of blue haze sheathed the line of skirmish fire. A small conical white cloud, like a bursting cotton pod, revealed an opened battery in the willow-fringed meadow. Yet the pastoral peacefulness of the house was unchanged. The afternoon sun lay softly on its deep verandas; the pot pourri incense of fallen rose leaves haunted it still.

He entered his room through the French window in the veranda, when the door leading from the passage was suddenly flung open, and Miss Faulkner swept quickly inside, closed the door behind her and leaned back heavily against it—panting and breathless.

Clarence was startled, and for a moment shamed. He suddenly realized that in the excitement he had entirely forgotten her and the dangers to which she might be exposed. She had probably heard the firing, her womanly fears had been awakened; she had come to him for protection. But as he turned toward her with a reassuring smile, he was shocked to see that her agitation and pallor were far beyond any physical fear. She motioned him desperately to shut the window by which he had entered, and said with white lips:

"I must speak with you alone!"

"Certainly. But there is no immediate danger to you even here—and I can soon put you beyond the reach of any possible harm."

"Harm me! God! if it were only that!"

He stared at her uneasily.

"Listen," she said, gasping, "listen to me! Then hate, despise me—kill me if you will. For you are betrayed and ruined—cut off and surrounded! It has been helped on by me, but I swear to you the blow did not come from my hand! I would have saved you. God knows how it happened—it was fate!"

In an instant Brant saw its truth instinctively and clearly. But with the revelation came that wonderful calmness and perfect self-possession which never yet had failed him in any emergency. With the sound of the increasing cannonade and its shifting position made clearer to his ears, the view of his whole threatened position spread out like a map before his eyes, the swift calculation of the time of his men could hold the ridge, in his mind—even the hurried estimate of the precious moments he could give to the wretched woman before him—all this he was keenly alive to as he gravely, even gently, led her to a chair, and said in a critical and level voice:

"This is not enough! Speak slowly, plainly. I must know everything. How and in what way have you betrayed me?"

She looked at him imploringly—reassured, yet awed by his gentleness. "You won't believe me! You cannot believe me! But I do not even know; I have taken and exchanged letters whose contents I never saw—between the confederates and a spy who comes to this house—but who is far away by this time. I did it because I thought you hated and despised me, because I thought it was my duty to help my cause, because you said it was 'war' between us, but I have spied on you. I swear it!"

"Then how do you know of this attack?" he said, calmly.

She brightened, half timidly, half hopefully. "There is a window in the wing of this house that overlooks the slope near the confederate lines. There was a signal placed in it—not by me—but I knew it meant that as long as it was there the plot, whatever it was, was not ripe, and that no attack would be made on you as long as it was visible. That much I knew, that much the spy had to tell me, for we both had to guard that room in turns. I wanted to keep this dreadful thing off until—until," her voice trembled—"until," she added hurriedly, seeing his calm eyes were reading her very soul, "until I went away, and for that purpose I withheld some of the letters that were given me. But this morning, while I was away from the house, I looked back and saw that the signal was no longer there. Some one had changed it. I ran back, but I was too late, God help me, as you see!"

The truth flashed upon Brant. It was his own hand that had precipitated the attack! But a larger truth came to him now, like a dazzling inspiration. If he had thus precipitated the attack before it was ripe, there was a chance that it was imperfect, and there was still hope. But there was no trace of this visible in his face, as he fixed his eyes calmly on hers, although his pulses were halting in expectancy as he said:

"Then the spy had suspected you, and changed it."

"O, no!" she said, eagerly, "for the spy was with me and was frightened, too. We both ran back together—you remember—she was stopped by the patrol!" She checked herself suddenly, but too late. Her cheeks blazed, her head sank—with the foolish disclosure into which her eagerness had betrayed her.

But Brant appeared not to notice it. He was, in fact, puzzling his brain to conceive what information the stupid mulatto woman could have obtained here. His strength, his position was in scent to the enemy—there was nothing to gain from him. She must have been, like the trembling, eager woman before him, a mere tool of others.

"Did this woman live here?" he said.

"No," she said. "She lived with the Manlys, but had friends whom she visited at your general's headquarters."

With difficulty Brant suppressed a start. It was clear to him now. The information had been obtained at the division headquarters and passed through his camp as being nearest the confederate lines. But what was the information, and what movement had he precipitated? It was clear that this woman did not know. He looked at her keenly. A sudden explosion shook the house, a drift of smoke passed the window—a shell had burst in the garden.

She had been gazing at him despairingly, wistfully, but she did not blanch or start.

An idea too possession of him. He approached her and took her cold hand. A half smile parted her pale lips.

"You have courage—you have devotion," he said, gravely. "I believe you regret the step you have taken. If you could undo what you have done, even at peril to yourself, dare you do it?"

"Yes," she said, breathlessly.

"You are known to the enemy. If I am surrounded you could pass through the confederate lines unquestioned."

"Yes," she said, eagerly.

"A note from me would pass you again through the pickets of our headquarters. But you would bear a note to the general that no eyes but his must see. It would not implicate you or yours—it would be only a word of warning."

"And you," she said, quickly, "would be saved! They would come to your assistance! You would not then be taken?"

He smiled gently. "Perhaps—who knows?"

He sat down and wrote hurriedly. "This," he said, handing her a slip of paper, "is a pass. You will use it beyond your own lines. This note," he continued, handing her a sealed envelope, "is for the general. No one else must see it, or know of it—not even your lover—should you meet him!"

"My lover!" she said, indignantly, with a flash of her old savagery, "what do you mean? I have no lover!"

Brant glanced at her flushed face. "I thought," he said, quietly, "that there was some one you cared for in yonder lines—some one you wrote to; it would have been an excuse—" is excellent for all throat inflammations and for asthma. Consumptives will invariably derive benefit from its use, as it quickly abate the cough, renders expectoration easy, assisting nature in restoring wasted tissues. There is a large percentage of those who suppose their cases to be consumption who are only suffering from a chronic cold or deep seated cough, often aggravated by catarrh. For catarrh use Ely's Cream Balm. Both remedies are pleasant to use. Cream Balm 50c per bottle; Pineola Balsam 25c, at druggists. In quantities of $2.50 will deliver on receipt of amount. BIG FIRES!

Pineola Cough Balsam

Great Fires Are Constantly Burning.

Still They Will Go Out in Time if Not Replenished—Food is Fuel for the Body.

History records the occurrence of most disastrous fires. A few times our own country has been visited in this way with tremendous force. Yet how insignificant they seem when compared to the raging fires of the sun. A recent writer in one of our monthly journals, illustrates the enormous heat which the sun gives out, as follows: he says that if all the coal which exists on this globe could be placed in one mass, and then immediately burned up, it would not produce as much heat as the sun throws off into space in one-tenth of a second. Of course, we cannot comprehend what this means, But there is another fire constantly burning, of which many of us are not aware, although we live very close to it.

We all know that the human body is warmer than the surrounding atmosphere; while during cold weather the difference is very marked. What keeps the body warm? Because it is constantly burning up.

We replenish the fire in the stove by adding more coal or wood. The oxygen of the air unites with this fuel and heat is produced. The fuel for the body is our food; and the oxygen obtained from the air we breathe combines with it and heat is produced. This heat is constantly escaping from the skin. During summer we dress lightly to aid its escape. During winter we put on flannels, because wool is not a good conductor of heat, and will not allow it to escape so freely from the surface of the body.

If a person is plump in flesh, that is, if he has a layer of fat just beneath the skin, he has a medium which holds in the heat of the body, as a layer of wool does when placed on the outside of the skin. Persons who are plump in flesh do not shiver with every cool, invigorating breeze. Neither do they require so much food, for as the heat cannot escape so readily, so it is not necessary to add as much fuel. Plumpness means protection; defense against coughs and colds; shelter for an escape from neuralgia and sciatica; a shield to throw off nervous prostration; better security from the germs of consumption; an escape from a thousand aches and pains which cling to a body that is poorly nourished. Plumpness is prosperity, thrift, good nature, happiness.

Scott's Emulsion of Cod-liver Oil with Hypophosphites will not make you over-fat, simply plump, just about right. It puts that coat of fat over the body, pushes up the skin, and removes wrinkles and angles.

Scott's Emulsion contains more pure Norwegian Cod-liver Oil than any other emulsion in the world, that will stand the test of time as being a perfect inseparable emulsion. Ask your doctor.

GOT AWAY WITH A PENNY

SMALL HAUL MADE BY BURGLARS LAST SATURDAY NIGHT.

Obtained an Entrance to the Clinton Avenue Station, Stole Two Cents, Were Frightened, and Dropped One.

Burglars entered the Clinton Avenue station of the Jersey Central Railroad Saturday night and succeeded in escaping with one cent. They forced an entrance through one of the windows on the first floor with a jimmy. They then climbed over the high railing into the office, but found only a number of unstamped tickets and two cents in money. Mrs. Meader, the station agent, lives on the second floor in the station.

The noise below awakened her and she sprang from her bed. The uninvited visitors on the first floor heard her and took to flight, dropping one of the pennies in their hurry. Mrs. Meader says that if the robbers will send her their address, she will mail them the penny they lost.

There is no clue to the depredators or their disappearance, but Mrs. Meader is certain that there was more than one as she heard the thieves as they ran away.

A Sunday Fire.

A spark from a passing locomotive set fire to the shingle roof of the small frame house on East Fourth above Washington streets, occupied by Wm. Osborn and family, colored, yesterday morning at about 11:25. An alarm was sent in from Box 23, and the fire department made a very quick response. The rafters had caught from the roof, but a stream from the chemical engine extinguished the flames in short order. A hole was cut in the roof by the firemen to reach the fire from that point. The damage was very slight, and is estimated to be about $10.

Three Converts for the Volunteers.

Major and Mrs. Hartwright who are attached to the headquarters of the headquarters of the Volunteers in New York conducted the meetings of the local post in Reform Hall yesterday afternoon and evening. The evening meeting resulted in three converts.

Miss Yates and the members of the W. C. T. U. attended the meetings of the Volunteers at the morning meeting and Captain Mimms and her soldiers co-operated with the temperance people in their four o'clock meeting.

Horses Traveled Incog.

William Uhrhahn, of 13 Regent street, had a peculiar experience Saturday night at Dunellen. He was returning with a load of hay and stopped to water his horses. While they were drinking he stepped inside of a store to do an errand. In the meantime the horses started on a run and they did not stop till they reached their owner's barn in North Plainfield. When Mr. Uhrhahn reached home he found the horses and hay all safe and no worse for their flying trip.

A Healthy Organization.

The First Baptist church Boy's Brigade netted $45.06 from their recent entertainment given in the church. A set of resolutions were presented to R. K. Case at the service in the church yesterday afternoon thanking him for the illustrated lecture he gave them at that time. The Brigade was present in a body yesterday and attracted attention for their fine appearance.

Seventh-Day Church Officers.

A church meeting of the Seventh-Day Baptist church was held yesterday afternoon. Reports from the different committes and the tract society showed the church to be in a prosperous condition. The former officers were re-elected as follows: Clerk, J. D. Spicer; treasurer, George E. Stillman; trustee, Joseph A. Hubbard.

When troubled with a cough or cold use this remedy and you will not find it necessary to try several kinds before you get relief. DEATH OF A. M. DUNHAM.

An Old Plainfielder Succumbs to a Stroke of Apoplexy.

Augustus M. Dunham, aged seventy-nine years, died last evening about 6 o'clock at the home of his son, M. M. Dunham, 514 Arlington avenue, from apoplexy. For the past few days he had not felt very well, and there seemed to be a decline in his strength. He was found dead in the room.

Mr. Dunham has been a resident of this city since 1840, and was very well known. He was born at the homestead on Greenbrook road, near West Front street, in 1818. His father, Jonathan R. Dunham, conducted a tannery at that place for many years. His early years were spent at home, and in 1840 he was married to Elizabeth C. Rogers, of New York. They took up their residence on West Second street, near Park avenue, in the house, one side of which was occupied by Levi M. Hetfield. He lived there about three years and then moved to the house that stood in the rear of where Music Hall is now situated. Afterwards he purchased the property at 514 Arlington avenue, where he has lived ever since. His wife died in December, 1865. Five children survive him, Joseph T. Dunham and M. M. Dunham, of this city; Mrs. Carrie Stedman, of New York; Mrs. Berckman and Edwin Dunham, of Brooklyn. Randolph Dunham, of Madison, his brother, is the only one left out of ten children. Mr. Dunham was a staunch Christian and a member of the Seventh-Day Baptist church. He was a faithful attendant at all the services, when it was possible for him to go.

The Glee Club Concert.

The concert given by the Amherst Banjo and Glee Club at the Fourth Church last evening was a great success. An excellent programme was given, and the rendition brought out the ability and fine training of the members of the club. The burlesque solos by Mr. Bissell received popular applause, as did the solo rendered by Mr. Mossman of a "Leap Year Girl." Altogether the concert was the most entertaining that has been given in this city in some time.—Hartford Telegram. The club will give a concert at the Casino tonight.

A JOYOUS EASTER DAY.

THE RESURRECTION CELEBRATED IN THE CHURCHES YESTERDAY.

Special Services Rendered in all the Temples of Christianity to Commemorate the Day That Christ Arose.

A sunlit atmosphere and a gentle, balmy breeze that made all life glint and sparkle and wave, yesterday, contributed to make Easter an ideal day. Sweet scented flowers were redolent in all the churches, while carols of songs made joyful the temples of Christianity to commemorate the great event in the life of Christ. The services in the various churches were as follows:

CHURCH OF THE REDEEMER.

There was a profuse display of flowers at the Easter service of the Church of the Redeemer, Grove street, yesterday, the whole pulpit being banked with flowers, and an elaborate programme of music was rendered by a choir consisting of Miss Stevens, the Misses Hasbrook, Miss Davis, E. The congregation was about the largest that has attended worship in the edifice since it was erected, every seat being filled, and all standing room was also occupied. The offering received will be devoted to the building fund. The pastor of the church, Rev. Jocelyn Johnstone, preached a very eloquent sermon from the text, "Yet they knew not the scripture that He must rise from the dead." The sacrament of the Lord's supper was observed.

The programme consisted of the following selections: Kyrie Elieson, Madonno; Gloria, LaHache; Credo, LaHache; Regina Cœli, Melvil; Sanctus, LaHache; Benedictus, Wiegand; Agnus Dei, Leonard. The soloists were Miss C. Smith, soprano; Mrs. David Kenney, alto, and J. E. Bailey, basso. The service was impressive, and attended by a large congregation.

FIRST BAPTIST CHURCH.

The Easter-Day services at the First Baptist church were of especial interest, and both morning and afternoon, the large auditorium was filled with worshipers. As usual, the decorations were exceedingly fine. Around the platform and organ there was a profusion of lillies, palms, roses, azaleas and other choice flowers, presenting a scene of unequaled beauty. The music was under the direction of C. W. McCutchen and organist E. J. Fitzhugh, and the selections rendered by the choir were superb in every particular. In the morning the communion service was held, previous to which the following selections were given by the choir. "The First Day of the Week," Bruce Steane; "In the End of the Sabbath," O. B. Brown; "Te Deum, D flat," Lambillotte, arranged by E. J. Fitzhugh; "The Choir Angellic," E. W. Hascom. The soloists were Miss F. May Grant, soprano; Mrs. Knight, contralto; Wm Holmes, baritone; G. W. The review showed that on February 9th, 1896, there was the smallest attendance, 151, and on December 1st, 1895, the largest, 353. There were added during the year eighty-two scholars and eighty-four were dropped. In the main school there are twenty-nine classes, eight officers, thirty-one teachers; in the primary department fifteen classes, four officers, fifteen teachers and two adult classes. In all there are 452 connected with the school. Superintendent M. C. Dobbins reported for the Mount Olive Sunday-school. Owing to the fact that there was a communion service and baptism at the above church, the school was unable to be present. The report showed that $1,472 had been expended for additions to the church, and there was at present no debt. There are 200 scholars, eleven teachers, average attendance of scholars ninety-eight, teachers ten. There had been raised during the year $1,180 for pastor's salary, flagging sidewalk, new carpet and other expenses. Superintendent L. W. Randolph, reported for the East Third street Mission. There are now enrolled 160 scholars with an average attendance of seventy-five. The largest attendance was 107. The collections for the year amounted to $75. "Swell the Chorus" Wilkinson; schools, Benediction; Postlude, "Clauson D'Armour" Popp; organ, violin and piano.

ST. MARY'S (R. C.) CHURCH.

Never before in the history of the above-named church was Easter Sunday more fittingly celebrated than it was yesterday. At the three services preceding the solemn high mass the church was crowded, but at the latter service the edifice was filled to overflowing, many being unable to get seats in the church proper, but were obliged to be contented with standing in the vestibule. Many of those present were non-Catholics, attracted by the sight of witnessing the beautiful ritual of the church as observed on Easter, and also of hearing the musical programme, one that is seldom heard outside of a metropolitan church. The handsome main altar, with its many lighted candles and adorned with numerous floral pieces, (Easter lilies predominating presented a magnificent sight. Over the high altar and extending its full length were the words "He is Risen; Alleluia," brilliantly illuminated by many gas jets, while on the tabernacle was a crystal cross, similarly lighted, and very resplendent. Within the sanctuary, palms formed the major portion of the collection of plants that lent their beauty to grace the scene. The Asperges preceded the 10:30 solemn high mass, of which Rev. Father P. E. Smyth was the celebrant. An excellent sermon on the Resurrection was delivered by Rev. Father Murphy. The music consisted of organ and orchestra of fifteen pieces, the latter under the leadership of Jos. Sattels. To say it was grand, is putting it mildly, and it reflected credit on Mr. Sattels. The organ was presided over by Miss St. Leger. To M. J. Cashin, choir master, is due all praise, for it was his hard work and practice that the choir under his guidance underwent, that perfected them so that the musical portion of the services could not but be a success. The following were the soloists: Miss May Flanagan, soprano; Miss Tessie Keely, alto; T. J. Cumerford, tenor; Wm. J. O'Connor, bass. They were assisted by a chorus of twenty voices. The programme at 10:30 was as follows: Vidi Aquam, Leyendecker; Kyrie Elieson, Weber; Gloria in Excelsis, Farmer; Qui Tollis, Farmer; sermon; Credo, Farmer; Et Incarnatus, Farmer; Et Resurexit, Farmer; Regina Cœli, Cagliero; Sanctus, Weber; Benedictus, Weber; Agnus Dei, Weber; Dona Nobis, Weber; Traumerie, violin solo, Schuman, Joseph Sattels; March, Pontificale, Gounod, orchestra. At the grand vespers at 8 p. m. the following programme was rendered by a quartette, with M. J. Cashin, director, composed of Miss May Flanagan, soprano; Miss Tessie Keely, alto; T. J. Cumerford, tenor; W. J. O'Connor, bass: Domini Adjuvandum, Werner; Dixit Dominus, Werner; Confitebor, Werner; Laudate Pueri, Werner; Magnificat, chant; O Salutaris, so prano solo, Blandus, Miss May Flanagan; Tantum Ergo, trio, Verge; Laudate Dominum, chant. The service closed with the Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament, a fit ending of Easter, the day that the Lord hath made.

HOLY CROSS P. E. CHURCH.

Beautiful music and beautiful flowers made the Easter services at the Holy Cross church yesterday very impressive and attractive. In the morning the programme published in Saturday night's Press was followed out. The attendance was very large. The Sunday-School held their special exercises in the church in the afternoon, which were largely attended. The children marched into the church behind the surpliced choir and were seated in the front pews. The rector, T. Logan Murphy, made an address appropriate to the day. The floral decorations were all white and green. Easter and calla lilies, roses and other white flowers were placed about the altar and in the chancel in a way that gave a very artistic effect, while the green of the leaves of foliage plants blended very harmoniously with the flowers.

FIRST PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH.

The Easter services at the First Presbyterian church yesterday morning and evening were largely attended. The front of the church presented a beautiful appearance. Easter lilies were grouped just below the pulpit and just above hung a white dove, suspended by a wire. Potted plants were arranged along the edge of the platform, while cut flowers, in vases, were placed on the piano and tables. In the morning Rev. C. E. Herring preached a sermon appropriate to the day and the choir sang several additional anthems. The musical service, the programme for which was published in Saturday's Press, was held in the evening, Mrs. B. T. Barnes, pianist, and P. Ludwig Conde, violinist, assisting W. E. MacClymont, the regular organist, in the instrumental music.

KING ALCOHOL DID IT.

THREE YOUNG MEN ARRESTED FOR MALICIOUS MISCHIEF.

While on Their Way Home They Tore Up Sidewalks and Indulged in Other Petty, But Very Aggravating, Offenses.

A superfluity of alcoholic spirits usually ends by bringing the drinker into trouble. That was just the case with three young men who live in the vicinity of the Netherwood station, and this morning they had to answer for their misdeeds while under the influence. They gave their names as Lawrence Wallace, George Blyght and Joseph Doyle.

One day last week they came to this city and indulged rather too freely in rum and then started home late at night. Sergeant Kiely saw them and noticed that they appeared rather unsteady but, as they seemed to be trying to get home without causing any trouble, he did not stop them. By the time they reached Netherwood they were feeling happy and decided to have some fun.

They sang and shouted, but grew tired of that and started for some more destructive amusement. A flag stone of a sidewalk they dropped and banged about until they had smashed it. They also put planks against the door of the house so that when the door was opened there would be a fall of in planks. The matter was reported to the police and Sergeant Kiely remembered the three inebriated individuals and instituted a search for them. They were captured Saturday night and this morning all pleaded guilty.

Wallace, who was an old offender, was given his choice between paying $15 or going to jail for forty days. He paid. The other two paid fines of $8 each rather than go to jail for thirty days.

WILLIAM'S JOURNEY

The Imperial Party Will Reach Venice on April 10.

WILL THEN DROP THEIR INCOGNITO

The Interview Between the German Emperor and King Humbert—Expectation That Bismarck Will Again Control the Ship of State.

Berlin, April 6.—Advices received here from Palermo say that the sojourn in Sicily of the German imperial party is concluded and that the imperial yacht Hohenzollern with the emperor and empress, the crown prince and Prince Eitel Frederick and their respective suites and attendants on board, will sail through the straits of Messina and up the Adriatic, the voyage being timed so that the party will reach Venice on April 10. The weather during their stay in Sicily has been good. The imperial party have been well received everywhere. They have not been troubled with the curiosity of the public nor have they been annoyed by over attention on the part of the authorities. The emperor telegraphed to his brother, Prince Henry, at Rome on Friday requesting him to convey to King Humbert an expression of the delight experienced by the kaiser throughout his tour. Accordingly Prince Henry and his wife, Princess Irene of Hesse, went to the quirinal and delivered the emperor's message. They were cordially received by the king and Queen Margherita, their reception lasting an hour. The emperor will drop his incognito upon reaching Venice, where he will be received by the municipal authorities, the Prince of Naples, representing the king; the Duke of Sermoneta, Italian minister of foreign affairs, and Count Lanza di Rusca, Italian ambassador to Germany, the latter of whom left Berlin on Thursday for the purpose of assisting at the interview which will take place between King Humbert and the kaiser.

Bismarck's Latest Portrait.

The representative of the United Press while at Friedrichsruhe had a prolonged conversation with the celebrated German artist Paul Lenbach, who is one of Prince Bismarck's closest and most trusted friends. Herr Lenbach showed the correspondent his latest oil painting of Prince Bismarck. It is a fine work, the eye having a speaking expression that is marvellous. He also exhibited the last portrait which he painted from life of the old Kaiser William I. The picture is now hanging in the smoking room at Friedrichsruhe, and is so placed that Prince Bismarck sitting in his easy chair with his accustomed long-stemmed pipe can obtain the best possible view of the features of his old master. Prince Bismarck passes much of his time daily in this room. The guests who visited the ex-chancellor on the occasion of his birthday concurred in the opinion that the kaiser's present to the prince, a photograph of the imperial group encased in a bronze frame, the whole being about a foot long, signified almost anything that the observer of the gift might surmise, but really gave no indication of the kaiser's feeling. It was remarked that the features of the notable persons viewing the photograph made rapid changes from cold to warmth and vice versa. Count von Waldersee, after meeting the prince, expressed his pleasure at seeing the ex-chancellor so strong and bright.

Expecting Bismarck's Recall.

The semi-official press are conjecturing that the emperor is again warming toward Prince Bismarck, and are accordingly recurring to praises of the prince's genius and services to the empire. The Cologne Gazette which recently published an article referring to the pitiful sight of the decayed chancellor stumbling, full of complaints, behind the state chariot, now declares that the period of antagonism towards him is over and that calumny has been silenced. "His worst enemies," the Gazette continues, "are ready to admit the grandeur of this colossal historic figure and the heart of the whole of Germany yearns towards him." The Bismarckian newspapers do not accept any criticism of the prince dealing with the ex-chancellor as belonging to past history and hold that it is probable that he will still be called upon to guide the state through a crisis. The Berlin Neueste Nachrichten asserts that the discontent at Prince Bismarck's dismissal from the public service remains as great to-day as it was in 1890. The noted German explorer, Eugen S. Wolff, in conversation with the United Press correspondent at Friedrichsruhe, declared that the day was coming when confusion and entanglement would reach such a pass that the emperor would be unable to help himself except by recalling Prince Bismarck to the chancellorship. "It will be a bad day for Germany," he said, "if the prince is not alive to avert a catastrophe." Herr Wolff expressed the opinion that England would prevent both Germany and France from making any further extension of their influence in Africa.

CARLISLE DECLINES.

Secretary of the Treasury Will Not Run for President.

Washington, April 6.—In a letter to Chairman Long of the democratic state central committee of Kentucky, mailed last night, Secretary of the Treasury Carlisle absolutely declines to enter the race for the democratic presidential nomination.

Forest Fire in Massachusetts.

Plymouth, Mass., April 6.—The first forest fire of the season burned over several hundred acres of woodland yesterday, mostly a young growth of oak. No corded wood was burned.

BERMUDA'S CARGO LANDED.

Official Advices from Gen. Garcia to the Cuban Junta.

New York, April 6.—The Ward line steamer Santiago, from Santiago, brought official news from Gen. Calixto Garcia to the Cuban junta. Garcia landed from the Bermuda at Boconao, between Guantanamo and Santiago de Cuba. The arms and ammunition were taken ashore in fourteen boats which Garcia left pulled up on the beach. The Bermuda stood by while the transfer was being made, but as soon as this was accomplished she steamed out to sea. The empty boats were seized by a Spanish cruiser and towed to Santiago. The press censor suppressed all reference to the incident. From these advices the junta is confident that the greater portion of the arms and ammunition the Bermuda carried out of this port is now in the possession of the Cuban patriot army, and that if any part was still left on the steamer when she was seized at Honduras it was only a small portion of the original cargo.

Spaniards Lose 800 Men.

A cipher dispatch received yesterday gives a detailed account of the Bermuda expedition to Cuba, of which Gen. Garcia had charge, and of an important battle which took place in Pinar del Rio, which was disastrous to the Spaniards, and which was made for the purpose of permitting the Bermuda to land her small arms and ammunition. The Spaniards lost 800 men.

A BOLD SPANIARD.

Offers To Raise 12,000 Catalans To War Against This Country.

New York, April 6.—A special cable dispatch from Madrid to the Herald says: News comes from Barcelona, published in that city by the Noticiero Universal, that a well known commandant of volunteers, who took an active part against the Carlists in the late war, has offered to raise 12,000 Catalans to make war against the United States in the event of the recognition of the belligerency of the Cuban insurgents. All he asks is that the Spanish authorities should supply Mauser rifles and land his forces on United States territory. The report that the government contemplated the mobilizing of 200,000 men for exigencies in the Cuban campaign is unfounded.

SHOUTED FOR "FREE CUBA."

Spanish Theatre the Scene of the Wildest Disorder—Two Arrests.

Barcelona, April 6.—During a performance of a patriotic play at the Novedadez theatre yesterday the audience cheered for Spain and Spanish Cuba. Some voices answered the cheers with cries of "Death to Spain!" "Long Live Free Cuba!" These treasonable shouts excited the wildest indignation among the loyalists, and it probably would have gone hard with the shouters had they been caught by the people. In the tumult, however, they all escaped but two, who were arrested by the police. One of the prisoners is a Cuban and the other is believed to be an anarchist. The police had hard work to defend the two men from the fury of the crowd.

AS TO RECIPROCITY.

Further Opinions Received by the House Ways and Means Committee.

Washington, April 6.—The committee on ways and means has received further responses to their circulars sent out some time ago to prominent manufacturers and business men asking their views on reciprocity. The milling trade, with one accord, and from all parts of the country, ask that something should be done for their immediate relief either by restoration of the reciprocity provisions in regard to flour or the passage of house bill 3,212 or a measure of like character. Replies from agricultural implement manufacturers are generally to the effect that as a rule the tariff in South America is light and its removal would produce little results. The Crane Iron company of Chicago advocates taking care of the home market; when a condition of things is brought about that will enable that to be reasonably well done it will then be time enough in their opinion to seek foreign markets on an extensive scale.

VALUABLE HORSES PERISH.

Loss on the Animals Burned in Buffalo's Fire Amounts to $75,000.

Buffalo, April 6.—The fire at the driving park Saturday night which destroyed the stables leased by Alonzo McDonald, the well-known trainer, caused the death of twenty valuable horses. The fire was caused by the explosion of an oil stove in one of the cleaner's rooms. There were thirty horses in McDonald's string, most of which arrived here last Thursday. Among those which perished were Red Gothard and Blue Bird. The horses, maddened by the glare of the fire and the noise of the engines, resisted the efforts of those who tried to save them and many of them had to be left to their fate, the rescuing party themselves being in great danger. The stables were owned by C. J. Hamlin and were valued at $10,000. The loss on the horses is estimated at about $75,000.

Bradley and the A. P. A.

Louisville, April 6.—The Courier Journal prints a sensational story that Gov. Bradley of Kentucky has joined the A. P. A. and is the A. P. A. candidate for president. The statement is confirmed by his presence at the sessions of the Louisville A. P. A. councils.

For the Free Coinage of Silver.

Brockton, Mass., April 6.—The Central Labor union has received a communication from Hon. Elijah A. Morse, saying he would present to congress a petition for the free coinage of silver at a ratio of 16 to 1.

WORK IN CONGRESS

Senate Cuban Resolutions in the House To-day.

WILL PROBABLY BE AGREED TO

River and Harbor Bill May Also Be Taken Up—Various Matters of General Public Interest Will Occupy the Senate's Attention.

Washington, April 6.—A vote upon the adoption of the senate resolutions relating to Cuba will be the first item of business in the house this week, under the agreement entered into Saturday, by which the sessions of that day were given to debate on the subject. The vote will be taken some time to-day. There is no reason to doubt that the resolutions will be agreed to by a large majority, although the debate of Friday developed an unsuspected amount of opposition to any declaration on the subject by congress, and the antagonists of the conference report assert that the vote against the adoption will be largely increased over the vote cast against the resolutions originally passed by the house. The Cuban matter out of the way, Mr. Hooker, chairman of the committee on rivers and harbors, will make an effort, to-day being suspension day under the rules, to take up the appropriation bill reported by him on Friday, and proceed with its consideration under suspension of the rules. It is not the intention, it is explained, to ask the house to finally dispose of it within the limited time allowed for discussion of a bill so taken up, but to give a reasonable time for its consideration. The determination of this period of "reasonable time" will necessarily be the subject of a unanimous agreement, so that it is impossible to forecast now what it will be. Mr. Payne, chairman of the committee on merchant marine and fisheries, will ask consideration of the bill reported from his committee to abolish the compulsory pilotage system, when the river and harbor bill has been disposed of, and these measures, together with the miscellaneous business coming up from day to day, it is expected, will occupy the time and attention of the house until the fortifications appropriation bill is reported to the house. It is stated that this will be ready the latter part of the week, and the appropriations committee desires that it shall be placed upon its passage as soon as copies of the bill and report have been printed.

In the Senate.

Appropriation bills will take precedence in the senate this week, the post-office bill, now under consideration, possibly requiring two more days before it can be passed; the Indian and naval bills to follow. Mr. Morgan has given notice that he will arise to-morrow to address the senate in favor of his Pacific railroad bill, which gives the court of appeals of the District of Columbia jurisdiction in all foreclosure suits and similar proceedings that may be brought in connection with these roads. Mr. Peffer will endeavor to press his motion for an investigation of the bond sales, but will not stand in the way of appropriation bills. Meanwhile, the Dupont case is still before the senate with speeches yet to be delivered by Senators Gray, Brown, Chandler, Vilas, Palmer and Burrows. Mr. Frye has given notice that he will call up the extermination of the fur seals bill. Senators Mantle and Teller desire to defend their course in preventing the taking up of the tariff bill. The proposed treaty with Great Britain for the appointment of a commission for the consideration of damages growing out of the seizure of Canadian sealing vessels still remains to be finally acted upon in executive session, the state department urging the senate to abandon its intention of amending the text of the convention as submitted.

GOV. HUGHES' REMOVAL.

The Telegrams Which Caused His Downfall Pronounced To Be Forgeries.

Tucson, Ariz., April 6.—It is agreed that Gov. Hughes' removal was brought about by several telegrams shown President Cleveland urging members of congress to pass the Arizona school land lease bill over the president's veto. These telegrams were over the signature of the governor. He arrived in Tucson yesterday, and, in speaking of the matter, said that the telegrams were forgeries. He had never communicated with any congressman or other persons on the subject of the land lease bill.

Claimant to the Davis Estate.

Butte, Mont., April 6.—William H. McCumpha of Friendship, N. Y., is the last person to make a demand for a good portion of the Davis estate millions. McCumpha has discovered another widow of the deceased multi-millionaire. She is McCumpha's mother-in-law whose maiden name was Mary Westinghouse and a sister of the Pittsburg manufacturer, Geo. Westinghouse. McCumpha says Davis deserted his wife in New York and came west in the early forties. He says he has the best proof to establish his claim.

To Pass Into Hands of English Syndicate.

Butte, Mont., April 6.—The statement is again given out that the whole of the great Anaconda copper mining properties are to pass into the hands of English capitalists. Hamilton Smith, representing the syndicate, is again coming to Butte to make another examination of the property and report on the advisability of offering $40,000,000 for the remaining two-thirds of the stock.

AN APPEAL FOR PEACE

Cardinals Gibbons, Vaughan and Logue Evolve a Plan.

PERMANENT COURT OF ARBITRATION

Such a Project Is Beset with Practical, But Not Insuperable, Difficulties—The English-Speaking Nations Particularly Addressed.

Baltimore, April 6.—His eminence Cardinal Gibbons has given to the United Press an appeal, signed by the American, Irish and English cardinals, in behalf of a permanent tribunal of arbitration, with the view of creating new guarantees for peace throughout the world as a substitute for war. The appeal is the result of a joint conference in which Cardinal Gibbons, Cardinal Logue and Cardinal Vaughan have for quite some time been engaged. The conclusions arrived at by their eminences are as follows: "We, representatives of the Prince of Peace and of the Catholic church in our respective countries, invite all who hear our voice to co-operate in the formation of a public opinion, which shall demand the establishment of a permanent tribunal of arbitration, as a rational substitute among the English-speaking races for a resort to the bloody arbitrament of war. We are well aware that such a project is beset with practical difficulties. We believe that they will not prove to be insuperable if the desire to overcome them be genuine and general. Such a court existed for centuries when the nations of Christendom were united in one faith. And have we not seen nations appeal to that same court for its judgment in our own day?

Plan of the Proposed Tribunal.

"The establishment of a permanent tribunal composed, may be, of trusted representatives of each sovereign nation, with power to nominate judges and umpires according to the nature of the difference that arises, and a common acceptance of general principles defining and limiting the jurisdiction and subject matter of such tribunal, would create new guarantees for peace that could not fail to influence the whole of Christendom. Such an international court of arbitration would form a second line of defense, to be called into requisition only after the ordinary resources of diplomacy had been exhausted. It would at least postpone the outbreak of hostilities until reason and common sense had formally pronounced their last word. This is a matter of which the constitution and procedure must be settled by governments. But as governments are becoming more and more identified with the aspirations, and moulded by the desires, of the people, an appeal in the first instance must be addressed to the people. We do not hesitate on our part to lift up our united voice and proclaim to all who are accustomed to hearken to counsels, that it is a sign of a divine influence at work in their midst when 'nation shall not lift up a sword against nation, neither shall they be exercised any more in war' (Isaiah, 2, 4); for it was written of a future time, 'come ye and behold the work of the Lord, what wonders He hath done upon the earth, making wars to cease even to the end of the earth' (Ps., 45, 9).

Main Ground of the Appeal.

"Others may base their appeal upon motives which touch your worldly interests, your prosperity, your world-wide influence and authority in the affairs of men. The Catholic church recognizes the legitimate force of such motives in the natural order and blesses whatever tends to the real progress and elevation of the race. But our main ground of appeal rests upon the well known character and will of the Prince of Peace, the Living Founder, the Divine Head of Christendom. It is He who declared that love for the brotherhood is a second commandment like unto the first. It was He who announced to the people the praise and reward of those who seek after peace and pursue it. 'Blessed,' said He, 'are the peacemakers, for they shall be called the children of God.' (Matt., 5, 9.) We, therefore, earnestly invite all to unite with us in pressing their convictions and desires upon their respective governments by means of petitions and such other measures as are constitutional."

ENGLAND WARNED.

German Papers Say She Must Meddle No Further in the Transvaal.

Berlin, April 6.—The report that England is making preparations to reinforce the British troops in South Africa is awakening the gravest fears of South African complications. Even the Vorwarts, the principal socialist organ, warns Mr. Chamberlain, the British colonial secretary, not to meddle further in the Transvaal, declaring that England has too many difficulties on her hands already to justify her in increasing them.

Troops Leave for Opelusa.

New Orleans, April 6.—Yesterday Gov. Foster ordered seventy-five men of the Washington artillery to be got ready to go to St. Landry parish to preserve the peace. These, with a battery and a Gatling gun, left by the Southern Pacific at 4:55 p. m., for Lafayette, where a special train will be in waiting to take them on to Opelusa. No further trouble is reported from there, but it is thought best to send the militia to prevent bloodshed on or about election day.

Pennsylvania Coal for Germany.

Berlin, April 6.—A syndicate of Pennsylvania coal owners have made a successful experiment of shipping coal to Germany and will now arrange to send over a large and regular supply.

NEW YORK'S "DRY" SUNDAY.

The Raines Law in Full Effect in That City Yesterday.

New York, April 6.—The Raines liquor law was in full effect in all its Sunday features yesterday in this city, and was very generally observed. Not only were the saloons closed and their interiors open to public view, but the selling of liquor with meals was almost entirely discontinued in the restaurants. Chief of Police Conlin's order that no restaurant not having a a hotel license should serve its customers, and that even places with hotel licenses should not serve meals in a room in which a bar was located was put in force, and the general result was that New York never experienced a "dryer" Sunday. A number of restaurants from which the bars could not be removed in time were obliged to close, and all of them lost money, by reason of the fact that many of their customers went to hotels for meals.

The Law in Brooklyn.

Brooklyn, N. Y., April 6.—The Raines excise law was not so strictly observed in Brooklyn yesterday as on the previous Sunday. A number of saloon keepers attempted to evade the law by various means, but most of them were caught off their guard and their arrest followed. The police had strict instructions to see that the law was enforced to the letter and they carried them out. Despite this, however, there were evidences on every side that the law was being violated. This was especially true of South Brooklyn, Greenpoint and the poorer sections of the city. Taking it on the whole, however, Brooklyn was a dry city.

Saloons Open in Buffalo.

Buffalo, April 6.—The Sunday closing provision of the Raines bill was not put in operation here yesterday and saloons did business as usual. It is expected that the order to close up will be issued some time this week.

Enforced in Elmira.

Elmira, N. Y., April 6.—The police enforced the Raines law yesterday. The city was the dryest in years, and not a single arrest was made.

Albany Was Dry.

Albany, April 6.—The Capital city was dry yesterday for the first time probably in a century.

GREAT STRIKE FEARED.

Street Railway Employes All Over the Country May Be Involved.

New York, April 6.—What may be the forerunner of a series of great strikes on the surface railway systems of the various cities of the country, but more particularly in the east, is likely to occur on the lines operated by the Metropolitan Traction Co. in this city. This possibility was foreshadowed some weeks ago, but the matter dropped out of sight for the time being. President Mahon of the National Amalgamated association is now on his way to this city from Detroit and is expected to reach here some time during the day. That the employes are in a fighting mood is well known, as they claim that the Metropolitan company denies them the right to join labor organizations, a right which they say they will uphold at all hazards. The primary cause of the trouble in this city is the discharge of nine gripmen and one conductor because, the men claim, of their activity in the affairs of the local branch of the Amalgamated Association of Street Railway Employes of America, notwithstanding that the company's officials state that the men were discharged for disobeying the rule prohibiting them from entering a saloon during working hours.

OHIO WOMEN AROUSED.

Looking for Revenge for the Passage of the Fosdick Anti-High Hat Bill.

Cincinnati, April 6.—Several prominent women of this city have decided upon a plan of "getting even" for the passage of the Fosdick anti-high hat bill. One of them said: "We will avenge ourselves by introducing a bill in the Ohio legislature by which the men will be subjected to as big a snub as the women were. The bill will be drawn up in a few days with the same provisions and fines to be inflicted upon theatre goers and managers as provided for in the Foskick bill for each person found leaving his seat during an intermission at the theatre or found spitting tobacco juice on the floor. I don't know that it will pass, but nevertheless it will be introduced."

SANTA CRUZ DESTROYED.

4,000 Houses Buraed and 30,000 People Rendered Homeless.

Madrid, April 6.—A dispatch from Manila says that the town of Santa Cruz, on the west coast of the island of Luzon, 110 miles northwest of Manila, has been almost completely destroyed by fire. Four thousand houses were burned and thirty thousand persons were rendered homeless.

The Ingram-Bradley Prize Fight.

Lawrence, Mass., April 6.—Local officers have arrested James Gilligan, who is said to have been the timekeeper at the Ingram-Bradley prize fight Saturday night. Charles Prickett, a hostler employed at the stable, who is said to have let the place for the fight, and Thomas Ahern, another hostler at the stable, were also arrested. It is said that small gloves were used in the fight and that nine rounds were fought. As a result of the fight Richard Ingram is dead and Bradley is under arrest.

Honesdale's Fire Loss, $30,000.

Honesdale, Pa., April 6.—By the fire in Hennigan's block, with a frontage of 300 feet on lower Front street, yesterday, eight separate stores and restaurants were burned out and a number of families in the upper stories lost all their belongings. The total loss will be about $30,000; insurance, $5,000.

GAY WEDDING BELLS

Gen. Harrison To Join the Ranks of Hymen To-day.

TIME OF THE MARRIAGE A SECRET

Expected That the Ceremony Will Occur Late This Evening—Wedding Dinner To Be Served on the ex-President's Special Train.

New York, April 6.—Ex-President Benjamin Harrison is to be married today in St. Thomas' church, but at what hour the ceremony is to take place it is impossible to tell, for it is a secret closely guarded by the general and all of his friends. They also decline to give any particulars whatever about the affair and its participants. Mrs. Dimmick declines to talk and her friends refuse to speak of any of the interesting things that have come to their knowledge. Is is believed that the ceremony will take place between 5 and 7 o'clock this evening, but this cannot be stated with certainty. This secrecy is maintained in order to avoid the crush around the church, although Police Inspector Cortright has taken special precautions to prevent any annoyance to the bridal party. Gen. Harrison was up bright and early this morning. He spent some time in looking over his mail and wrote and mailed several letters. None but intimate friends were permitted to enter his room.

Gen. Harrison's Easter.

Gen. Harrison arose at 7 o'clock yesterday and spent some time in looking over his mail, and it was 9 o'clock when he went down to breakfast with Col. Corbin, U. S. A., who had called, and Private Secretary Tibbetts. After breakfast they were joined by Daniel T. Ramsdell, who is to be an usher, and the party talked some time. Gen. Harrison wrote a few letters and at noon wae joined by his former attorney general, with whom Mr Harrison was alone for upwards of an hour. They then started for a walk and passed out at the Twenty-third street door of the hotel to avoid the reporters who were in the corridors. The ex-president was recognized by but few pedestrians and after strolling up Fifth avenue a few blocks returned to his hotel and stayed in his apartments until dinner time. The ushers, Messrs. Tibbetts and Ramsdell; Mrs. Parker, wife of Lieut. Parker, U. S. N., who is Mrs. Dimmick's sister, and Mrs. Parker of Washington, the wife of Major Parker, will accompany Gen. Harrison and his bride as far as Philadelphia on his special car, after the wedding. A wedding dinner will be served on the train. Although it was reported that William C. Whitney had made preparations for a wedding dinner at his home directly after the church ceremony, he refused to confirm it, and so do the others.

WORCESTER'S GREAT FIRE.

Loss to the Washburn & Moen Company Amounts to $175,000.

Worcester, Mass., April 6.—The most disastrous fire since 1884 occurred yesterday when the spring factory of the Quinsigamond works of the Washburn & Moen Manufacturing company were burned. The loss is total, and P. W. Moen, general manager, estimates the loss at $175,000. This is covered by insurance placed in the Manufacturers' Mutual. The fire originated in an oil pipe, connected with one of the furnaces in the mill, which was being repaired by two men. The building was so saturated with oil that the men had barely time to escape. An alarm was turned in, but before the department arrived the interior of the building was a mass of flames, so that the firemen were unable to get into it. Several lines of hose were directed to the south end of the building, where are located the engine and boilers used for furnishing steam for the spring factory and insulating mill. Several lines of hose were also directed on the two immense tanks of petroleum on the outside of the building from which the supply for the furnaces was drawn. One hour after the alarm had been turned in these tanks exploded, and the oil ran into the canal, which is several hundred rods in length. The burning oil on the water furnished a brilliant and unusual spectacle and it was fifteen minutes before the flames died out on the surface of the canal. The company will rebuild at once.

GROSVENOR'S FIGURES.

The Ohio Congressman Says McKinley Has 275 Delegates.

Washington, April 6.—Gen. Grosvenor of Ohio last night recapitulated by states the number of delegates elected to the St. Louis convention whom he claimed for McKinley, Ohio's candidate for the presideney. The table is as follows: Alabama 4, Arkansas 16, Florida 8, Georgia 17, Illinois 6, Indiana 30, Kansas 30, Louisiana 8, Minnesota 18, Mississippi 18, Missouri 10, Nebrask 2, New Jersey 2, New York 4, Ohio 46, Pennsylvania 2, South Carolina 7, South Dakota 8, Texas 12, Virginia 2, West Virginia 2, Wisconsin 24, Indian Territory 2, New Mexico 1, Oklahoma 4. Total, 275.

Newfoundland Sealing Fleet.

St. Johns, N. F., April 6.—The sealer Neptune arrived yesterday with 22,000 seals, about two-thirds of a cargo. She reports the other vessels much the same as formerly, but the Vanguard and Ranger are leaking badly, having sustained further damage during the recent gales.

A JOYOUS EASTER DAY.

ST. STEPHEN'S P. E. CHURCH.

Easter was appropriately celebrated at St. Stephen's church yesterday. The chancel was filled with Easter and calla lilies and potted plants artistically arranged. A white dove rested on the organ and another on the lecton. In the morning the surpliced choir sang several Easter anthems. The choir was composed of Lawrenze Smith, Robert Guttridge, George Staats, Richard Nelson, George Nelson, F. Frederickson, Fred Christensen, Orville Waring, Bert Tallamy and Percy Wheeler. William A. Wheeler was the organist. The special Easter service of the Sunday-school was held in the afternoon and was largely attended by both scholars and their friends. The special selections sung were "Christ the Lord is risen today," "Sing sweet Carols, Night is Past" and "The Strife is o'er, the Battle Done." Percy V. Wheeler acted as organist. Prizes for regular attendance, good behavior, bringing new scholars, fifteen in all, were presented. The Easter offering amounted to $21.73. On leaving, each scholar was presented with an Easter egg, tied with colored ribbon.

TRINITY REFORMED CHURCH.

At Trinity Reformed church there was a very large attendance both morning and evening, many visitors being attracted by the excellent musical programme as published in Saturday's Press. At the morning service, the pastor, Rev. Cornelius Schenck, delivered an interesting, instructive sermon from the text "The Lord is Risen," Luke 24-34, and his many friends and admirers gave him hearty congratulations before retiring from the church. The floral decorations were in competent hands, H. C. VanEmburgh acting as chairman, assisted by Miss Lizzie Dunn, Miss C. Smalley, Miss May Sheppard, Mrs. H. W. Marshall and Mrs. R. A. Meeker. Two white banners, draped with smilax, lettered in gold—one "Christ Is Risen," and the other with a cross and crown—were appropriately hung on the front of the organ. The arrangement of palms, blooming Easter and calla lilies, rubber and many potted green plants, in handsome jardiniers, on the pulpit platform, was artistically done and the committee in charge are to be congratulated for the beautiful effect produced. The music committee of the consistory, of which F. S. Cutter, is chairman, is entitled to much credit for the excellent choir of fourteen voices, who sang so acceptably and in such perfect unison, it being freely remarked that yesterday's choir was far ahead of all previous efforts. The organist, A. L. Titsworth, who trained them, is also to be congratulated for their finished work, which was only accomplished after many nights of rehearsing. The soprano solo "Immortality," by Mrs. Asa Collier, was particularly enjoyable at the morning service, as was her rendition of the anthem entitled, "Easter Song," at the evening service. Mrs. H. E. Rider, Miss Runyon, and Messrs. Robert Gorton and Robert Clark, are also deserving of more than passing mention for their gratifying efforts. The evening service was in charge of the Sunday-school and consisted of singing by the choir and also by the senior and junior scholars, recitations, scripture readings, a short address by the pastor, and a few well chosen remarks of thanks etc., by Superintendent E. E. Anthony. The primary department of the Sunday-school, in charge of Superintendent Mrs. J. M. Tier, and her assistant, Miss M. Arnold, acquitted themselves well. Among the interesting features of the service was a recitation by seven boys of the primary department, viz: Morris Brokaw, Willie Nischwitz, Betram Leggett, Johnnie Yose, Arthur Caleen, Raymond Martin and Crissie Mobus. Also one by eight young misses, Lucy Coriell, Ruth Berg, Anna Randall, Edith Caleen, Mildred Caleen, Anna Holder, Dora Wilson, Luella Day. Six little misses here sang an Easter song very prettily, followed by a recitation by Albert Yeager, "Who has Rolled Away the Stone," and "The Voice of Spring," by Anna Randall. This was followed by a solo by Master Willie Vail. Miss Carrie Fritz, of the senior department, also gave a pleasing recitation. Miss Kreitling accompanied the little ones on the chapel organ for the singing.

SEVENTH-DAY BAPTIST CHURCH.

Special Easter services were held in the Seventh day Baptist chnrch, Sabbath (Saturday) morning. Special anthems were sung by the chorus choir, and a very impressive solo was rendered by D. E. Titsworth. The choir was composed of Mrs. D. E. Titsworth and the Misses Elizabeth Allis, Bessie Titsworth, Nancy Randolph and Louise Lewis, and the Messrs. Louis Rogers, A. J. Spicer, Charles Randolph and Hobart Ayres. D. E. Titsworth was the leader. An interesting sermon was preached by the pastor, Rev. A. H. Lewis, D. D., on the history of the day and the reasons for its observence. The floral decorations were very handsome. Easter and calla lilies were placed in front of the pulpit, and palms, ferns and potted plants were banked on the corners of the platform. In the afternoon. Easter was observed by the Sundry-school with songs. The primary department also took part in the exercises, and six little tots gave a song and recitation. The regular church collection for the benefit of the Christian Endeavor Society was taken up at the meeting of the Christian Endeavor Society in the after noon. It amounted to $22.50.

FIRST METH-DIST CHURCH.

Easter was specially remembered at the First M. E. church yesterday by services in the morning, afternoon and evening. The floral decorations were elaborate and very handsome. Calla lilies were arranged along the chancel rail while inside the chancel potted plants were massed against the platform. Daisies and other white flowers surrounded the pulpit while the baptismal font contained a large bunch of calla lilies. Tables were placed inside the chancel rail and were covered with flowers. In the morning Rev. C. R. Barnes preached an Easter sermon and the chorus choir rendered two Easter anthems in which the solo parts were sung by Miss Marguerette Barnes, Louis H. Bond and Raymond A. McGee. The Sunday-school held their exercises in the afternoon. The scholars met, as usual, in Vincent chapel and then marched into the church. The services were led by Superintendent J. W. Jackson. The programme was as follows: Opening chorus, Sing Ye Joyful Nations; Scripture reading, Rev. C. R. Barnes, D.D.; Invocation, Rev. C. R. Barnes, D. D.; Chorus, Ring Out, Ye Bells; Address, Rev. W. C. O'Donnell; Responsive reading, Prophecy and Fulfillment, led by G. M. Rittenhouse; Anthem, O Calvary; Responsive reading, The Sepulchre, led by G. R. Cornwell; Chorus, He Rose Again; Responsive reading, The Resurrection, led by Miss Angleman; Chorus, Hallelujah; Remarks, Rev. H. M. Simpson, of Saratoga; Hymn, King of Glory; Collection; Congregational Hymn, Coronation; Benediction. Easter cards were distributed to the school at the close. Rev. H. M. Simpson, of Saratoga, formerly of Dunellen, preached in the evening and the choir sang two special anthems. The choir was composed of Mrs. L. H. Bond and the Misses Margueretta Barnes, Mattie Humble, Alice Jenkins and Etta Raybert, sopranos; the Misses Lizzie Stafford Florence Barnes, Eva Jenkins and Cora Shepard, altos; the Messrs. Louis H Bond, Robert Davis and Arthur Crane, tenors; and the Messrs. Raymond A. McGee, William Symons and Alvah Davis, bassos.

MONROE AVENUE CHAPEL.

Easter Sunday was the occasion at the Monroe Avenue chapel yesterday of the reading of the annual reports of the church and Sunday-school. In the morning, the annual report of the chapel was read by James McGee, which was an especially pleasing one, showing great improvement and growth in all branches of the chapel. The annual report of the Sunday-school was read in the afternoon and and showed a like improvemnt in that department. The special Easter exercises were also held in the afternoon. There were several Easter songs by the school and recitations by Vaugh McGee, Stephen Aldrich, Miss Daisy Brouard, Miss Randolph, Clarence VanDorn and little Miss Aldrich. The decorations were very tasteful and consisted of Easter lilies and potted plants arranged about the pulpit and along the platform. Several jars of cut flowers added to the pretty effect.

GRACE P. E. CHURCH.

Those who attended the Easter service at Grace P. E. church yesterday morning were impressed with the excellence of the programme and its superb rendition under the efficient direction of Mrs. W. H. Freeman, the organist. The regular choir was assisted by the young ladies choir, and solo parts were rendered by Miss Olive Newell, Arthur Freeman, Chas. Angleman and F. J. Pope. Below will be found the programme: Processional; Hymn, Angels Roll the Rock Away; Anthem, Christ our Passover, Chappel; TeDeum, Simper; Jubilate, J. Hindle; Introit, Awake Thou that Sleepeth, Simper; Kyrie Elieson, Adlem; Gloria Tibi, Adlem; Hymn 112; Offertory, Christ is Risen, Simper; Sursum Corda, Adlem; Sanctus and Agnus Dei, Adlem; Glorie Eleisus, Adlem; Recessional, Hymn 110, Come Ye Faithful, Raise the Strain. In the evening at the children's service the young ladies' choir met the boy choir at the entrance to the church and then marched together around the church to the altar. A large cross of greens, surrounded by potted hyacinths, was an added feature of the decorations. The latter was afterward given to the sick of the parish. The Lenten mite collection amounted to $48, and goes toward Bishop Leonard's fund for the Indians. The other collection will be sent to the Bishop Scarborough fund. In the morning the collection amounted to $762, which goes toward paying off the church debt. Dr. Rodman presented a prize medal to Walter Hockridge, and Kendall Mason and Chas. Bryan received special mention as striving for the prize of a prayer-book and hymnal. Features of the evening service were the rendition of Easter-Tide, with triangle accompaniment, and the composition of "Welcome, Happy Morning," by Cleveland Howard. This was the evening programme: Processional; Lord's Prayer and Versicles; Responsive reading; carol, "Easter Tide," school; Lesson; carol, "Welcome, Happy Morning," school; Creed and Collects; carol, "God Has Sent His Angels," school; address, Rev. Dr. Rodman; offerings; carol, "Across the Eastern Hilltops," school. Benediction; Recessional.

CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH.

The Easter services at the Congregational church were held yesterday morning and the programme, published in Saturday's Press was carried out. The choir that rendered the special Easter music consisted of a double quartette, the Misses M. G. Morse, Eda Beekman, M. E. Meredith and Julia Belknap, and the Messrs. Herbert Schutt, Horace J Martin, Stacy R. Reynolds and John Burnett. Mrs. B. T. Barnes presided at the organ. Rev. C. L. Goodrich preached a very effective sermon on the topic: "The Angel's Message."

The floral decorations were very beautiful and consisted of palms, smilax, marguerites, Easter lilies and calla lilies, grouped along the edge of the platform. A large bunch of yellow tulips were placed on the piano and a jar of Easter lilies rested on the communion table.

PARK AVENUE BAPTIST CHURCH.

Beautiful flowers were tasefully arranged about the platform at the Park avenue Baptist church yesterday in commemoration of Easter. Potted plants and Easter lilies almost hid the pulpit from view and then sloped down toward the ends, giving a pyramidical effect. Owing to a recent change in organists, no elaborate musical programme had been arranged but the orchestra in the evening, rendered a number of delightful selections. The choir, which assisted in the regular Easter music, consisted of Miss Cora Brokaw, Mrs. W. S. Lowry, Mrs. I. B. Hill and Miss Henrietta Cuming, soprano; Miss Emma V. Fish, Mrs. Charles Steiner and Miss Moss, altos; M. S. Lowry, William Stimpson and I. B. Hill, tenors; and T. A. Cuming, Wesley Brokaw and Nelson VanWinkle, basses. Rev. J. W. Richardson's special topic for the evening was "Christ's Easter Victory."

MARCONNIER CHAPEL.

After the regular Sunday-school exercises yesterday afternoon in the Marconnier chapel everybody was invited to the lawn of Gen. Schwenck. Long grass had been spread over part of the lawn, and about 300 small baskets, full of decorated eggs, real eggs, were hidden there. The young people then searched for them and each kept the basket they found and its contents, about six eggs. Nearly 400 of the residents of the neighborhood were the guests of Gen. Schwenck at the "egg hunt.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the eustachian tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube be restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give one hundred dollars for any case of deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

AMBULANCE ON WATER.

Steam Launch Added to the London Hospital Service.

The managers of the Metropolitan asylums board, London, have just passed upon plans for an ambulance launch for river service. Her dimensions, says the Philadelphia Record, are as follows: Length between perpendiculars, 60 feet; breadth, 12 feet 6 inches; depth, four feet; draught of water when fully equipped, two feet eight inches. The hull is built of Siemens-Martin mild steel throughout to board of trade requirements for passenger certificate. She is built in five compartments. In the fore part of the vessel is a cabin for the accommodation of the staff and for visitors proceeding to visit patients in the hospital ships in Long Reach, Dartford, and is capable of accommodating about 20 persons. In the after part there is a cabin fitted up as a hospital, with four berths—two being fixed and two portable—and with all the necessary requirements for carrying four recumbent patients. Both of these cabins are heated with steam and are provided with suitable skylights and all the necessary fittings for a boat of its class.

The machinery is fixed amidships and is of the triple-expansion type, with surface condenser, and capable of driving the vessel at a speed of ten knots. A water-tight trimming tank is built at the fore end of the vessel of sufficient capacity that when filled with water it will bring the vessel to an even keel of two feet eight inches.

A HOLY TERROR.

But the Little Battenburgs Love Her All the Same.

The ruler of Baimoral castle, according to the Strand Magazine, is not the queen, but the housekeeper, a Mrs. Mussens, a typical personage of her class, gowned always in rustling black silk, lace-trimmed apron and white cap. She and the queen are said to be excellent friends, and many a gossip have they had together when affairs of state have been laid aside.

Mrs. Mussens also stands high in the favor of the little Battenbergs, who are sure to seek her out as soon as they have landed at the castle, for she fairly idolizes the little ones and keeps many a treasure in her apartments with which to regale them.

To the world at large Mrs. Mussens is a holy terror. Her word is law, and she enforces it at the point of the bayonet or the broomstick. It is said that once the queen wanted a certain maid to whom she had taken a fancy detailed to the care of her own room, but the housekeeper remonstrated, telling her majesty that it was quite out of order and she really must not spoil the servants by undue notice. The queen was wise enough not to insist, and "dear Mrs. Mussens" won the day.

WHEN REPTILES RULED.

There Was a Time When the Globe Was in Their Possession.

There was a time "in the wide revolving shades of centuries past" when the globe was wholly in the possession of walking, swimming and flying reptiles," says an exchange. Being the dominant type, they divided naturally into three great classes.

In the oceans they became gigantic, paddling enaliosaurians; on dry land—or, rather, wet land, for the whole surface of the globe was doubtless a quagmire at that time—they became monstrous, erect dinosaurians, some of which had legs 15 feet or more in length.

Those which inhabited the regions of the air were the terrible flying pterodactyls. For a vast but unknown length of time these awful creatures literally ruled the earth. Then one by one they died out in the face of the younger and more vigorous fauna until at the present time only a few miniature alligators and crocodiles, a few toy snakes and skulking lizards and geckos remain as reminders of the enormous reptilian types that once crowded land and sea.

The Modern Flat Building.

"You know, it's old enough and familiar enough," said a flat dweller, "but it's striking all the same, to hear the whistle blow in the kitchen, from somebody in the cellar at the elevator, and may be at the same time to hear the bell ring from somebody at the front door. The servant throws up the door to the elevator shaft, to be ready to receive the things that the man is sending up from below, and she swings around and presses the button and opens a door far away and in still another part of the house. All simple enough, but it interests me all the same. It seems sort of like running the steamer from the bridge; or like throwing the levers in the switch house and controlling switches far away; it seems like business; it's modern and up to date."

South Africa's Joan of Arc.

Cecil Armitage, a young Englishman in Ashantee, tells of a strange West African "Joan of Arc," who is equipping an army for King Prempeh. Her appearance is more impressive than beautiful, and, unlike the famous French Joan, whose features we know, this dusky amazon is said to have only one eye, one ear and one arm and to wear her hair hanging long. With one touch of her magic wand she can bring armies together, and in an engagement a brass pan is placed before her, into which all the bullets of the enemy can conveniently fall without hurting her brave soldiers.

Cleanly Japanese Tramps.

A traveler in Japan says that the Japanese tramp takes his hot bath daily if he has a fraction of a cent to pay for it, or his cold bath if he hasn't a cent. He carries a comb, toothpicks, a razor and a toothbrush in a little bundle. A few Japanese tramps might well be introduced as missionaries in the American brotherhood, whose members do not seem to appreciate what cleanliness is "next to."

TWO FISH PROBLEMS.

Observations and Reflections of a Backwoods Sage.

"Do fish feel pain?" I dunno—I never was a fish, says a writer in Outing. Yet I have observed freshly-landed fish to execute certain movements which seemed to indicate that the fish felt something; mebbe 'twasn't pain. It may have been simply agony, or any old thing like that. Those who used in their younger days to carry in their trousers pocket a cork stuck full of hooks may remember occasions when a hook worked free from the cork. Once I accidentally hooked a pointer dog by the ear, and the language he used and the way he ran out of line convinced me that he felt something. He may have felt only a pleasant sensation, but he didn't come within 50 feet of me for two hours. The desperate sagging back and zigzag resistance of a hooked fish, the wild flipflaps and straining gasps of a freshly-landed fish may be evidences of pleasurable sensations, but I am tempted to consider them as closely allied to that joyous thrill which prompts a man to rise above the insiduous caress of a strong, well-bent pin. "Do fish feed at night?" Well, well—do fish swim? Country boys, how about the big fire beside the water? How about the boy who got first to the big boom and thus secured the boss place? How about the spiky-finned channel cats and mud cats that came up two at a time; the goggle-eyed rock bass, special prizes; the hideous "mud puppies," which at once went into the fire along with a yard of line? How about the night lines? How about everything connected with the sport that used to get better and better as midnight approached, until the glorious fun and occasional profanity were interrupted by the sound of the "old man" falling foul of a wire fence or breaking a gad from the plum tree up the bank? Do fish feed at night? I dunno—they used to.

DOG DETECTIVE.

Does What Human Sleuths Had Worked Upon Three Months in Vain.

The Cincinnati papers contain an almost incredible story, which, nevertheless, seems to be well authenticated. In the early spring of 1895, a business man of Cincinnati, Charles Hermann by name, disappeared, and no trace of him could be found. For three months detectives worked upon the case without avail.

Soon after his disappearance, Hermann's dog was found, badly poisoned, and near the point of death. The animal was sent to the hospital for dogs and remained there two months under treatment, not being suffered to go out. But his life was saved.

When at last the dog was liberated, he began to search for his master; and after a good deal of running about, commenced digging on the banks of the Ohio river, opposite Cincinnati. There, after a time, he unearthed the body of Charles Hermann.

There are indications that a murder was committed, and that poison was administered to the dog at the same time. Very likely it was thrown to him by malfactors who dared not shoot or touch him.

The body was identificd, but unfortunately the sagacious dog could do no more.

DIDN'T MAKE A CONTRACT.

The Fact Brought Sorrow to an American Abroad

A well-known Philadelphia lawyer who has just returned from abroad, tells the Record a rather remarkable story of his experience with a doctor in Paris. "Over there," he remarked, "everything is done by contract—a fact which I discovered to my sorrow. My wife caught a severe cold and was taken quite ill. I called in a French physician who had been highly recommended by the proprietor of the hotel at which I was stopping, and he paid five visits to my wife, after which she was so much improved that his services were no longer required. The next day I received his bill for 2,500 francs, which is equivalent to $500. Thinking a mistake had been made, I went to his office, where he smilingly assured me that the bill was correct. To my remonstrances he replied: 'But monsieur made no contract with me.' When I told him I wouldn't pay such an exhorbitant bill, he informed me that it would then be impossible for me to leave France. In desperation I consulted a friend of mine who resides in Paris and found that the frog-eating doctor had me where the hair was short, and in the end I had to pay it."

Never Saw Himself Before.

The London Globe relates a story of an old Hampshire peasant farmer who came to town to buy a hat, and was requested to look in the glass to see if the hat suited his taste. The customer stood before the glass as though fascinated by his reflected image. Presently he slowly inquired: "Wull—is—that—me?" "Of course it is, guv'nor," was the shopman's reply. "Why, don't you know yourself?" "I be 60 years old," said the ancient, after another pause, "and I dunno as ever I see my face afore!" And when, his purchase completed, he turned to depart, he walked up to the looking-glass again, saying: "I'll take just one more look at mesel', for I dunno as ever I shall ha' the chance again."

White and Red.

A white object of any size may be seen in sunlight at a distance of 17,250 times its diameter; that is to say, if it is a white ball a foot in diameter it can be perceived at a distance of 17,250 feet. A red object is not nearly so visible at a distance as one of white. A red globe a foot in diameter can be perceived clearly only at a distance of 8,000 feet, and a blue globe a little further.

The general belief among doctors is that consumption itself is very rarely inherited. But the belief is becoming stronger that the tendency to consumption is very generally transmitted from parent to child. If there has been consumption in the family, each member should take special care to prepare the system against it. Live out doors; keep the body well nourished; and treat the first indication of failing health.

COPYRIGHT, 1894, BY BRET HARTE.

He stopped as her face paled again, and her hands dropped heavily at her side. "Good God! you thought that, too. You thought that I would sacrifice you for another man?"

"Pardon me," said Brant, quickly, "I was foolish. But whether your lover is a man or a cause, you have shown a woman's devotion. And in repairing your fault you are showing more than a woman's courage now."

To his surprise the color had again mounted to her pretty cheeks, and even a flash of mischief shone in her blue eyes. "It would have been 'an excuse'—yes—to save a man, surely. Well, I will go. I am ready."

"One moment," he said, gravely. "Although this pass and an escort insures your safe conduct, there is an engagement and some danger. Are you still ready to face it?"

"I am," she said, proudly, turning back a braid of her fallen hair. Yet a moment she hesitated. Then she said, in a lower voice: "Are you as ready to forgive?"

"In either case," he said, touched by her manner—"and God speed you."

He extended his hand and left a slight pressure on her cold fingers. But they slipped quickly from his grasp, and she turned away with a heightened color.

He stepped to the door. One or two aids-de-camp, withheld by his order against intrusion, were waiting eagerly with reports. The horse of a mounted field officer was pawing the garden turf. The officers stared at the young girl.

"Take Miss Faulkner with a flag to some safe point of the enemy's line. She is a non-combatant of their own, and will receive their protection."

He had scarcely exchanged a dozen words with the aids-de-camp before the field officer hurriedly entered. Taking Brant aside he said quickly: "Pardon me, general, but there is a strong feeling among the men that this attack is the result of some information obtained by the enemy. The woman you have just given a safeguard to is suspected, and the men are indignant."

"The more reason why she should be conveyed beyond any consequences of their folly, major," said Brant, frigidly, "and I look to you for her safe convoy. There is nothing in this attack to show that the enemy has received any information regarding us. But I would suggest that it would be better to see that my orders are carried out regarding the slaves and men combatants who are passing our lines from division headquarters, where valuable information may be obtained, than in the surveillance of a testy and outspoken girl."

An angry flush covered the major's cheek as he saluted and fell back, and Brant turned to the aid-de-camp. The news was grave. A column of the enemy had moved against the ridge; it was no longer possible to hold it; and the brigade was cut off from its communication with the division headquarters, although as yet no combined movement was made against it. Brant's secret fears that it was an intended impact against the center were confirmed. Would his communications to the division commander pass through the attacking column in time?

One thing puzzled him. As yet the enemy, after facing his line, had shown no disposition, even with their overwhelming force, to turn aside to cover him. He could easily have fallen back when it was possible to hold the ridge no longer, without pursuit. His flank and rear were not threatened, as they might have been by a division of so large an attacking column, and his retreat was still secure! It was this fact that seemed to show a failure or imperfection in the enemy's plan. It was possible that his precipitation of the attack by the changed signal had been the cause of it. Doubtless some provision had been made to attack him in flank and rear, but in the unexpected hurry of the outset it had to be abandoned. He could still save himself, as his officers knew, but his conviction, that he might yet be able to support his division commander by holding his position doggedly, but coolly awaiting his opportunity, was strong. More than that, it was his temperament and instinct.

Harrowing them in flank and rear, contesting the ground inch by inch, and holding his own against the artillery sent to dislodge him, or the cavalry that curled around to ride through his open ranks, he saw his files melt away before this steady current without flinching.

CHAPTER VI.

Yet all along that fateful ridge, now obscured and confused with thin crossing smoke drifts from file firing, like partly rubbed out slate pencil marks, or else, when cleared of those drifts, penetrating only an indistinguishable map of zig-zag lines of straggling wagons and horses, unintelligible to any eye but his, the singular magnetism of the chief was felt everywhere. Whether it was shown in the quick closing in of resistance to some sharper onset of the enemy or the more dogged stand of inaction under fire, his power was always dominant. A word or two of comprehensive direction, sent through an aid-de-camp, or the sudden relief of his dark, watchful, composed face, uplifted above a line of bayonets, never failed in their magic. Like all born leaders, he seemed, in these emergencies, to hold a charmed life, infecting his followers with a like disbelief in death. Men dropped to right and left of him with serene assurance in their ghastly faces or a cry of life and confidence in their last gasp. Stragglers fell in and closed up under his passing glance; a hopeless inextricable wrangle around an overturned caisson, at a turn of the road, resolved itself into an orderly, quiet, deliberate clearing away of the impediment, before the significant waiting of that dark, silent horseman.

Yet under this imperturbable mask he was keenly conscious of everything; in that apparent concentration there was a sharpening of all his senses and his impressibility; he saw the first trace of doubt or alarm in the face of a subaltern to whom he was giving an order; the first touch of sluggishness in a reforming line; the more significant clumsiness of a living evolution that he knew was clogged by the dead bodies of comrades; the ominous silence of a breastwork; the awful inertia of some rigidly kneeling files beyond, which still kept their form but never would move again; the melting away of skirmish points; the sudden gaps here and there; the sickening incurving of what a moment before had been a straight line—all these he saw in all their fatal significance. But even at this moment, coming upon a hasty barricade of overset commissary wagons, he stopped to glance at a familiar figure he had seen but an hour ago, who now seemed to be commanding a group of collected stragglers and camp followers. Mounted on a wheel, with a revolver in each hand and a bowie knife between his teeth—theatrical even in this paroxysm of undoubted courage—glared Jim Hooker! And Clarence Brant, with the whole responsibility of the field on his shoulders, even at that desperate moment, found himself recalling a vivid picture of the actor Hooker personating the character of "Red Dick" in "Rosalie, the Prairie Flower," as he had seen him in a California theater five years before!

It wanted still an hour of the darkness that would probably close the fight of that day. Could he hold out, keeping his offensive position so long? A hasty council with his officers showed him that the weakness of their position had already infected them. They reminded him that his line of retreat was still open—that in the course of the night the enemy, although still pressing towards the division center, might yet turn and outflank him—or that their strangely delayed supports might come up before morning. Brant's glass, however, remained fixed on the main column still pursuing its way along the ridge. It struck him suddenly, however, that the steady current had stopped, spread out along the crest on both sides and was now at right angles with its previous course. There had been a check! The next moment the thunder of guns along the whole horizon and the rising cloud of smoke revealed a line of battle. The division center was engaged. The opportunity he had longed for had come—the desperate chance to throw himself on their rear and cut his way through the division—but it had come too late! He looked at his shattered ranks—scarce a regiment remained. Even as a demonstration—the attack would fail against the enemy's superior numbers. Nothing clearly was left to him now but to remain where he was—within supporting distance, and await the issue of the fight beyond. He was putting up his glass when the dull boom of cannon in the extreme western limit of the horizon attracted his attention. By the still gleaming sky he could see a long gray line stealing up from the valley from the distant rear of the headquarters to join the main column. They were the missing supports! His heart leaped! He held the key of the mystery now. The one imperfect detail of the enemy's plan was before him. The supports coming later from the west had seen only the second signal from the window—when Miss Faulkner had replaced the vase—and had avoided his position. It was impossible to limit the effect of this blunder! If the young girl who had thus saved him had reached the division commander with his message in time, he might be forewarned, and even profit by it. His own position would be less precarious, as the enemy already engaged in front would be unable to recover their position in the rear, and correct the blunder. The bulk of their column had already streamed past him. If defeated there was always the danger that it might be rolled back upon him—but he conjectured that the division commander would attempt to prevent the junction of the supports with the main column by breaking between them, crowding them from the ridge and joining him. As the last stragglers of the rear guard swept by Brant's bugles were already recalling the skirmishers. He redoubled his pickets, and resolved to watch and wait.

It was past midnight, when, without undressing, he threw himself upon his bed in the little convent-like cell to snatch a few moments of sleep. Its spotless, peaceful walls and draperies affected him strangely as if he had brought into its immaculate serenity the sanguine strain of war. He was awakened suddenly from a deep slumber by an infinite sense of alarm. His first thought was that he had been summoned to repel an attack. He sat up and listened. Everything was silent except the measured tread of the sentry on the gravel walk below. But the door was open. He sprang to his feet and slipped into the gallery, in time to see the tall figure of a woman gliding before the last moonlit window at its furthest end. He could not see her face, but the characteristic turbaned head of the negro race was plainly visible.

He did not care to follow her, or even alarm the guard. If it were the spy or one of her emissaries, she was powerless now to do any harm, and under his late orders and the rigorous vigilance of his sentinels she could not leave the lines—or indeed the house. She probably knew this as well as he did; it was, therefore, no doubt, only an accidental intrusion of one of the servants. He reentered the room and stood for a few moments by the window looking over the moonlit ridge. The sounds of distant cannon had long since ceased. Wide awake and refreshed by the keen morning air, which alone of all created things seemed to have shaken the burden of the dreadful yesterday from its dewy wings, he turned away and lit a candle on the table. As he was rebuckling his sword belt he saw a piece of paper lying at the foot of the bed from which he had just risen. Taking it to the candle he read in a roughly scrawled hand:

"You are asleep when you should be on the march. You have no time to lose. Before daybreak the supports of the column you have been foolishly resisting will be upon you. From one who would save you, but hates your cause."

For a moment he was transfixed. The handwriting was unknown, and evidently disguised. It was not the purport of the message that alarmed him, but the terrible suspicion that flashed upon him that it came from Miss Faulkner! She had failed in her attempt to pass through the enemy's lines—or she had never tried to! She had deceived him, or she had thought better of her chivalrous impulse and now tried to mitigate her second treachery by this second warning, and he had let her messenger escape him!

He hurriedly descended the stairs. The sound of voices was approaching him. He halted and recognized the faces of the brigade surgeon and one of his aids-de-camp.

"We were hesitating whether to disturb you, general, but it may be an affair of some importance. Under your orders a negro woman was just now challenged stealing out of the lines. Attempting to escape, she was chased there was a struggle and scramble over the wall, and she fell, striking her head. She was brought into the guard house unconscious."

"Very good, I will see her," said Brant, with a feeling of relief.

"One moment, general. We thought you would perhaps prefer to see her alone," said the surgeon. "For when I endeavored to bring her to and was sponging her face and head to discover her injuries her color came off! She was a white woman, stained and disguised as a mulatto."

For the face that lay there was his wife's.

For an instant Brant's heart sank. It was Miss Faulkner.

"Did you recognize her?" he said, glancing from the one to the other. "Had you seen her here before?"

"No, sir," replied the aid-de-camp. "But she seemed to be quite a superior woman—a lady, I should say."

Brant breathed more freely. "Where is she now?" he asked.

"In the guardhouse. We thought it better not to bring her into the hospital among the men, until we had your orders."

"You have done well," returned Brant gravely. "And you will keep this to yourselves for the present, but see that she is brought here quietly and with as little publicity as possible. Put her in my room above, which I give up to her, and any necessary attendant. But you will look carefully after her, doctor," he turned to the surgeon, "and when she recovers consciousness let me know."

CYCLING COMMENT.

Willie Doane, of LaGrande avenue, is the owner of a new Crescent wheel.

Master Bertram Leggett, of Madison avenue, will long remember Easter Monday, 1896, as it made him the proud possessor of one of F. L. C. Martin's Crescent bikes.

The committee in charge of the Irvington-Milburn road race have decided to give a special medal to the cyclist who covers the distance in one hour and eleven minutes, or better.

Mr. and Mrs. Ely, of New York, came to grief while riding their wheels near Metuchen Saturday morning and had to walk to Plainfield to have their wheels repaired. They took lunch here while their wheels were being put in ridable shape, and then started for home.

The sale of wheels shows no sign of decreasing and the salesrooms of the F. L. C. Martin Cycle Company are still a very busy place. Some of the latest purchasers of wheels from this company are Patrolman J. Hartpence, a Crescent, No, 9; Joan Pierson, a Crescent racer; J. R. Thayer, of New York, a Cleveland, model 22; Frank Reinhart, of Belvidere avenue, a Cleveland, model 22; J. T. Scott, a Cleveland, model 22; J. T. Scott, a Cleveland, model 18; Thomas Duffy, a Crescent, No. 9; Clifton J. Wharton, a Cleveland, model 22; Ed Dorrett, a Crescent, No. 10.

VARIOUS SPORTS.

Richard G. Simpson, of Watchung avenue, is one of the candidates for coxswain of the Columbia College freshmen crew.

Messrs. Richardson and Whiting have been elected captain and manager respectively of the Westfield Y. M. C. A. baseball team. Practice has already been begun and the candidates will be chosen for the team entirely on the merits of their playing.

THEATRICAL.

Owing to the high standard of excellence maintained by Manager Waite, in the touring of his respective companies, he constantly has time offered to him in the best theatres of the country for his attractions. It would take a dozen companies to supply the wants of managers, however. Manager Waite is satisfied that his attention must be confined to but two. Tonight an entirely new company, band and orchestra open a week's engagement. While it has been repeatedly called the "number two company" on the streets during the past week, it is thought a grand surprise awaits the audience tonight in the company's rendition of the great Russian drama, "Michael Strogoff." Ladies' free tickets must be reserved before 6 o'clock tonight.

—Miss Kate Lunden, W. C. T. U. National lecturer for the Scandinavians, and author of the White Ribbon Star Spangled Banner Hymn, will speak in the rooms of the W. C. T. U., on Watchung avenue, Thursday, April 9th, at 3:30 and 8 p. m. Everyone, and especially Swedes, are invited to be present.

Mr. and Mrs. D. W. Rogers, of 228 West Second street, gave an Easter tea last evening to a few friends.

Letter-carrier J. W. A. Bauersachs is ill at his home on Grandview avenue suffering with bronchitis. During his illness his route will be covered by Money-order Clerk Wm. B. Sharp, as the only eligible substitute, Chas. Glaentzer, is filling the vacancy caused by the illness of Carrier E. E Hann.

—At the meeting of the Woman's Relief Corps held Friday evening, the president, Mrs. Brokaw, appointed Mrs. Westphal, Mrs. Morse and Mrs. Mc Voy, a committee to confer with the G. A. R. committees toward the observance of Decoration Day. After the transaction of the business the members enjoyed cocoa and light refreshments, which were served by the good and welfare committee.

THE SCHOOL TAX FIXED.

THE RATE IS FORTY-NINE CENTS ON A HUNDRED DOLLARS.

The Tax is the Same as Last Year—Arrangements are Being Made for the Commencement Exercises—New Business

The Board of Education held its regular April meeting last night at the High School building. Messrs. Probasco, Lovell, Lounsbury and Abbott and subsequently Dr. Jenkins were present, as was also a list of bills. A communication was received from City Treasurer Alex. Titsworth telling that he had received from B. Holmes, the County Superintendent, $661.81, the balance of school taxes from the State, and had deposited it at the City National Bank. Another communication from the same officer stated that he had received from B. Holmes, the County Superintendent of the Reserve Fund, $1,457.02 of the reserve fund. The city tax collector's report was read. He had collected $659.27, which, with $37.23 interest, made a total of $696.50 now deposited to the credit of the Board.

A communication was received from Trenton asking the appointment of the school census enumerators. Dr. Jenkins nominated George Moore, Mr. Lounsbury nominated Abram Angleman and Dr. Probasco nominated E. J. Olsson. On motion these three were selected and the First ward was assigned to Moore, the Second and Third wards to Olsson and the Fourth ward to Angleman.

Mr. Lounsbury next read an estimate of the expenses in the teacher's salaries and the opening of the new primary school. The estimated expenses were $61,109. Last year the running expenses were paid by a tax of .0045; the limit by law is .0050. A tax of .0004 provided for the free text books last year, and $6,250 was paid out on interest and bonds.

Mr. Lounsbury thought that this year the tax would need to be .0045 or even .0044, and .0004 extra for text books. He said that the rate could thus remain the same despite the increased expenditures on account of the increased amount which they expect from the State this year. On motion made by Mr. Lovell the Board fixed the school tax for 1896 at .0045 for running expenses, the same as last year, and .0004 for text books.

President Probasco, at the wish of a committee from Monroe Avenue chapel, brought before the Board the question of grading Monroe avenue between Third and Fourth streets that it might be accepted by the city and kept in order. The grading could be done very cheaply for about $80, if the Board and the trustees of the chapel should do it together. It would necessitate, however, said Dr. Probasco, the laying of the sidewalk and curb, and the lowering of the fence. Mr. Lounsbury thought that as the city of Plainfield owned the school, it should grade the street. The duty of the Board of Education was to look after the building, not the streets. He said that Monroe avenue was better in its present condition and that it would be very expensive to grade clear back into into the yard or build a wall as a terrace with a fence below would be dangerous to the little children playing in the yard. Mr. Lovell thought that the Board's previous action in lowering a sidewalk by one of the buildings had set a precedent that would have to be foliowed. He moved, however, that the matter be left with the committee on buildings to report at the next meeting.

A letter was read from Rev. Jesse L. Hurlbut, D. D., who declined with much regret the invitation to speak at the commencement exercises as he would, at that time, be conducting a Chautauquan gathering in Kansas.

Dr. Probasco spoke about the music for the commencement exercises and read a letter from P. Ludwig Conde relating to it. Dr. Probasco and all the members of the Board were in favor of giving it to a Plainfield man instead of an outsider, if quality and rates were equal. Several seemed to think that Mr. Conde would not only equal but would furnish better music than the New York leaders at the same charge.

Superintendent Maxson suggested that the lowest grade in the Irving School, which is really a mixed kindergarten, be termed a kindergarten. Mr. Lovell made a motion to that effect and it was carried.

Superintendent Maxson then reported that the High School had been placed on the approved list of preparatory schools at Williams College, the only one this year, and that the graduates of the High School will now be able to enter the above college without taking the preliminary examinations.

The large and valuable book, "The Birds of North America," was presented to the High School by Mrs. George H. Babcock. The handsome gift was gratefully received and a vote of thanks sent to Mrs. Babcock.

Mr. Lounsbury moved that the clerk be empowered to expend $11 to purchase five hundred stamped envelopes. The motion was carried.

Mr. Lounsbury then spoke about the fact that the new primary buildbuilding was to be equipped with wet closets, but as the sewer did not run there, and was not likely to for some time, he thought it might be wise to use the dry system. Mr. Lovell then made a motion that covered Mr. Lounsbury's suggestions, and the motion was carried. The Board then went into the executive session.

Copies of the financial statement for March were distributed before the meeting. The statement was as follows:

After the exercises in the room, they will adjourn to Central Hall where a reception will be held and a bountiful repast will be served to which all are invited. Admission will be by ticket only which can be had of the members.

A Popular Entertainment.

An entertaining programme of popular selections and a low price of admission always make a successful entertainment, and such a one will be the recital which is to be given at the Congregational church on Tuesday evening, April 14th, under the auspices of the Christian Endeavor society of the church. It will be given by out-of-town and local talent, and will include readings by Mrs. Herbert C. Williams, of Elizabeth, banjo and mandolin, selections by William J. Edwards and George C. Wheeler, of Bayonne, contralto solos by Miss Katheryn Krymer, of Brooklyn, and others.

Auxiliaries to Meet.

A special meeting of the auxiliary department of the Salvation Army, of this city will be held in the Y. M. C. A. building, Thursday evening, at 8 o'clock. Among other officers, the following will be present, Capt. Elizabeth Clark, who first met the Army when studying at Zurich University; Capt. Nice will be present with his violin, and Comrade Bjorksten will both speak and sing.

Another Indian Uprising.

Chief-of-Records Harry C. Runyon, of Paugh-Caugh-Naugh-Sinque Tribe, No. 193, has sent out invitations to all the Tribes in the reservation to attend the anniversary masque ball and peace dance to be held in this city on April 16th next. There will undoubtedly be a large number of Red Men present from Tribes. The Indian agents all over the State are very much worried over the outcome.

Reckless Youngsters.

A dangerous habit is engaged in by the children of West Fourth street who play on the piles of ties which have been placed along that thoroughfare for the extension of the street railway. Several have had narrow escapes from broken limbs in the past few days.

Over Three Tons of Sugar.

Did you ever realize the quantity of sugar used during a summer in making the syrups for Randolph's soda water and glaces? Well, he has just received a shipment of 6,920 pounds for this summer's use.

During the winter of 1893, F. M. Martin, of Long Reach, West Va., contracted a severe cold which left him with a cough. In speaking of how he cured it he says: "I used several kinds of cough syrup but found no relief until I bought a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, which relieved me almost instantly, and in a short time brought about a complete cure." When troubled with a cough or cold use this remedy and you will not find it necessary to try several kinds before you get relief. It has been in the market for over twenty years and constantly grown in favor and popularity. For sale at 25 and 50 cents per bottle at Armstrong's pharmacy, Park and North avenues.

THE CITY LEGISLATORS.

THE COMMON COUNCIL TRANSACT A LOT OF IMPORTANT BUSINESS.

In Session For Over Three Hours—The Proposed Library Appropriation Defeated—For Equitable Taxation.

It required a three-hour session of the City Council to transact the business brought before that body last evening. There was considerable to do and there was apparently no hurry, for it was 11:45 when the motion to adjourn was made.

All the members were present except Councilmen Ginna, Fisk and Westphal. After the Council had approved the minutes of the last regular and adjourned meetings, Clerk MacMurray presented a batch of petitions. They were as follows:

Plainfield Real Estate Company for four hydrants, corner of West Seventh street and Monroe avenue, corner of West Sixth street and Monroe avenue, West Sixth street between Monroe avenue and Lee place, corner of West Sixth street and Lee place, referred to fire and buildings committee; Plainfield Ministers' Association, remonstrating with the Council for granting a license for a saloon opposite the Mt. Olive Baptist church, signed for the Association by Secretary Rev. G. Kennedy Newell, the petition was filed; from James W. De Graff and others asking for a crosswalk across Washington avenue and another across Giraud avenue, between Front street and Green brook, referred to street committee; from Ralph I. Tolles and others asking Council to place a crosswalk on Westervelt avenue corner of Orange p'ace, referred to the street committee with power; from J. B. Mi ls and others asking for an electric light on Carleton avenue, 250 feet north of Putnam avenue, referred to the lights and trees committee; from David Wren and others asking for an electric light on Orange place between Westervelt avenue and Elm place, referred to lights and trees committee; from Secretary W. W. Coriell, of the G. A. R. Joint Memorial Detail, asking for the usual appropriation of $100 for the observance of Memorial Day, granted unanimously; from J. B. Mills and others asking for a fire hydrant on Carleton avenue between Putnam and La Grande avenues, referred to fire and building committee; from John Valiant and others asking for a crosswalk across East Front street and Watchung avenue to Y. M. C. A. building, referred to street committee; from W. H. Manning and others asking for an electric light on West Second street between New and Liberty streets, referred to the light and fire committee; from C. W. McCutchen and others, asking for a fire alarm box corner of Central avenue and Randolph road, referred to the fire and building Committee, they to use their judgment as to location; from J. Parker Mason and others asking for an extension of the sewers on Central and Stelle avenues, referred to the committee on sewers; communication from C. J. Crawford, regarding the action of the Plainfield street railway in making their extensions, consigned to the waste basket; communication and resolution from Board of Directors of the Public Library, asking for $7,000 to make the proposed addition and $3,500 for current expenses, referred to finance committee. The bill of O. M. Dunham for goods furnished the city in 1889 made its appearance for the second time and was referred to the proper committee, after which the usual budget of claims were presented and after being audited were ordered paid.

Mayor Gilbert in a communication appointed Harry Fraleigh as a regular policeman. Mr. Dumont said he was not in favor of increasing the force and thereby adding expense. Mr. Barrows thought it was the last department in the city to economize in, and the people were now beginning to take pride in the department. The appointment was confirmed. The monthly reports of the Bulding Inspector, City Collector, Treasurer and City Judge were all received and filed.

In a communication the Board of Engineers recommended confirmation of the action of Zephyr Hook and Ladder Co., in expelling L. C. Beekman, and accepting the resignation of Martin Vanderweg from Gazelle Engine Co. The Council concurred in both cases. The bond of Street Commissioner R. A. Meeker was filed.

Mr. Tolles recommended the placing of electric lights on East Third street, Berckman street and LaGrande avenue, West Eighth street, corner of Spooner avenue, West Eighth street, between Plainfield and Spooner avenues, and Carleton avenue, 200 feet from Putnam avenue. They were all ordered placed as given above. Several hackmen applied for license and the same were granted. There were also several applications for peddler's licenses, but only three were granted.

The latter are residents of this city and New Market and the others live in New York.

Mr. Barrows asked that the Police Board be authorized to contract for summer uniforms for the policemen. It was so ordered.

On recommendation of Mr. Tolles, A. G. Vogeler was given permission to erect an awning in front of his meat shop, 207 West Front street. The communication from Howard Fleming and other residents of Park avenue below Ninth street, was considered, having laid on the table from the last meeting. It provides for some necessary repairs to the sidewalk in that locality, and the Street Commissioner has been instructed to see that the walks are laid to conform to the grade, and a crosswalk will be placed opposite the Park avenue Baptist church.

At this time the bids were recieved for furnishing the city with crosswalks culverts, and crushed stone. There were three bidders on the former and two on the latter. H. C. Johnson's price for crosswalks and culverts was 79 cents for double and 75 cents for single; Powers & Son, 95 and 69 cents respectively, while A. C. Lazzie bid 97 and 84 cents for the same. H. C. Johnson gets the double at 79 cents, Powers & Son, the single at 69 cents. For crushed stone C. I. & N. B. Smalley bid $1.10 for Nos. 0 and 1, and $1.00 for No. 2; while Jasper Wilson bid $1.20 for No. 0, $1.10 for No. 1, and $1.05 for No. 2.

The above price is per lineal feet. Smalley Bros. were accordingly given the contract. They have to file a bond of $1,000, while the others give bonds for $500 each. Mr. Barrows moved that the committees' report be received, which was so ordered.

The committee on streets presented a petition advising that until all new streets are properly graded, macadamized and curbed, the same be not accepted by the city. A resolution was then introduced by Mr. Tolles that the streets mentioned in the communication of the Plainfield Real Estate Company be not accepted until the above had been complied with. It was so ordered.

Following the above Mr. Tolles moved that Orange street be accepted by the city, after the same has been graded, etc. It was so ordered.

Under new business an ordinance was introduced by Mr. Tolles which provides for the laying of stone walks to displace crushed stone walks. It was adopted on two readings, ordered engrossed and duly advertised. An ordinance was then introduced by Mr. Frost which provides for the appointment by the Mayor of three commissioners to prepare a plan of assessment in connection with the system of sewers. The same to be appointed on or before June 1st. It was adopted on second reading, ordered engrossed and duly advertised. Mr. Tolles offered a resolution, which stated that there are too many trees about the city and asking that the committee on lights and trees be authorized to have trees removed where there are thought to be too many, after the Corporation Counsel had furnished an opinion on the subject. It was adopted.

Mr. Serrell introduced an ordinance regulating the use of bicycles and vehicles about the city. It provides that bicycles shall carry lights, which can be seen 100 yards ahead, the same to be lighted one hour after sunset and one hour before sunrise.

They are also to be provided with bells which can be heard 100 feet distant. A fine of $5 for each violation is provided. It was stated by Mr. Serrell that the present Legislature had abolished all cycle ordinances and one was needed by the city. Mr. Dumont wanted time to examine the ordinance. After the first reading the ordinance was laid on the table for that purpose. Another ordinance was introduced by Mr. Serrell providing for the sprinkling and not soaking of the streets in the summer. The ordinance provides for the use of a certain sprinkler. On Mr. Dumont's suggestion the same course was taken with this ordinance as with the preceding one.

The resolution from the Board of Directors of the Public Library, authorizing the expenditure of $7,000 for the proposed additions to the building, was read. Mr. Dumont said the amount was necessary and should be given. Mr. Frost spoke against it and said that the best interests of the city did not demand the expenditure. The library was not opened when the general class of people could use it, and the extensions would not be serving the people. He thought the library should be overhauled and it would then be found that there was considerable room. Mr. Barrows stated that the duty of a Councilman was to serve the CHURCH ELECTIONS.

Episcopal Societies Select Their Wardmen and Vestrymen.

The annual meeting of Grace P. E. church for the purpose of electing wardens and vestrymen was held last evening. There was no contest, it being a question of securing men for the positions. J. B. Dumont, who has served as vestryman for twenty-six years, declined to serve any longer, and in fact all of the older men declined to serve, preferring to make room for those younger in years. Geo. M. Randall and S. A. Cruikshank were elected wardens and the following as vestrymen: J. M. Dryden, W. H. Sterling, Pendleton Rogers, George S. Clay, M. S. Ackerman, Francis G. Moore and Thomas Minford. J. B. Dumont and C.P. Bull were chosen as delegates to the Diocesan Convention

The annual meeting for the election of wardens, vestrymen and delegates to the Diocesan Convention, was held in the Church of the Holy Cross, last evening. The following persons were elected: Wardens, Dr. J. H Carman and Benjamin R. Western; vestrymen, William L. Saunders, Robert S. Miller, Horsley Barker. Arthur T. Gallup, William A. Westphal; delegates to convention. Benjamin R. Western, William L. Saunders, Horsley Barker; Alternates, Clarence L. Murphy, Thomas E. Warman, William A. Westphal. Rev. T. Logan Murphy, the rector, made a few pleasant remarks on the loss of the senior vestryman, H. Bartling, and expressed great regret at the necessity of his leaving the office that he has filled so successfully. He also spoke of the large collection taken last Sunday, by which the church debt was cleared away and he congratulated the congregation on the liberal way in which they responded.

The annual meeting for the election of wardens and vestrymen at the Church of the Redeemer was held last evening and resulted as follows: Wardens, George P. Dupee and James A. Alexander; vestrymen, Thomas Loyd, G. A. Andsley, H. R. Phillips, E. C. Perkins and Alex. E. Faber.

CONCERT AND BALL.

International Association of Machinists Give a Pleasant Affair.

The first annual concert and ball of Watchung Lodge No. 167, International Asociation of Machinists, was held in Saengerbund Hall last night. The affair proved a successful one, the attendance being large enough to fill the hall. Before the dancing was started the following entertaining programme was rendered: Overture, orchestra; horizontal bar act, Rudolph Spiegel, Frank Keller and Charles Meyer; cornet solo, Mr. Bartow; instrumental solo, August Froelich; baritone solo, Wm. O'Connor. After the programme had been concluded dancing began to the music of Prof. Rogers' orchestra, and continued until nearly daylight this morning.

The following had charge of the affair: Chas. Meyer, general manager; Wm. O'Connor, floor manager, assisted by John Dixon and Edward McCue; Henry Pugh and James Smith, floor committee; Wm. Clifton, Ed R. Hangliter, Ben Frederickson, John Griffin and Thomas Condy, reception committee. The grand march was led by Mr. and Mrs. Charles Meyer, and was taken part in by about seventy-five couples.

A FINE ORGANIZATION.

Under the Leadership of Joseph Sattels it is Making a Name for Itself.

The Plainfield orchestra will meet on Wedndesday for rehearsal at the piano warerooms of Joseph Sattels, 221 Park avenue. This organization in its rendering of the high mass at St. Mary's church, Easter Sunday morning, and the programme at the Park Avenue Baptist church, Easter Sunday evening, easily proves itself the finest amateur orchestra ever organized in Plainfield, and it is Mr. Sattels intention to make it an institution of which Plainfield may be justly proud. At present the membership is as follows:

Violins, Martin Korff, Edw. Mosher. Ernest Higham, Maurice Audsley, Dr. Gaston, Mr. Henderson, Antone Gaub, Mr. Swede; Cello, Dr. Berg; double bass, Mr. Schmitt; cornet, N. Guttman, C. Wallander; clarionet, P. Conde, J. Hewitt; trombone, G. T. Dunham; flute, Frank Manchester.

An Affidavit.

This is to certify that on May 11th, I walked to Melick's drug store on a pair of crutches and bought a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm for inflammatory rheumatism which had crippled me up. After using three bottles I am completely cured. I can cheerfully recommend it. Charles H. Wetzel, Sunbury, Pa. Sworn and subscribed to before me on August 10th, 1894. Walter Shipman, J. P. REMAINS A SALVATIONIST

BRIGADIER EVANS WILL NOT JOIN THE AMERICAN VOLUNTEERS.

It is Said That He and Commander Booth Could Not Come to an Agreement—The Secession in Bound Brook.

Bound Brook is now very much interested in the new movement of the American Volunteers. About a week ago eleven members of the Salvation Army in that place seceded to form a post of the American Volunteers. Capt. Wright and Lieut. Stewart are in command, and Sunday afternoon held a rousing "open air" meeting that was largely attended. The popular favor seems to be with the seceders. They have secured a hall immediately above the hall occupied by the Salvation Army, and attract many there nightly. The Salvation Army corps still continue to hold their meetings, but the loss of most of the members badly handicaps them. Captain Booth and wife, formerly of Long Branch, are in command of the regular army. Captain Booth went over to the side of Commander Booth at the start, but afterwards returned to the old organization and was ordered to Bound Brook. Brigadier Evans wanted Lieut. Hansen, who formerly made this city her home, to go to Bound Brook, and offered to make her captain if she would. She would not go, and soon after joined the American Volunteers.

It is finally settled that Brigadier Evens of this city will remain with the Salvation Army. He held a conference with Commander Booth but they could not agree and the Brigadier decided to remain where he was.

Mrs. Booth, wife of the Commander, has a scheme by which she expects to make the members of the Defender's League active workers. The plan will rejoice all the hearts of the ministers that has members of the League in their congregation.

The Defenders will be required to become active workers in their own church. Once a month the officer in command will call a meeting of soldiers and Defenders will be required to report on their month's work and plans for the future will be discussed.

The American Volunteers are planning for a grand meeting on April 27, at Carnegie Music Hall, New York. Delegations from all the neighboring posts, including Plainfield will be present.

Lacerated His Ear.

Saturday morning last while G. E. Whitten, agent for the Grand Union Telegraph Company, was driving over the Dog Watch Hollow road, the right forward wheel of his wagon sunk down in the road and threw him out of the wagon. He struck on his right side and his head was cut and his right ear was partially torn away and the bones broken. Though stunned by the fall he managed to get up and lead his horse to the nearest neighbor, W. Spencer, where, after bandaging his head, Ambroze Mantz drove him home in his wagon. Dr. F. M. Wilde, of Bound Brook, was called. He removed the particles of broken bone and sewed up the ear.

Words of Praise for Engineer Dunham.

It is pleasurable to know that Engineer F. A. Dunham is to do the necessary engineering on the house connections of the sewerage system. There is no man more capable, and at the same time more careful in every detail. He takes a personal interest in the work, and either he or his head engineer will give it a close supervision. The contract calls for completion within sixty days, and that means not only quick work, but good work, under intelligent direction.—Westfield Leader.

A Well-Known Organization.

The fame of the Independent Fife and Drum Corps is not confined to Plainfield alone, for an offer has been received from a Newark party to play into a phonograph. The offer was laid over until the next meeting.

—What is more delicious than molasses candy? If you like it, call at Armstrong's pharmacy.

—The Y. M.C. A. is exceedingly fortunate in securing the well-known entertainer, Alfred E. Pearsall, for the members' reception tonight.

—Wm. H. Sebring is now nicely located in his new store on West Front street, where he has every facility for handling his large custom trade. Mr. Sebring carries a large line of stylish suitings.

It will be an agreeable surprise to persons subject to attacks of bilious colic to learn that prompt relief may be had by taking Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. In many instances the attack may be prevented by taking this remedy as soon as the first symptoms of the disease appear. 25 and 50c bottles for sale at Armstrong's pharmacy, Park and North avenues.

AGAIN A BENEDICT

Gen. Harrison Wedded Last Evening to Mrs. Dimmick.

A VERY UNPRETENTIOUS CEREMONY

Only Thirty-six Witnesses—The Groom's Gift to the Bride—Not Many Curiosity Seekers at the Church Door—The Bridal Gown.

New York, April 7.—Perhaps as simple a wedding as has been witnessed within the sacred walls of St. Thomas' church was solemnized half an hour before 6 o'clock last evening, when Gen. Harrison, twenty-third president of the United States, entered into the holy bonds of wedlock with Mrs. Mary Scott Lord Dimmick. Not one of the thirty-six favored witnesses of the ceremony could fail to have been impressed with its singular unpretentiousness. Both the bride and groom declared that this was a private affair of their own, and they set about and conducted it as best befitting their tastes. The assembled crowd outside the church showed the interest the public had in the affair. Secrecy as to the exact hour of the ceremony had been carefully maintained, which, in a measure, served to check the growth of the curious. Then, too, the weather was not inviting enough, even to the curious, to attract as great a mass as was feared.

The Church Decorations.

The chancel of St. Thomas' church was handsomely decorated with flowers. The decorations consisted chiefly of white lilacs, Easter lilies and evergreens. On either side of the chancel were umbrella-shaped banks composed of white lilies. Behind each of these floral pieces was a bank of lilies, with a background of palms and evergreens. Near the spot where Gen. Harrison and his bride stood were two large vases of lilacs. Lilies were tied on the pews with broad white satin ribbons.

The Guests.

The guests began to arrive at the church shortly before 5 o'clock. As they entered they were received by the two ushers, F. F. Tibbott and Daniel M. Ramsdell. Mrs. John F. Parker, the bride's sister, occupied a front pew on the left, and Mr. and Mrs. Pinchot, the one on the right. Behind Mrs. Parker sat Gov. Morton and Col. Marvin, his military private secretary. In the succeeding pews were Senator and Mrs. Stephen B. Elkins, ex-secretary of state John W. Foster and Mrs. Foster, ex-attorney general W. I. Miller and Mrs. Miller and George W. Boyd of the Pennsylvania railroad. In pews back of Mr. and Mrs. Pinchot sat relatives and friends of the bride. They were Major and Mrs. Richard Parker, Chancellor and Mrs. McGill, the Misses Dimmick and Mrs. Briggs, Mr. and Mrs. Leeds, Norman Leeds and the Misses Leeds, Mr. and Mrs. Broughton and Miss Lambert, Gen. and Mrs. Fitz John Porter and the Misses Porter.

Arrival of the Bride and Groom.

It was just 5 o'clock when Gen. Harrison and Gen. Benj. F. Tracy, his best man, entered a carriage at the Fifth Avenue hotel and started for the church, where they arrived at 5:20 o'clock. They entered through the rector's residence on Fifty-third street and went directly to the vestry, where they awaited the arrival of the bride. Gen. Harrison wore a long frock coat, dark trousers and white gloves. In the lapel of his coat was a buttonniere of lilies of the valley. Gen. Tracy wore a frock coat and striped trousers, and a small bouquet of white violets. At 5:05 o'clock Mrs. Dimmick and her brother-in-law, Lieut. John F. Parker, U. S. N., were driven from their residence, 40 East Thirty-eighth street, and reached the church at 5:18 o'clock. They entered by the main door on Fifth avenue and went direct to the tower room to the left of the vestibule, where wraps and coats were discarded. It was 5:32 o'clock when the two large doors leading to the centre aisle were thrown aside and the ushers, side by side, stood in the passage way. At the same moment, Dr. J. Wesley Brown, the officiating clergyman, robed in a white cassock, appeared from the vestry followed by the sexton. The reverend doctor passed in behind the sanctuary rail, the attendant closing the gates after him.

The Bride Thoroughly Composed.

Dr. Brown knelt in prayer a few moments, and then the ever popular strains of "Lohengrin" burst forth, and re-echoed back from the empty stalls with double volume. Then the door leading to the vestry on the left of the altar opened and the silvery locks of Generals Harrison and Tracy were seen. There was an awkward pause for a minute and the assemblage looked interestingly, first at the altar and then at the rear entrance. Finally, at 5:33 o'clock, the bride appeared and fell in behind the ushers. At the same moment the minister nodded his head, signalling the groom to step forward. Gen. Harrison and his best man at once came forward and stood upon the top chancel step. The left hand of the general was bared and he carried in his right the left hand glove. Immediately the bridal procession was begun. The two ushers walked well forward and took a position on the second chancel step. The bride, leaning upon the arm of her brother-in-law, Lieut. Parker, with head erect and thoroughly composed, followed.

The Ceremony.

As the bridal party approached the chancel, Gen. Harrison came down the steps to the floor to receive his bride. With a frank movement, she extended her right hand which the groom clasped in his left. Then the couple marched up the step to the centre of the altar, where they knelt a moment in prayer. Gen. Tracy and Lieut. Parker followed, the former standing to the right of the groom and the lieutenant to the left of the bride. It was a pretty picture, beautiful in its simplicity. The reading of the Protestant Episcopal ceremony was at once begun. Both faced the minister and listened intently to his words. When the usual question was propounded to the groom "wilt thou have this woman to be thy wedded wife," etc., the general responded in subdued, almost inaudible tones. When the same question was put to the bride, she answered in a clear musical voice. In response to the question: "Who giveth this woman to be married to this man?" Lieut. Parker stepped forward. Taking the bride's right hand he placed it in the general's left. The minister smiled pleasantly, took Mrs. Dimmick's hand back from the general's and motioned the lieutenant to place it in his (the minister's) hand. Mr. Parker complied, and then the groom made the usual promise that "I plight thee my troth," the bride in turn making the same vow.

Wedding Procession.

As the minister uttered the words: "Those whom God hath joined together, let no man put asunder," bride and groom turned about and faced each other. The final words that made Gen. Harrison and Mrs. Dimmick one were pronounced at seventeen minutes to 6 o'clock. Dr. Brown shook hands with both and offered his warm congratulations. The ex-president then extended his right arm to his newly made bride and, to the soft strains of the "Tannhauser Wedding March" they filed down the aisle. They were immediately followed by the ushers. Next came Lieut. Parker. As he reached the front pew to the left he gave his arm to Mrs Parker, who stood awaiting him. Gen Tracy followed, he taking Mrs. Pinchot from the first pew on the right. In this order the wedding procession marched down the aisle, the guests following behind. On reaching the vestibule, the party retired to the tower room, where wraps and coats were donned.

Off for Indianapolis.

Gen. Harrison's face bore a calm, satisfied expression, but a change had taken place in his appearance. He had evidently put himself in his barber's hands during the day, and his looks were somewhat altered. His beard had been closely trimmed on both sides and considerable cut away from the chin. It made quite a difference in the general's make-up, giving him a younger appearance. The bridal party was driven to the residence of Mrs. Pinchot, where light refreshments were served. Here the bride and groom donned their traveling attire. Soon after 7 o'clock the party re-entered their carriages and were taken to the Pennsylvania railroad station in Jersey City. They boarded the private car of vice-president Frank Thomson, which was coupled to the regular 7:30 p. m. train west, and the bride and groom left at once for Indianapolis. Some of the party accompanied Mr. and Mrs. Harrison as far as Philadelphia, and participated in the wedding supper, which was served aboard the car.

Where They Will Spend the Honeymoon.

The honeymoon will be spent in Gen. Harrison's home in Indianapolis, which has been refitted and renovated for the occasion. Later the couple will go to the Adirondack mountains, where a cottage has been prepared for them at First lake in the Fulton chain.

The Bride's Gown.

The bride, instead of carrying a bouquet, held an ivory prayer book in her hand. Mrs. Dimmick wore a gown selected with rare good taste. The material is a novel fabric of pearl gray. The skirt is of extra long cut in the front and falls in drapings to a demi-train very much fluted. The train is daintily stiffened with satin and linen. Along the edge is a pretty design of old lace. The bodice is cut with a high neck and is profusely trimmed with old Honiton lace. This lace has been an heirloom in the Lord family for years. The costume is enlivened by a turquoise blue velvet stock and bows. The under bodice is of white chiffon, over which is a Louis XVI. coat. The revers are broader than usual at the neck and shoulders. The combination made a dazzling picture. In the back the coat ends in regulation tabs. It is lined with a lighter silk. The sleeves are great petals of dress material, full at the shoulder and tapering to the forearm. They come to a sharp point at the wrists, ending in a French fall of old Honiton lace. Lace is draped over the front of the skirt and held with diamond bugs. Mrs. Dimmick's bonnet is small, of blue velvet, trimmed with white aigrette and small spangles, held in place by jewelled pins.

Gen. Harrison's Gift.

Mrs. Dimmick has received many valuable presents. The principal gift from Gen. Harrison to Mrs. Dimmick is a necklace made of seven rows of pearls. The necklace is fifty-five inches long and has diamond clasps. The bridegroom's gift to his best man is a walking stick which Gen. Harrison has prized for years, owing to associations connected with it. Its history dates back to the war of the rebellion, and Gen. Tracy is said to have long desired to possess it.

Spaniards Suffer a Severe Defeat Near Cienfuegos.

PATRIOTS USE EXPLOSIVE BULLETS

Government Troops Lose a Large Number in Killed and Wounded—Cubans Took Them by Surprise—Court-Martials at Matanzas.

Havana, April 7.—Intelligence has reached this city that a fight has occurred among the hills around San Blas, near Cienfuegos, province of Santa Clara, between the column commanded by Col. Vasquez and a body of insurgents. The latter occupied an elevated position, which gave them a decided advantage over the Spaniards, who were taken by surprise. The troops claim that the rebels used explosive bullets. However this may be, it is known that the Spanish were defeated after a hot fight, losing many killed and wounded. Among the latter were Col. Vasquez and Lieut. Buron. At one time during the engagement the insurgents charged upon the troops with machetes, inflicting heavy losses. The official account of the fight says that the insurgents lost twenty-one killed and three wounded, while the Spanish loss was sixteen wounded. The report says that the insurgents were defeated, but, like many other of the reports issued by the government, it is utterly unreliable. The insurgents, as stated above, completely surprised the troops and utterly routed them. The newspapers here report that Gomez, with 4,000 men, is going to the Siguanea valley. A court-martial held at Mantanzas has sentenced four prisoners of war to death. They are Timoteo Mesa, Jose Gonzalez, Ramon Gonzalez and Salustiano Fresnoda. Twenty-four prisoners were yesterday deported to the Isle of Pines, ten of them being convicted of political offences, while the others were ordinary criminals.

Fired on a Spanish Gunboat.

Havana, April 7.—While the gunboat Alvarado was entering the port of Marave, near Baracoa, province of Santiago de Cuba, she was fired on by rebel forces located on both shores of the bay. The gunboat replied, with what effect is not known. The firing was kept up for two hours. One sailor was seriously wounded.

THEIR PLANS UNCHANGED.

Statement Issued by the Booths Before Leaving for Chicago.

New York, April 7.—Before leaving for Chicago last evening Mr. and Mrs. Ballington Booth issued a statement, in which they say that, while they have met and held a long interview with Mrs. Booth-Tucker, they wish it distinctly understood that their attitude is absolutely unchanged, and that their future plans for God's American Volunteers, their new order, will go forward as heretofore stated. They also say that the interview, outside of the controversy, was of a sisterly and brotherly nature.

Who are nervous, weak, worn out with local troubles find pure blood, nerve strength, and perfect health in Hood's Sarsaparilla.

Like a confidential friend we suggest the use of Hood's Sarsaparilla, a reliable blood purifier and tonic; it has helped many others and will help you.

is deplorably prevalent in this nineteenth century. Thousands die annually—young in years, but as completely worn out as though the full allotment of their time had passed over their heads. The man who feels that he is "breaking down," experiences loss of strength, sleep, and appetite, should at once take that greatest of concentrated food preparations. It is not a medicine, but a builder-up of brain, nerve, and flesh tissue. By its strength-giving properties, and its action as an invigorator of each of the great life-maintaining organs of the body, it stops the decline, and gives to the prematurely broken-down sufferer a new lease of life, wherein poor health is an unnecessary adjunct if its use is continued.

CUBANS ARE ELATED

Satisfied with the Passage of the Belligerency Resolutions.

SPAIN'S DOWNFALL AN ASSURED FACT

Congressmen Laugh at the Idea of That Country Declaring War Against Us. Mr. Cleveland's Course in Doubt. Spanish Press Comments.

Washington, April 7.—The representatives of the Cuban insurgents are highly elated over the passage yesterday in the house of the senate Cuban belligerency resolutions, especially in view of the large majority—345 to 27—by which they were carried. Although they would have preferred the more radical resolutions passed by the house recently, they are still very well satisfied. They claim that if President Cleveland will act favorably upon them that the downfall of the Spanish power in Cuba is an assured fact. They say that the Cubans are sure to win their struggle, but that if the president lives up to the resolutions the end will be brought about much sooner. Almost simultaneously with the passage of the resolutions the news of the patriot victory near Cienfuegos came to add its quota to the general joy.

War Not Expected.

Notwithstanding the recent warlike utterances of the Spanish press, filled, as they were, with threats of vengeance should the United States recognize the belligerency of the Cubans, not one of the congressmen who were interviewed to-day seemed to have the least fear that the Spanish government would carry out the threats contained in the press of the country. They say that Spain knows too well the power of this country to risk a war, and that, even if she were so minded, she would be unable to raise the necessary funds in any of the capitals of Europe. Besides, she already has her hands full with the war in Cuba and can spare neither the time nor the men in a conflict with a nation as powerful as the United States. The story published in a New York newspaper that a treaty has been entered into between England and Spain to declare war against the United States should there be any move made by this country looking to the independence of Cuba is likewise laughed at by those who are in a position to know.

The President's Course in Doubt.

What course the president will pursue in the matter is a matter of doubt. As the resolutions are concurrent, the president may utterly ignore them. He has done so in the case of similar resolutions anent the Armenian affair, which although passed by congress on January 20, have never, so far as known, been the subject of any diplomatic correspondence between this and the Turkish government. If the Turkish government has been officially informed nothing has come of it.

INDIGNATION IN SPAIN.

The Press Contain Some Very Bellicose Comments.

Madrid, April 7.—The newspapers here are deeply indignant over the adoption by the American congress of the resolutions recognizing the belligerency of of the Cuban insurgents and their comments are very bellicose. They support the proposal that has been made to raise a national subscription for a volunteer fleet. The Heraldo declares that few Spaniards, except Senor de Lome, the Spanish minister at Washington, believe that President Cleveland will not recognize the insurgents as belligerents. It adds that if the United States also means war with Spain the latter would prefer it to humiliation.

THE RAILWAY TROUBLE.

Every Important City in the North Likely To Be Involved.

Philadelphia, April 7.—Within the last few days there have been important developments concerning the situation of the street railway employes of this city, who have lately been manifesting renewed symptoms of unrest. It is said to be an undoubted fact that they have at last laid plans for concerted action among railway men in nearly every important city in the north. If the present plans, which are attributed, on responsible authoity, to the leaders of the amalgamated association, are successfully matured, not only will the street railway employes of the country be affected, but the steam railway men as well.

AHLWARDT MOBBED.

The Anti-Semitic Lecturer Comes to Grief in Hoboken, N. J.

Hoboken, N. J., April 7.—Herr Ahlwardt, the anti-semitic member of the German reichstag, who has been lecturing in the United States for some months, and who was handled rather roughly in New York city some time ago at a meeting he was addressing, was mobbed last night by Hebrews in this city while on his way to Germania hall. Ernest Freido of Brooklyn, editor of a paper said to be published by Ahlwardt, was in the party and had his jaw smashed by the crowd. Ahlwardt and Freido were arrested and locked up, together with several others. A number of detectives from headquarters appeared on the scene, having been summoned by the proprietor of the hall, and quickly dispersed the mob. Detective Quinn picked up a pistol which he says was in the hands of Ahlwardt during the scrimmage. Ahlwardt was not injured beyond a few bruises.

The mortality has been very great, persons attacked with the disease dying in three or four days. The surgeon will remain at Hong Kong to study the plague. His report has been sent to the Marine hospital service.

THE HELLENIC GAMES

America's Representatives Win a Number of Events.

GARRETT'S PHENOMENAL THROW

He Hurls the Discus 29.13 Metres—More Than 40,000 Persons Witness the Games—Awarding the Olive Crowns.

Athens, April 7.—Yesterday began the 776th Olympiad, in which athletes from several countries participated. The Americans who took part in the games were the victors in several of the events, despite the fact that they have been here a very short time and had little practice after their long ocean voyage. The weather was mild, but cloudy. Early in the morning it was feared that the games would have to be postponed because of the rain that fell Sunday, but later it was decided that the grounds within the Stadion were in sufficiently good condition to allow of the opening events taking place. More than 40,000 persons were admitted to the Stadion, including the king of Greece, the duke of Sparta, the crown prince; and other members of the royal family, the members of the diplomatic corps and many other prominent persons. These 40,000, however, were not the only ones who witnessed the games. The Stadion has no roof and on each side of it rise hills from which a good view can be had within the walls. These hills were fairly black with spectators, thousands of whom were too poor to pay the small price of admission to the Stadion, but who were determined to see the revival of the ancient Greek festival. The sight was a remarkable one, and seldom has such interest and enthusiasm been displayed over any event in the Grecian capital. The Americans who took part in the events appeared to be in excellent form, and they won their victories with much apparent ease.

Some of the Events.

For the discus throwing the following Americans were entered: Captain Robert Garrett of Princeton university and Eilery H. Clark of Harvard, a member of the Boston Athletic association. Garrett won. The first heat of the 100 metre race was won by F. W. Lane of Princeton in 12 1-5 seconds. Szokoly, a Hungarian, was second. The second heat was won by T. P. Curtis of the Boston Athletic association, whose time was 12 1-5 seconds, the same as Lane's. M. Chalkokondylis, an Athenian, was second. The third heat was won by T. F. Burke of the Boston Athletic association in 11 4-5 seconds. Hoffman, a German, was second. In the hop, step and jump Connelly covered 13 7-10 metres. Tufferi, a Frenchman, was second. In the first heat of the 400 metres race H. B. Jamison of Princeton was first and the German, Hoffman, second. The second heat was won by Berne, an Englishman, with Gimolin second. The first heat of the 800 metre race was won by Flack, an Austrian, Lermusiaux, a Frenchman, won the second heat. All the finals will be run on Friday.

Garrett's Phenomenal Throw.

Garrett's throw was considered something phenomenal by the spectators. He threw the discus 29.13 metres, defeating the Greek champion, Paraskevopoules, by 19 centimetres. The winners in the several events were cordially applauded. Everything passed off without a hitch, and the revival of the games has been most successful.

Awarding the Olive Crowns.

The progress of the games will be better understood by remembering that 100 metres are nearly equivalent to 109 yards and 400 metres to 437 yards. The distance between Marathon and Athens is about twenty-eight miles. While the complicated pentathlon, to win which was the chief glory of the Olympic games, is not revived, there will be medals for all-round excellence. In order to secure the olive crown in the ancient event one was compelled to excel at once in leaping, running, javelin throwing, throwing the quoit and wrestling. The olive crowns that will be awarded to the victors will be made from material furnished from the same grove from which were taken the leaves and sprigs that formed the crowns of victory given to the victors more than fifteen centuries ago.

The name of the Sergeant-at-Arms of the Maryland Legislature is Devilbill and the Speaker's name is Mudd.

The very serious charge is made against Governor Bradley, of Kentucky, that he is an A. P. A. man, and that that organization will push him for the Republican Presidential nomination.

It is currently stated in Elizabeth that William H. Corbin, who is counsel for the Senate Investigating Committee, will in all likelihood accept the nomination for Senator next fall. While discussing the Senatorial outlook it can be stated that there are eight Senators to be elected this year. Speaker Derousse is a candidate in Camden county, with ex-Assemblyman Joseph Engard giving him a chase. President Thompson, being Clerk in Chancery and having had three terms, is out of consideration in Somerset, and a new standard-bearer is to be selected. The name most prominently mentioned at the present time is Assemblyman Reed, who figured more or less conspicuously in the doings of the recent Legislature, and was a credit to his county.—Newark Advertiser.

It is reported now that the reason why ex-Secretary Whitney will not think of accepting the Democratic Presidential nomination is that he intends to get married. Of course some people might be incredulous enough to suggest that if circumstances were such that he could fairly entertain any expectation of being elected, his acquisition of a wife would not interfere with his acceptance of a nomination. There have even been those who thought that that othe eminent Benedict, ex-President Harrison, if the nomination came his way, might accept it even if it followed close upon a bridal tour. It is to be hoped that the doubters are right in these instances. Conjugal devotion is a beautiful thing, but what would be the people's fate if all elderly widowers who got married again declined to do anything to save the country?—Newark News.

The Democratic State Committee met in Taylor's Hotel, Jersey City, Saturday afternoon. Edward F. C. Young presided. He has tendered his resignation as chairman, but the committee has not succeeded in finding his sucessor, and he was persuaded to continue as chairman until the meeting to be held on May 6th in Trenton, on the eve of the State Convention. Among those mentioned as the new chairman are General Richard A. Donnelly, of Trenton; William B. Gourlay, of Paterson; James J. Bergen, of Somerset county, and Oliver H. Kelly, of New Brunswick. There will be another vacancy to fill. Abram De Ronde, of Bergen, offered his resignation, but was persuaded to refrain from presenting it until the meeting at Trenton. Arrangements were made for the State Convention. R. V. Lindabury, Harry Paul and Howard Hayes were appointed a committee to prepare a platform, and Rufus Blodgett, R. V. Lindabury and Eckert Budd were selected as the committee to name the temporary officers.

THE CITY LEGISLATORS.

city first, then his district and lastly himself. He said his ward was in favor of the library expenditure, but the city at large was not, and that he could hardly afford to vote for the spending of the $7,000. The fire and police department needed money more than the library. Mr. Serrell also put himself on record as being opposed. The resolution was lost on a vote, Mr. Dumont being the only one to vote for it.

The Council then went into a committee of the whole, and Mr. Dumont took the chair. The various amounts for the different departments was then made up, after which Mr. Dumont offered an ordinance stipulating the following amounts: For general purposes $39,000, exclusive of fire, library and poor, out of which the following amounts are named: Streets, $15,000; interest on sewer bonds, $5,500; city poor $4,000; public library, $3,500; fire department, $15,500; police department, $13,000. A dog tax of $2 was also fixed. The ordinance was adopted on second reading, ordered engrossed and duly advertised.

A resolution was presented by Mr. Frost, which provides for the revising of the rates on taxable property in the city. He thought the city should take account of stock every fifteen years.

Mr. Dumont thought it was a good thing, as there was property in the city which is taxed too low. Below is the resolution:

Whereas: The subject of taxation is one of the most vital topics for present day discussions; and

Whereas: A just and equitable system is desirable from every point of view, all the individuals of this community being interested in securing such a system; therefore be it

Resolved, That this Council considers it expedient to make inquiry to show: 1. The value of land in Platnfield, exclusive of improvements. 2. The total amount of taxation now levied within each ward, (or district.) 3. The probable rate of such taxation which would be levied upon the land only. 4. A classification of values, the classification to show separately; land; improvements of different kinds; railroad values; exempted property; and all other property. 5. That a committee of two members of the Council be appointed by the President to meet with the Assessor to carry out the provisions of this resolution.

There being nothing further the Council adjourned at 11:50.

MUSIC AND DANCE.

Concert of the Amherst Glee Club Followed With a Social Event.

Plainfield rarely has the opportunity of enjoying such a musical treat as was given at the Casino last evening by the Amherst College Musical Association. Nearly every seat was filled and the large and fashionable audience thoroughly appreciated the concert as was shown by their hearty and vigorous applause. The association is composed of the glee, banjo and mandolin clubs, each of whom gave several selections. The college boys were all good singers and most of their selections were new. Humor played a prominent part in several glees and everybody enjoyed it. An advertisement of Mrs. Winslow's soothing syrup, sung as an anthem, was ridiculous in the extreme.

J. C. Bissell's solos also found great favor with the audience.

The college musicians were all good and their selections were well rendered.

The hall was prettily decorated in the Amherst colors, purple and white. Bunting of those colors was artistically draped along the sides of the room and over the windows, while an immense Japanese umbrella, with Japanese lanterns attached, hung from each of the chandeliers. Greens were also used in the decorations.

The patronesses were Mrs. Charles F. Abbott, Mrs. Marion S. Ackerman, Mrs. Frederic H. Andrews, Mrs. Albert H. Atterbury, Mrs. John T. Baker, Mrs. Irving H. Brown, Mrs. Rowland Cox, Mrs. John B. Dumont, Mrs. Charles J. Fisk, Mrs. Howard O. Fleming, Mrs. Alexander Gilbert, Mrs. George H. Goddard, Mrs. Frank Otis Herring, Mrs. Benjamin A. Hegeman, Jr., Mrs. Henry Lapsley, Mrs. William E. Lowe, Mrs. J. Parker Mason, Mrs. Samuel McCutchen, Mrs. James Middledith, Mrs. Isaac L. Miller, Mrs. J. Kirtland Myers, Mrs. Joseph W. Reinhart, Mrs. Mason W. Tyler, Mrs. George W. VanBoskerck and Mrs. Daniel T. VanBuren.

As soon as the concert was over the seats were removed from the hall and an invitation dance was held. The committee in charge consisted of Boardman Tyler and Fred W. Goddard. Quite a number of the young people remained to the dance. A delightful supper was served in one of the ante rooms by Max Wiertz.

—F. Moffett has removed from Duer street to Grandview avenue.

—The Easter collection at All Saints P. E. church, Scotch Plains, amounted to $55. The decorations were very pretty and the services largely attended and interesting.

—Ninety per cent of all the people need to take a course of Hood's Sarsaparilla at this season to prevent that run-down condition of the system which invites disease.

—Some miscreant stole two lanterns from La Grande and Putnam avenues one evening recently, and if he is caught, he will be well treated by the street railway employees.

A PINK EASTER TEA.

An Event Given as a Farewell Honor to Miss Eleanor Underwood.

One of the most charming of the entertainments that marked the beginning of the Easter festivities was given yesterday afternoon from five to seven o'clock, by the Misses Clark, daughters of E. B. Clark, of Crescent avenue. The morning snow-storm was such a decided lingering of Winter in the lap of Spring, that there was little hint of the Easter season out of doors.

Inside the hospital home of Mr. Clark, there were flowers everywhere, as were fair young girls daintily gowned in pale tints of pink, white and blue.

The tea was given as a farewell honor to Miss Eleanor Underwood, who received with the Misses Clark and their sister, Mrs. Lewis Lutkins, of Elizabeth. The other aids in the parlor and tea room were the Misses Mary Bushnell, Maud Middledith, Emma and Gertrude Haviland, Harriet and May Shreve, Marion Henderson, Nancy Lawson and Miss Collins. Misses Laura Underwood and Edith Gilbert presided at the tea table. The decorations were pink, carnations, and an effective arrangement of pink ribbons and pink shaded lamps. Among the out of town guests were Miss Collins, of Jersey City, the Misses Foster, Wilder and Tracy from New York, Lewis Lutkins from Elizabeth, Henry Shreve from Trenton, Mr. Partot from Buffalo, Mr. Bennett from Boston, Messrs. Foster and Martin from Princeton College, Messrs. Esty, Mossman and Bissell from Amherst College and Mr. Osborn.

NEW MARKET.

The Lord's Supper will be observed in the First Baptist church next Sunday morning.

The infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Reed, and Mr. and Mrs. Hodge's child were christened Sunday afternoon at Holy Innocents church.

—Street Commissioner Meeker's men are now engaged in doing good work on Madison avenue and West Second street. The surplus of mud is being carried away and the street is otherwise being put in good condition.

THEATRICAL.

A proper presentation of Michael Strogoff requires a company of more ability than the average reportoire combination possesses, and when it is said that the piece was put on in a meritorius manner at Music Hall last night by the Waite company, it is really all the commendation that the company needs. This combination is known as Waite's western, or No. 2 company, but judging from the performance last night, it is an unquestionably better aggregation of actors than this manager's first company which appeared here a few weeks ago, and which played to packed houses nearly every night of the engagement. Michael Strogoff is a piece full of dramatic elements and possibilities for the actors, and when either overdone or slighted in the emotional, heroic or comedy roles, there is an effect created in the minds of the auditors that is highly condemnatory of the whole performance. The performance, however, won the frequent applause and gave satisfaction to the large audience that was present, and should ensure them a week of good business. The music, too, is far superior to that of Waite's first company, the specialties more refined, and just as pleasing. Matinees will be given each afternoon. The production for tonight is "From Sire to Son."

"The Law of the Land," is the attraction at the American Theatre in New York. The land of the magnolia, the home of a Southern gentleman, offers a locality for melodrama unsurpassed in this country. Take away from it all the objectional features that have been so rife in other plays of the South, in the shape of the war element and the question of the negro, and this seems barren of incident. Not so to the skillful producer, manager Walter Sanford. A story telling of human heart interest, imbued with all the passions that flesh is heir to, depicting "The Law of the Land" in a novel yet attractive manner is acted by a more than ordinarily competent company, whose strength can be judged by some of the names of the excellent people engaged, among whom are Amy Busby, of Charles Frohman's Company; Miss Jeffreys-Lewis, who appears after a lengthy absence from New York; Frank Losee, W. H. Thompson, Miss Anna Barclay and E. S. Heron, and Henry Mainhall, of Mr. Sanford's road company.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the eustachian tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube be restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give one hundred dollars for any case of deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

BOHEMIA PLAINFIELD OUT.

Wanton Frolic and Fantastic Costumes at the Masquerade Ball.

Bohemia Plainfield was at the masquerade ball held in the Columbia Cycle Academy last night. Wanton frolic, prompted by the knowledge that the mask concealed the identity of the person whose face it screened, was indulged in promiscuously. All ordinary rules of conventionality were abandoned for a time of gayety, and an unrestrained flow of high jinkety deeds marked the progress of the fantastic evolutions of the toe, combined with the subtle melody of the music and the merry hum of the voices of the dancers as they whirled in the waltz, schottische, two-step or quadrille.

The six hundred people who were present formed a cosmopolitan aggregation in the ordinary walks of life, but when thrown together in an event of this sort they made a hilarious time of it, as if by one accord they were bent on extracting all the fun that had been corked up during a time of Lenten observance.

The grand march was started at 9:30 o'clock, and the participants presented a kaleidoscopic array of grotesque, whimsical, imaginary and quaint costumes, many of them being typical of historical and modern characters that have become famous in the eyes of the public. There was an air of gorgeousness added to the fantastic parade by the nattily uniformed Independent Fife and Drum Corps, headed by majestic personality of Drum Major Frank Manchester, whose rat-ta-tat on the drum and shrill, piping whistle of the fife, preceded the aggregation of dancers in their evolutions about the floor. They were followed by the floor committeemen, F. S. Moore, J. Loughlin, L. Fiering and Theodore Smith. They were dressed in colonial costumes.

After the grand march the numbers on the dancing programme were followed out until after midnight, when refreshments were served by Mrs. F. S. Moore, Mrs. E. C. Searing, Mrs. J. Loughlin, Mrs. T. Smith, Mrs. S. Miller and Miss Katie Mulhearn. The ball ended early this morning.

T. McKinley, for a number of years a resident of this place, died at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Huff, Saturday, of typhoid fever. Funeral services were held this afternoon at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. John Huff on North avenue.

Charles Dunham, night telegraph operator at the railroad station, was seized with a paralytic stroke Sunday morning about 7 o'clock, while on duty at the station. Dr. Brakely was called and found that one side of Mr. Dunham's body was useless. After proper treatment was given he was removed to his home and he is now improving favorably.

During the last month there has been received into membership in the Methodist church forty-four persons on confession. The following were received on Sunday: Wm. H. Carmen, Mrs. Wm. H. Carmen, Mrs. William Wyckoff, Arthur S. Gaston, Frank L. Reed, Charles B. Mattis, Miss Carrie J. Sutphen, Miss Lillie M. Worden, Miss Maud R. Wilcox, Wm. E. Walters. A False Diagnosis.

La Grippe is confounded by many persons with a severe attack of catarrh, which in some respects resembles the former. These individuals suffer severely with pain about the forehead, eyes and ears, with soreness in throat and stoppage of the nasal passages, and, in fact, are incapacitated for work of any kind for days at a time. These are catarrhal sufferers. Ely's Cream Balm has been used with the best results in such cases. The remedy will give instant relief

THE QUEEN IS NO "DUMMY."

Some of the Prerogatives of the British Sovereign.

People on this side of the water are apt to attach too much credence to the oft-repeated but somewhat fallacious assertion that the queen of England has no power; is a mere figurehead, in fact, and nothing but a constitutional puppet in the hands of the cabinet for the time being. It is often stated that the president of the United States is possessed of far more executive power and prerogatives than her British majesty. This is, according to the New York World, a great mistake. The English sovereign has retained far more power than people realize. For instance, she has the power to dismiss every soldier in the army, from the commander-in-chief down to the youngest drummer. She could disband the navy in the same way, and sell the ships, stores and arsenals to the first buyer that presented himself.

Acting on her own responsibility, she could declare war against any foreign power or make a present of any section of the empire over which she rules to any foreign power. Acting strictly within her prerogative, she could make every man, woman and child in the country a peer or peeress of the realm with the right in the case of males who are of age to a seat and a vote in the house of lords. With a single word or stroke of the pen she could dismiss any cabinet that was in power, and could, moreover, pardon and liberate every criminal of any grade that is confined in the British penitentiaries. These are only a few of the things that the queen could do if she desired.

JUMBO AND THE LAW.

A Deputy Sheriff Out After the Great Elephant.

It was eight or nine years ago, and the cars containing the animals were unloaded near the Canal street freight house, says the Providence Journal. The animals were guided across Exchange place by attendants, and the elephants went along very peaceably.

They hadn't gone a great distance, however, when Jumbo's back began to itch. The big elephant tried to reach the place with his trunk, but didn't manage to. So he stepped from the line and looked for some suitable place against which to rub his back. There were two objects in sight—a big flagstaff and Paddy Burns' shanty, which stood in the rear of the Three Ones' fire station. Jumbo picked out the shanty, and by the time he had relieved his feelings things inside were upside down, and the building had nearly been removed from its foundations and shoved into the water.

Paddy Burns looked for a lawyer, and found the late Ambrose E. West. The attorney issued a writ and gave it to a deputy sheriff, with instructions to attach Jumbo. The officer presented the paper to the treasurer of the circus and then took up a position near the elephant, but out of the reach of the swing of his trunk.

The bill for damages was promptly settled, but the officer said afterward that if the animal had decided to walk away he hadn't any idea how he could have proceeded to enforce the law by compelling him to remain.

FRENCH JOURNALISM.

The Fifty Daily Newspapers of Paris and Their Readers.

The Paris press comprises nearly 50 daily newspapers, the aggregate not having varied greatly during the last ten years. Most of these are sold for one sou. An extremely limited number is sold for two sous, and two or three only for three sous, or a little less than three halfpence. It is hardly necessary to say, by way of preliminary comment, that a dozen really able journals would be better supported and better serve the interests of the public. The French people, taken as a mass, have little money, says the National Review, to pay for the gratification of the small amount of literary taste they possess. The novelist, Zola, declared in an interview a few months ago that reviews and magazines like those of England and America would not find in France a sufficient number of readers to justify their publication.

The Revue des Deux Mondes is supported by the professional literati, the learned professions and an aristocracy of birth and money. It is rarely seen outside these circles. Even the handsome and readable illustrated newspapers, such as the Illustration and Monde Illustre, have only a small circulation, confined principally to the cafes, though the literary matter they contain is generally of an elevated character and especially adapted for family use.

AN ABSENT-MINDED MAN.

He Was Driving to Pasture a Cow Still in the Stable.

There have been a great many stories about absent-minded men, where one forgets his house address, another what business he is in, and where another has to refer to the mark on his handkerchief before he can remember his own name, etc. There is a lawyer in Fort Atkinson, Wis., by the name of Rogers, who possessed a Jersey cow, which he used to drive, morning and evening, to and from the pasture, a few blocks distant from his home. One morning as one of his neighbors was passing along the street he met Mr. Rogers walking in the middle of the road, his mind apparently engrossed with some weighty question. The neighbor called out:

"Good morning, Mr. Rogers; where are you going?"

"Why," said Mr. Rogers, in a surprised way, "I'm driving the cow to pasture," and he waved his hand toward where the cow ought to have been.

"Well, where is the cow?" asked the friend.

"I guess I forgot to let her out of the barn," answered Mr. Rogers, humbly, as he realized his position. And he had.

MANY THINGS.

We Are Prone to Concentrate on One Idea.

Products of Nature That Are Manifold Blessings to Man.

Whenever you see a glass of bright, clear, sparkling water, you at once think what delightful drinking water that is. You never think of it as being especially useful for boiling potatoes or for bathing the face. You only think of its power to quench the thirst. And yet this is only one of its many desirable properties.

When you see a bright, hot fire in winter, you think at once how easily you could keep warm by remaining near it. The thought does not occur to you that a fire has a hundred other uses.

Whenever cod-liver oil is mentioned, many people think at once of consumption, as if this was the only disease to which this valuable remedy was adapted. Perhaps this is not strange when we consider the fact that cod-liver oil stands out as the most prominent remedy in this terrible affection. In fact, as water quenches the thirst, and as fire gives warmth, so does cod-liver oil bring health and prosperity to those just beginning to fade from serious lung trouble.

Of late years, however, it has been known that consumption is caused by a germ. It is also known that cod-liver oil does not kill this germ. And there is also the fact that this same oil will cure consumption in its early stages. If it does not kill the germ of the disease, how does it affect a cure?

This is easily explained. Cod-liver oil has a wonderful power to build up and invigorate the whole body. When the body is in this prosperous condition, it can take care of the germs of consumption; that is, it destroys the germs, and thus removes the cause of the disease. For this reason cod-liver oil is called a powerful tonic and reconstructive; while it is also known to be a most valuable food.

From this we can see the value of such a remedy in a number of ailments. There are many persons who begin the work of each day in a thoroughly exhausted condition. They have tried quantities of tonics and iron preparations of all kinds, but without relief. There is no appetite; bowels are constipated; circulation is poor; the lips are pale; the ears are colorless; and the whole body is in a debilitated and most uncomfortable state. Scott's Emulsion of Cod-liver Oil with Hypophosphites changes all this. Soon the blood becomes richer; the heart beats stronger; color returns to the face; digestion is improved; and good health is once more at hand.

Scott's Emulsion contains more pure Norwegian Cod-liver Oil than any other emulsion in the world, that will stand the test of time as being a perfect inseparable emulsion. Ask your doctor.

COPYRIGHT, 1894, BY BRET HARTE.

He moved away. Although attaching little importance to the mysterious message—whether sent by Miss Faulkner or emanating from the stranger herself—which he had reasoned was based only upon a knowledge of the original plan of attack—he nevertheless quickly dispatched a small scouting party in the direction from which the attack might come, with orders to fall back and report at once. With a certain half irony of recollection he had selected Jim Hooker to accompany the party as a volunteer. This done he returned to the gallery. The surgeon met him at the door. "The indications of concussion are passing away," he said, "but she seems to be suffering from the exhaustion following some great nervous excitement. You may go in—she may rally from it any moment."

With the artificial step and mysterious hush of the ordinary visitor to a sickbed, Brant entered the room. But some instinct greater than this common expression of humanity held him suddenly in awe. The room seemed no longer his—it had slipped back into that austere conventual privacy which had first impressed him. Yet he hesitated; another strange suggestion—it seemed almost a vague recollection—overcame him like some lingering perfume, faint, far off and pathetic, in its dying familiarity. He turned his eyes almost timidly towards the bed. The coverlet was drawn up near the throat of the figure to replace the striped cotton gown, stained with blood and dust, which had been hurriedly torn off and thrown aside. The pale face cleansed of blood and disguising color, the long hair still damp from the surgeon's sponge lay rigidly back on the pillow. Suddenly this man of iron nerves uttered a faint cry, and with a face as white as the upturned one before him, fell on his knees beside the bed. For the face that lay there was his wife's.

Yes! hers. But the beautiful hair that she had gloried in—the hair that in his youth he had thought had once fallen like a benediction on his shoulders—was streaked with gray along the blue veined hollows of the temples; the orbits of those clear eyes, beneath their delicately arched brows, were ringed with days of suffering; only the clear cut profile, even to the delicate imperiousness of lips and nostril, was still there in all its beauty. The coverlet had slipped from the shoulder; its familiar marble contour startled him. He remembered how in their early married days he had felt the sanctity of that Diana-like revelation, and the still nymph-like austerity which clung to this strange, childless woman. He even fancied that he breathed again the subtle characteristic perfume of the lace embroideries, the delicate enwrappings in her chamber at Robles. Perhaps it was the intensity of his gaze—perhaps it was the magnetism of his presence—but her lips parted with a half sigh, half moan. Her head, although the eyes were still closed, turned on the pillow instinctively towards him. He rose from his knees. Her eyes opened slowly. As the first glare of wonderment cleared from them, they met him—in the old antagonism of spirit! Yet her first gesture was a feminine pathetic movement with both hands, to arrange her straggling hair. It brought her white fingers, cleaned of their disguising stains, as a sudden revelation to her of what had happened; she instantly slipped them back under the coverlet again. Brant did not speak, but with folded arms stood gazing upon her. And it was her voice that first broke the silence.

"You have recognized me! Well, I suppose you know all," she said with a weak half-defiance.

He bowed his head. He felt as yet he could not trust his voice and envied her her own.

"I may sit up, mayn't I?" She managed by sheer force of will to struggle to a sitting posture. Then as the coverlet slipped from the bare shoulders, she said, as she drew it with a shiver of disgust around her again: "I forgot that you strip women—you northern soldiers. But I forgot also," she added, with a sarcastic smile, "that you are likewise my husband—and this is your room."

The contemptuous significance of her speech dispelled the last lingering remnant of Brant's dream. In a voice as dry as her own he said: "I am afraid you will now have to remember ouly that I am a northern general and you a southern spy."

"So be it," she said, gravely. Then, impulsively, "but I have not spied on you."

Yet the next moment she bit her lips as if the expression had unwittingly escaped her; and with a reckless shrug of her shoulders she lay back on her pillow.

"It matters not," said Brant, coldly. "You have used this house, and those within it to forward your designs. It is not your fault that you found nothing in the dispatch box you opened.

She stared at him quickly; then shrugged her shoulder again. "I might have known she was false to me," she said bitterly, "and that you would wheedle her soul away as you have others. Well—she betrayed me! For what?"

A flush passed over Brant's face. But with an effort he contained himself. "It was the flower that betrayed you! The flower whose red dust fell in the box when you opened it on the desk by the window in youder room. The flower that stood in the window as a signal. The flower I myself removed and so spoiled the miserable plot your friends had concocted."

A look of mingled terror and awe came into her face. "You changed the signal," she repeated, dazedly; then in a lower voice: "That accounts for it all!" But the next moment she turned again fiercely upon him: "And you mean to tell me that she didn't help you—that she didn't sell me—your wife—to you for—for what was it?—a look—a kiss?"

"I mean to say that she did not know the signal was changed and that she herself restored it to its place. It is no fault of hers nor of yours that I am not now a prisoner."

She passed her thin hand dazedly across her forehead. "I see," she muttered. Then again bursting out passionately, she said: "Fool! you never would have been touched! Do you think that Lee would have gone for you—with higher game in your division commander? No! Those supports were a feint to draw him to your assistance while our main column broke his center. Yes, you may stare at me, Clarence Brant. You are a good lawyer—they say a dashing fighter, too. I never thought you a coward, even in your irresolution, but you are fighting with men drilled in the art of war and strategy when you were a boy outcast on the plains." She stopped, closed her eyes and then added wearily: "But that was yesterday—to-day, who knows? All may be changed. The supports may still attack you. That was why I stopped to write you that note an hour ago—when I believed I should be leaving here forever. Yes! I did it!" she went on, with half-wearied, half-dogged determination. "You may as well know all. I had arranged to fly, your pickets were to be drawn by friends of mine, who were waiting for me beyond the lines. Well! I lingered when I saw you arrive—lingered to write you that note. And—I was too late!"

But Brant had been watching her varying expression, her kindling eye, her strange masculine grasp of military knowledge, her soldierly phraseology, all so new to her, that he scarcely heeded the feminine ending of her speech. It seemed to him no longer the Diana of his youthful fancy, but some Pallas Athene who now looked up at him from the pillow. He had never before fully believed in her unselfish devotion to the cause, until now, when it seemed to have almost unsexed her. In his wildest comprehension of her he had never dreamed her a Joan of Arc, and yet that was the face which might have confronted him, exalted and inspired, on the battlefield itself. He recalled himself with an effort.

"I thank you for your would-be warning," he said, more gently, if not tenderly, "and God knows I wish your flight had been successful. But even your warning is unnecessary. For the supports had already come up; they had followed only the second signal and diverged to engage our division on the left, leaving me alone. And their ruse of drawing our commander to assist me would not have been successful, as I had suspected it and sent a message to him that I wanted no help."

It was the truth—it was the sole purport of the note he had sent through Miss Faulkner. He might not have disclosed it, but so great was the strange domination of this woman still over him that he felt compelled to assert his superiority. She fixed her eyes upon him. "And Miss Faulkner took your message," she said, slowly. "Don't deny it! No one else could have passed through our lines, and you gave her a safe conduct through yours. Yes! I might have known it. And this is the creature they sent me for an ally and confidant!"

For an instant Brant felt the sting of this enforced contrast between the two women. But he only said: "You forget that I did not know you were the spy, nor do I believe that she suspected you were my wife."

"Why should she?" she said, almost fiercely. "I am known among these people only by the name of Benham—my maiden name. Yes! you can take me out and shoot me under that name, without disgracing yours. Nobody will know that the southern spy was the wife of the northern general. You see I have thought even of that!"

"And thinking that," said Brant, slowly, "you have put yourself—I will not say in my power—for you are in the power of any man in this camp, who may know you, or even hear you speak. Well—let us understand each other plainly. I do not know how great a sacrifice your devotion to your cause demands of you. I do not know what it seems to demand of me. Hear me, then! I will do my best to protect you and get you safely away from here; but, failing that, I tell you plainly that I shall blow out your brains and my own together."

She knew that he would do it. Yet her eyes suddenly beamed with a new and awakening light; she put back her hair again and half-raised herself upon the pillow to gaze at his dark, set face.

"And as I shall let no other life but ours be periled in this affair," he went on, quietly, "and will accompany you myself, in some disguise, beyond the lines, we will take the risks together—or the bullets of the sentries that may save us both all further trouble. An hour or two more will decide this. Until that time your condition will excuse you from any disturbance or intrusion here. The mulatto woman you have sometimes personated may be still in this house: I will appoint her to attend you. I suppose you can trust her, for you must personate her again, and escape in her clothes, while she takes your place in this room as my prisoner."

"Clarence!"

Her voice had changed suddenly; it was no longer bitter and stridulous, but low and thrilling, as he had heard her call to him that night in the patio of Robles. He turned quickly. She was leaning from her bed—her thin white hands stretched appealingly toward him.

"Let us go together, Clarence," she said, eagerly. "Let us leave this horrible place—those vulgar, cruel people, forever! Come with me! Come with me to my people, to my own faith, to my own house, which shall be yours! Come with me to defend it with your good sword, Clarence, against those vile invaders with whom you have nothing in common and who are the dirt under your feet. Yes! Yes! I know you! I have done you wrong; I have lied to you when I spoke against your skill and power. You are a hero—a born leader of men! I know it! Have I not heard it from the men who have fought against you, and yet admired and understood you, aye, better than your own? Gallant men, Clarence! Soldiers bred, who did not know what you were to me, nor how proud I was of you, even while I hated you! Come with me! Think what we would do together, with one faith, one cause, one ambition! Think, Clarence, there is no limit you might not attain! We are no niggards of our rewards and honors, we have no hirelings' votes to truckle to; we know our friends! Even I, Clarence, I—" there was a strange pathos in the sudden humility that seemed to overcome her—"I have had my reward and know my power. I have been sent abroad, in the confidence of the highest, to the highest. Don't turn from me. I am offering you no bribe, Clarence, only your deserts. Come with me! Leave those curs behind and live the hero that you are!"

CYCLING COMMENT.

The F. L. C. Martin Cycle Company have received several samples of the Cleveland wooden handle bars.

A. J. Spicer and Fred Treulebeau rode to Newark Sunday. They found the roads in good condition, but the wind was rather strong.

During the last two weeks the F. L. C. Martin Cycle Company has sold 120 Cleveland and Crescent wheels and very nearly the same number of orders for future delivery.

The demand for wheels this year is something unprecedented, and the rush at the salesrooms of the F. L. C. Martin Cycle Company still continues. Among the most recent purchasers of wheels from that company are Wm. Ackerman, Crescent racer; T. E. H. Curtis, Cleveland Swell Special; W. Voltman, Crescent No. 1; Percy Brown, Cleveland Swell Special; F. Guyer, Crescent No. 1.

Bicycle riders are constantly transporting their wheels on the railroads during the summer months, and the delicate construction of the bicycle makes it difficult to handle. Of late years the traffic has become so large that plans are now being devised by which bicycles can be carried safely and without hindrance to boxed and crated merchandise. Last week a Western railroad issued instructions that its baggage cars be supplied with bicycle racks for the use of wheels. Similar steps should be taken by all the roads throughout the country.

New Jersey wheelmen are delighted with the proposition to build a cycle path from Jersey City to Philadelphia. The route of the path would be from Jersey City to Newark, Elizabeth, Plainfield, New Brunswick, Princeton and Trenton, and thence along the shore of the Delaware river through Bordentown and Burlington to Philadelphia, which will make it about 125 miles. Another path proposed is one from Jersey City along the entire length of the Morris canal to Phillipsburgh, Penn.

At a meeting of the New Jersey Division held last week at Elizabeth, it was decided, instead of giving the annual State meet to one club, the division will manage the meet itself this year; it will probably be held during July, at either Asbury Park or Paterson. It was voted to admit any wheelman free of initiation fee who brings four new members in with him, also to give a bicycle to the member securing the greatest number of members between now and June 15th. The recent action of the New York State Division in admitting New Jersey wheelmen to its ranks was severely criticised.

The Graves Murder Trial.

A POISONED LIVER.

Don't Keep Poison in Your Body Longer Than You Have to.

If your stomach poisons your liver the consequences may be serious.

What poisons arise in your stomach come from undigested food which has decomposed there. They are absorbed by your blood and go to your liver, where they paralyze its functions and make you bilious.

Finally they go into the blood again and are carried all over the body, disordering your different organs, and perhaps making you dangerously sick.

This is the origion of many diseases which are not always known for what they are.

The poisons of undigested food can only be got rid of by the use of a purifying, strengthening, digestive tonic, like the Shaker Digestive Cordial.

A few doses of this wonderful cordial will soon clear away all undigested fermenting, poisonous substances, restore your appetite, aid you to digest your food, purify your liver and blood of all dangerous poisons, and restores you to perfect health.

It will cure biliousness, indigestion, nausea, headache, dizziness, mental depression, weakness, fever, flatulence, constipation, loss of appetite, bad taste in mouth, stomach-ache, anæmia, rheumatism, etc., where other medicines will barely give relief.

At druggists. Ten cents for a trial bottle.

Write for free book to The Shakers, 30 Reade street, New York.

THE VENETIAN ARTIST.

Prof. J. C. Van Dyke Gives a Lecture on Art Before Talented Women.

The Monday Afternoon Club are to be congratulated in securing such an interesting and talented speaker as Professor J. C. Van Dyke, of Rutgers College, to give his illustrated lectures on the Venetians. Yesterday afternoon was the second of the special lectures and the members responded in a most encouraging manner.

Prof. Van Dyke's subject was "The Great Venetian Painters of the Sixteenth Century," and he brought to the minds of all a clearer conception of the great artists of Venice. They had the art of bringing out charm, dignity and beauty in the work that was marvelous, and in their treatment of light and shade their productions were superb. The beautiful scenery surrounding their objects, with the deep blue Italian sky, for which they were noted, was indiscribable in beauty. The speaker said that their art work was not painted to be hung in galleries, but was intended for use in decorations, and so it was used. Their pictures were never designed especially for the public gaze, and the people in their day were not allowed to get nearer to them than twenty feet. They were remarkable in filling space with a given object. That the Venetians could draw was an established fact. They were superb draughtsmen. They had a knack of turning to good advantage the material at hand. It has been said that they could paint religious works, but when it came to other subjects they were not able to do the theme justice. This is not so. They were adept on any subject and they never failed to place the modern spirit in their work. At the close of Prof. Van Dyke's lecture he was heartily applauded by the audience.

A LONG TIME COMING BACK.

T. J. Carey Recovers Several Articles He Lost During the War.

Tunis J. Carey seems to have remarkable luck in recovering lost property. Monday a friend brought to him an old combination knife, fork and spoon that he carried during the early part of the war. On the handle was cut "T. Carey, 1862," while "Company A, Thirtieth Regiment," was scratched on the bowl of the spoon. This article suddenly disappeared and Mr. Carey never saw it again until Monday. It was found among the old traps of a fellow soldier of Mr. Carey's by a young man who, seeing the name, restored it to its rightful owner.

Two years ago Mr. Carey had returned to him a valuable army saddle that had been borrowed eighteen years before. It was found hanging up in an old shed at Bound Brook. Artist Julian Scott is now using it as a model for army saddles.

Oh Come, Let Up.

The Plainfield Courier of yesterday has the following:

Senator Voorhees, of Elizabeth, is slightly ill with the grip, which he attributes to the bad ventilation of the Senate chamber. James Parker, Clerk of the House, caught a cold at his desk in the Assembly chamber and was laid up with pneumonia for a period. The trouble is excessive steam heat, bad ventilation and a multitude of small draughts in both chambers. These defects are the result of bad work done under the old contracts which were investigated by the Senate Investigating Committee, and in which were discovered several big deals.

But, Mr. Courier, it snowed yesterday some three inches in depth—all unseasonable. Many people had wet feet; many will have pneumonia; some may die. All these ills, too, you should charge to the "old contracts which were investigated by the Senate Investigating Committee." Are you short of campaign thunder? J. E. M.

An Evening Gathering.

Last evening the Misses Wikoff, of East Sixth street, entertained a few of their friends at an evening gathering. The guests were received by Miss Olive Wikoff and Miss Laura Wikoff, and the evening was most enjoyably spent in music and games. Refreshments were served during the evening, and it was midnight before the happy young people parted.

—A dance will be given at the Olympia on April 22d, by the Messrs. Scribner, Pierson and Johnson.

During the winter of 1893, F. M. Martin, of Long Reach, West Va., contracted a severe cold which left him with a cough. In speaking of how he cured it he says: "I used several kinds of cough syrup but found no relief until I bought a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, which relieved me almost instantly, and in a short time brought about a complete cure." When troubled with a cough or cold use this remedy and you will not find it necessary to try several kinds before you get relief. It has been in the market for over twenty years and constantly grown in favor and popularity. For sale at 25 and 50 cents per bottle at Armstrong's pharmacy, Park and North avenues.

OLD NASSAU MEN DINE.

TIGER-SIS-BOOM-AH! PRINCETON IN THE CASINO LAST NICHT.

Plainfield Graduates of Princeton Have Their Third Annual Dinner—A Jolly Time Enjoyed Around the Board.

The Princeton tiger would have roared from sheer delight could he have been present at the Casino of the Union County Country Club last night and seen the jovial gathering of the Alumni of old Nassau under the orange and black banner and heard the sentiments of love and sympathy expressed for their Alma Mater. It was the occasion of the second annual dinner of the Princeton Club of Plainfield and its great success predicted wonderful things for the future of the club. The gathering was not a very large one but the true Princeton spirit pervaded all. Old staid business men forgot the cares of Wall street or the stock exchange, professional men threw their anxieties to the wind and one and all joined in doing honor to the grand old college that sent them out into the world better equipped for the battle of life. Stories of the college days were told and they joked and laughed about their experiences in the quaint old Jersey town.

The room was handsomely decorated for the occasion, the orange and the black, of course, predominating. A large Princeton banner was hung across the stage and another was suspended from the ceiling above the heads of the diners. Orange and black bunting was draped over the the doors and about the electric light fixtures and hung in artistic folds from the balcony on the roof of the large fire place. Here smaller Princeton flags, bunting and two large green dragons, immovable guardians of the feast, added to the splendid appearance of the room.

The table was prettily decorated with orange and black satin ribbon. The dinner was an excellent one and reflected much credit on Max Wiertz, the caterer. The party that gathered last night to do honor to New Jersey's oldest college consisted of Dr. Hayes, Leonidas Dennis, J. R. Joy, Prof. John G. Hibben, Rowland Cox, Adrian H. Joline, Edward C. Perkins, William R. Wilder, Rev. William E. Honeyman, John Magie, Dr. W. H. Murray, Dr. E. W. Hedges, Alfred E. Holmes, Wm. N. Runyon, Edward C. Petrie, Orville G. Waring. Hugh B. Reed, Dr. VanDuyn, Dr. P. W. Brakely, Frank C. Marsh, W. T. Kaufman, J. P. Murray, Dr. B. Van D. Hedges, Edward Patterson, Max Munger and Dalziel Schoonmaker.

The committee in charge of the dinner consisted of Harry Munger and Dr. B. VanD. Hedges.

After the repast had been concluded and the diners had settled back for a whiff at their fragrant Havanas, president Rowland Cox rose and addressed a few introductory remarks to his fellow Princetonites, telling of a recent visit to Princeton and declared it to be the lovliest place in all the world. He introduced Prof. John G. Hibben, '82, who responded to the toast "Princeton University." Prof. Hibben was greeted with the rousing Princeton yell followed by "Hibben." Prof. Hibben told of the firm foundation of "Old Nassau" and characterized its growth as an evolution and not a revolution. The noted acts of some of the graduates and the many prominent places in the scientific and literary world that are held by them, were referred to. As a member of the faculty he spoke of the high literary spirit among the undergraduates. Athletics, he said, attracted much attention there, but the main principle of all was that they should be pure. Young Brokaw, who was drowned at Elberon in attempting to save the life of a young woman, he referred to as a hero and a true type of the perfect manly athlete. Garrick, the winner at the Olympian games, was also spoken of as having the true manly Princeton spirit. Prof. Hibben then then told of the honor system in vogue and declared that the man himself and not his position decided his standing among his college mates. He concluded with a few words on the plans for the future of Princeton.

President Cox next read an account of the Olympic games and proposed the health of Garrick, who distinguished himself there, in which all joined.

Adrain H. Joline, '70, was the next speaker and answered to the toast "The Alumni." After an eulogy on New Jersey, and especially Princeton, interspersed with humorous remarks, he told of the board of trustees, the undergraduates, and finally the alumni. He told very wittily of the functions and duties of the alumni according to his observation. One of the duties of the alumni, in common with those of other colleges, was, he said, to stand firm and cool in times of popular insanity and uprising.

Edward C. Perkins was next introduced by President Cox to respond to the toast "Harvard." He spoke highly of the Jersey college and congratulated the club on selecting a night when the praises of Princeton are being sung throughout the country on account of the great victory of her athletes at Athens. He closed by wishing Princeton a great future.

A witty little introduction by President Cox preceded the response to the toast "Oranje Boven," by Leonidas Dennis, '84. His speech was full of humor and his listeners were kept in a continual roar of laughter. One of the great weaknesses of Princeton was, he said, the attitude of the press, which never fully represented the side of Princeton. He spoke of the advantages other colleges had gained in Plainfield, but declared that the Orange and the Black would finally triumph, but that in victory or in defeat she would still wear the banner of honor.

Princeton's great rival in the athletic and literary world, Yale, was represented by James R. Joy, who was the next speaker The familiar tune of "Bahn of Gilael" greeted him and then he spoke entertainingly on his college and the college of his hosts. He said he brought the greetings of Yale and hoped that the Princeton Club would grow and flourish, provided, of course, that Yale maintained the same ratio in size she held at present. Princeton and Yale are, he said, the nearest alike of all the American educational institutions, and graduates of one college were constantly on the faculty of the other. All through the history of this country Princeton and Yale men have stood together and the graduates of these two colleges have done more and their influence has been felt farther than any other institution in the country.

The last toast, "The Tiger," was responded to by William R. Wilder, '79. Mr. Wilder told of his efforts to discover who and what "The Tiger" is and read a letter to Prof. "Bill" Libby and its reply. He found, so he said, some crumbs of comfort in the qualities given to "Mrs. Tiger" in its Arabic derivation, and in the dictionary meaning of "Tiger." He finally ended his very entertaining and witty speech by suggesting that Prof. Hibben should take "It" back to college with him.

Between the courses of the repast the well-known college songs were sung. A number of ladies viewed the banquet from the balcony.

Then, after the speechmaking was over, the men arose and joining hands sang "Auld Lang Syne" ere departing.

MRS. M'CUTCHEN'S FIRST TEA.

A Delightful Social Event Given at a Rockview Avenue Home.

The possibility of snow storms scarcely entered into the calculations of those who planned to give teas in Easter week, but the unexpected has happened this season and the teas given thus far during Easter week have been preceded or accompanied by a fall of snow instead of sunshine and spring flowers. The sunshine and flowers, however, were found inside the home of Mrs. S. St. J. McCutchen yesterday afternoon when a tea was given her friends. The decorations were pink roses and pink shaded lights, producing a charming effect.

Mrs. McCutchen was assisted in receiving and in the dining room by Mrs. Wheeler, Mrs. Samuel Townsend, Mrs. Horne, Mrs. O. B. Leonard, the Misses Florence Marsh, Ida Yerkes, Minnie Wilson and Mary Thompson. The table was presided over by Mrs. Phillips and Mrs. Charles Smith.

This tea is the first of a series, Mrs. McCutchen being at home to her friends Tuesdays in April.

Jurors for the May Term.

The petit jurors for the May term were drawn by Sheriff Kyte at a special session of court yesterday morning. Judge McCormick presided, and the Sheriff was assisted in the proceedings by Court Clerk Norman, Deputy Sheriff Clark and Interpreter Newburger. The following jurors were drawn from this city: James M. Morrison, Frank L. C. Martin, William W. Coriell, J. Hervey Doane, Augustus M. Frazee, William R. Mattox, John M. Crane, George A. Hallock, John H. Doane, Philip Macintyre, Herman F. Schnellenberger, Morgan Turton and Henry W. Marshall.

It will be an agreeable surprise to persons subject to attacks of bilious colic to learn that prompt relief may be had by taking Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. In many instances the attack may be prevented by taking this remedy as soon as the first symptoms of the disease appear. 25 and 50c bottles for sale at Armstrong's pharmacy, Park and North avenues.

THE NEW PRESIDING ELDER.

A Short Sketch of the Ministerial Work of Rev. G. W. Smith.

The Elizabeth Journal last Saturday published the following sketch and picture of Rev. George W. Smith, the new presiding elder of this district:

Mr. Smith is one of the leading men of his conference, and was chosen at the last session to represent it, with four other clergymen and two laymen, at the general conference to be held in Cleveland during the month of May.

REV. GEORGE W. SMITH.
The new presiding elder of this district.

The Elizabeth District extends in this State from Newark bay nearly to the Delaware river, along the main line of the Central railroad and the Flemington branch, and also includes Rahway, Woodbridge, Millstone and Metuchen, and Staten Island, in all fifty-five churches, over which the presiding elder has supervision, requiring quarterly visitations. Elizabeth, being the most central point in this district, is usually selected by the presiding elder for his residence.

The change was unexpected, but was made by the bishop at the earnest solicitation of the Summit church for Dr. Ryman to become its pastor.

The appointment of Mr. Smith gives great satisfaction to both ministers and churches in the district, and Dr. Ryman leaves it, after three years of efficient service, with the regret of all.

ACCEPTED A COIN COLLECTION.

J. Herbert Johnston Makes a Valuable Presentation to the Library.

The regular meeting of the Board of Directors of the Public Library was held last evening. Directors A. C. Baldwin, J. Evarts Tracy, Rowland Cox and J. W. Yates were absent.

President M. W. Tyler reported that he had presented to the Common Council the resolution passed at the last meeting, requesting them to levy an additional tax of $7,000 at their meeting of April 6th, but they declined to order and levy the tax.

A letter was received from J. Herbert Johnston, of New York, tendering to the Library a valuable collection of coins made by his late father, John Taylor Johnston, on condition that the Library provides a proper and safe place for their exhibition and keeping.

On motion, the president was instructed to write Mr. Johnston and accept the gift, and to extend to him the thanks and appreciation of the board for the gift. The matter of providing accommodations for the coins was referred to the art committee.

THE OLD MEET THE NEW.

A PLEASANT RECEPTION GIVEN AT THE Y. M. C. A. LAST NIGHT.

The Old Members of the Association Greet the Younger Men, and Entertain Them—Bicycle for Mr. Manning.

It is possible for young men to be sociable and make their fellows feel the same, and when the "old fellows" of the Y. M. C. A. gave a reception to the "new members" last evening, the fact was self-evident from the oldest to the youngest member present. J. W. Gavett, Philip Suffern, Thomas Cuming, J. A. V. Craighead, James Kimball and Robert Radford, Jr., composed the reception committee on duty, and it was very little they had to do, for everyone was sociable. Each one was provided with a diamond-shaped tag, which distinguished the old from the new, also giving the name of the wearer and the time he joined. This afforded an excellent channel for introductions. George R. Cornwell called the members together in the small hall, after which President Murray, in a few well-chosen words, introduced Alfred E. Pearsall, of Westfield. As an entertainer, Mr. Pearsall is well known, and the hearty reception accorded him last night was well merited. He related the story of "Singing Joseph" and "A Night of Trouble." Josiah Allen and his wife Samantha figured largely in the last named selection. Both selections brought forth loud applause.

President Murray followed by making a few announcements. He said that the season was coming when the members would prefer out-door diversion to the building attractions, and the association cognizant of the fact, had provided a summer camp at Northfield, Mass., a good place to spend a vacation. He also spoke of the baseball team which would furnish sport on the Crescent Oval, and the wheeling section which would make tours around the State visiting various associations. A camera club would also be organized and rooms will be fitted up for the member's use. The grounds in the rear of the building will be graded and arranged for basket ball and light out door sports. Mr. Murray said the annual meeting of the association would be held May 19th, and a supper will be served to the members of the Get One-Club. Next Sunday afternoon at the men's meeting the subject will be the "Broad Work of the Y. M. C. A." Mrs. Brooke will sing, Raymond McGee will play the cornet and Martin Korff will play the violin.

A great surprise followed when President Murray on behalf of the association presented general secretary Harry Manning with a handsome Cleveland swell special bicycle. When Mr. Manning appeared the applause was so hearty that he could not speak. Finally he said he was not able to make a speech, but Rev. Mr. O'Donnell, who was present, reminded him of a remark which the latter made a few days ago. It was, "Blessed is the man who, having nothing to say, loses no time in saying it." He said he would lose no time in using the wheel.

Mr. Pearsall then gave the "Soldier's Story in Song," and "Ben Deane." Both were superbly rendered.

The reception committee served ice cream and cake to all, and with sociability, refreshments and college songs, the most successful reception ever held was brought to a close.

IN HONOR OF HER FRIENDS.

Miss Mary Collier Gives a Party and Dance at the Olympia.

A party and dance was given last evening at the Olympia by Miss Mary Collier, of East Sixth street, in honor of her guests, the Misses Ella and Della Phillips, of Wilmington, Del. A very pleasant evening was spent by all. Light refreshments were served during the evening. Leap year was remembered by a "leap year" dance in which the young ladies selected their own partners.

Those present were the Misses Julia J. Ketcham, Maty Ketcham, Lillian Glen, Agnes Langhorne, Grace Crane, Bertha Thorn, Leonore Carl, Mabelle Smith, Addie Manning, Louise Egan, Olive Newell, Lucie Palmer Davis, Grace E. Overton, Eleanor T. VanDeventer, Edith L. Burt, Amy Burt and Mary A. Luckey; the Messrs. Wilbur T. Cornwell, Henry Brower, Walter Probasco, Arthur B. Crane, Carl D. Pfender, Joseph Cornwell, Thomas U. Smith, Charles Noble, Franklin P. Noble, John De Meza, Alvah Davis, Arthur W. Vail, Volney F Green, Charles F. Davis and Berry Egan.

—A Christian Endeavor local union meeting will be held in the First Presbyterian church Thursday night.

—The large engine that has been in the North Plainfield Electric Light station was removed this morning to the Electric Light station on this side.

MISSIONARY WOMEN MEET.

A Lecture Delivered by a Missionary From Burmah.

The annual meeting of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of the Park Avenue Baptist church was held yesterday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock. Considering the weather, the attendance was remarkably good. Mrs. Wyckoff opened the meeting with devotional exercises, after which M. B. Kirkpatrick, a worker in the Burmah missions, under the direction of the American Baptist Union, was introduced and gave an interesting review of his seven years work on the mission field. He told of the many peculiarities of the people with whom he had been associated. In some sections of the country, there were 50,000 people with not one teacher to tell them of Christ and his wonderful work. Another place consisting of 300 miles in diameter was mentioned where the same conditions exist. The people in that locality are obliged to go fourteen miles for a doctor. When Mr. Kirkpatrick first went to the field he was very kindly received, especially by the Heathen Prince, who has assisted him in every way possible in carrying on his work. He turned over to Mr. Kirkpatrick a hospital recently erected, thus allowing him to do more efficient work among the natives, both from a spiritual and physical stand point. The average number of patients in the hospital will number twenty-five per day. When a native goes to jail his family is supposed to take care of him and furnish him with food. The hardest thing in this country is to convince people that they are lost, but it is not so in Burmah. The heathen know they are lost, and the great question is how to escape the terrible destiny, but still its difficult for them to understand redemption. The work is progressing very favorably, however, and the natives are rapidly learning of Christ. An instance of where a village consisting of about 100 persons were converted, was cited by the speaker.

During the meeting Mrs. Rand read two very interesting letters from foreign missionaries who are located in Burmah, telling of their productive work in that country.

An informal discussion followed when many valuable points regarding mission work were brought out.

TROLLEY INVADES ANOTHER STREET

Work Started on Watchung Avenue Extension This Morning.

Rumors of fresh trouble changed the plans of the trolley line contractors and at five o'clock this morning they began work on Watchung avenue, between North avenue and Fifth street, which they expect to complete today. It was understood that a property owner on Watchung avenue was going to raise an objection to the laying of the tracks. He did not appear this morning, however, and work went on without hinderance.

The very muddy condition of Putnam and Woodland avenues had something to do with the stopping of work there for the day. The track has been laid up Putnam avenue, beyond Hillside avenue and they expected to complete the line by next week. Its completion will now be delayed until the end of next week.

Missionary Work in Africa.

A. B. Cramer, a missionary in the Congo region, Africa, gave a very interesting talk on the modes of life and what missionary workers have accomplished in that section of the Dark Continent, in the W. C. T. U. rooms last evening before a fair-sized gathering. The speaker told of the great amount of superstition which exists among the natives. The witch doctors, also, have a great influence over the natives. Mr. Kirkpatrick, a missionary from Burmah, was present and offered prayer. Mr. Cramer will return to Africa in the fall.

Run Over in the Street.

A small boy was run over by a delivery wagon at the corner of Sycamore street and East Fourth street, yesterday morning. The little lad was more frightened than hurt, however. He was taken to his home on East Fourth street tn a carriage.

Died at a Ripe Old Age.

The death occured yesterday morning of Mrs. Sarah Stout, a sister of the late Mrs. Job Male, at the home of J. D. Spicer, of West Fith street. She was in her ninety-first year and one of Plainfield's oldest inhabitants. She has lived in this city about twenty years, and kept house for the late ex-Mayor Job Male, for some time. After the latter's death she resided with Mrs. W. L. Titsworth, of Watchung avenue. She was a faithful member of the Unitarian church. The funeral will be held from her late residence tomorrow morning at 9:30. The interment will be at Middletown, Monmouth county.

RELIEF FOR ARMENIA

Red Cross Society Meeting with Splendid Success.

NO OBSTRUCTIONS PUT IN THE WAY

Typhoid and Other Diseases from Exposure and Starvation Still Unabated—Thousands of Lives Saved—Looking to America for More Aid.

New York, April 8.—Spencer Trask, chairman of the executive committee of the Armenian relief committee, has received the following cablegram from Miss Clara Barton, president of the Red Cross, reporting the progress of the relief work which is being sustained by the funds which are being sent by the American people: "Our corps of physicians and medical supplies left Beirout, April 3, and will reach Marash the 10th. Scourge of typhoid and other diseases from starvation and exposure, unabated. Red Cross reports just received from our expeditions which are meeting splendid success. No obstructions nor Turkish supervision as has been wrongly reported. Every facility offered. Welcomed everywhere. One party working between Marash, Zeitoun and Harpoot, the other between Oorfa, Diarbekir and Harpoot. Visiting towns and villages enroute, giving assistance where most needed."

Thousands of Lives Saved.

In speaking of Miss Barton's dispatch Mr. Trask said: "The above cable indicates to the national Armenian relief committee a very gratifying and unexpected degree of success on the part of the Red Cross agents in reaching the destitute and large facilities in distributing the relief. The committee is very anxious that the public should realize the present critical situation of the relief work and its great possibilities if liberally backed up. All doubts as to the unparalleled extent and degree of the disaster, the merits of the sufferers, and the practicability of relieving them has been removed. In the face of great dangers and obstacles a splendid beginning has been made in the actual work of relief, and thousands of lives have been saved, though many regions have not yet been touched. Nineteen centres of distribution have been established at strategic points under the personal direction of the American missionaries and British consuls. In several places industrial relief bureaus, where the people work for what they receive, have been established on a large and successful basis. The Red Cross relief expeditions under the charge of Miss Barton's American agents have penetrated the interior with large supplies of food, clothing and medicine.

Looking for Aid from America.

"But the results thus far are only in the nature of foundations, and the money and effort expended will be practically thrown away unless the work is now immediately and efficiently pushed forward. The people must be assisted with seed, tools and the necessaries of life until the fall harvest, or they will surely perish of starvation in the near future. Immigration is out of the question and trade and agriculture are paralyzed beyond recovery except with foreign aid. There is no hope of aid from the government, which is bankrupt, or from the indifferent Mohammedan population. In view of the need and hopefulness of the relief work, which is practically all in the hands of most trustworthy and competent American citizens, the people of America are confidently looked to for large and immediate gifts."

THE OLYMPIC GAMES.

Athens, April 8.—The second day of the Olympic games saw the continued success of the American representatives. Thomas P. Curtis of the Boston team won the heat in which he contested for the hurdle race. Ellery H. Clark, also of the Boston team, won the broad jump, with Robert Garrett, captain of the Princeton team, second. Thomas E. Burke of the Boston team won the third heat in the 400-metres running race, with H. B. Jamison of the Princeton team second. Robert Garrett of Princeton won the shotput. Arthur Blake of the Boston team was second in the kilometre run.

WILL RECONVENE TO-DAY.

Rhode Island's Legislature in Session at Providence.

Providence, April 8.—The general assembly will reconvene to-day for the transaction of business. Yesterday Gov. Lippitt, Lieut.-Gov. Allen and Secretary of State Bennett were kept busy for a time receiving congratulations on their re-election. The senate came to order shortly after 11 o'clock yesterday and adjourned a few moments afterward after a few unimportant bills had been referred to committees. The house was in session a few moments longer, but transacted no business of importance.

Found Dead in His Room.

Philadelphia, April 8.—The coroner's jury in the case of Warren P. Goodwin, aged 43 years, who was found dead in his room at the Girard house yesterday, rendered a verdict that death had been caused by dropsy of the brain. The body was shipped to his home in Rossville, Ill., later in the day.

Sold Under Foreclosure.

Belvidere, N. J., April 8.—The entire plant of the Oxford Iron & Nail company was sold yesterday afternoon under foreclosure by the Farmers' Loan & Trust company of New York for $70,000 to the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western Railroad company, who hold the first mortgage.

WORK IN CONGRESS.

Postoffice Appropriation Bill Passed by the Senate—The Metric System.

Washington, April 8.—The senate to-day has nothing but routine business to occupy its attention, now that the postoffice appropriation bill has been passed. The principal object of attack in the bill was the section providing for the consolidation of fourth-class postoffices in the vicinity of large towns and cities and the substitution therefor of stations, sub-stations and branch offices. The opponents of the system were successful in having its extension restricted to corporate towns and cities. Several other amendments were also agreed to.

House of Representatives.

In the house to-day a demand will be made for a yea and nay vote on the bill reported from the committee on coinage, weights and measures providing for the adoption of the metric system in government business on Jan. 1, 1898, and making it the legal standard for the whole country on Jan. 1, 1901. The bill providing for a free public library in the District of Columbia is in the hands of a conference committee, the point of disagreement being on the question of expenses—the house providing that they shall be borne by the District alone and the senate that they shall be borne equally by the District and the government.

SENATOR MORGAN'S ILLNESS.

With Rest and Quiet He Will Be About in a Few Days.

Washington, April 8.—Senator Morgan, who has been very ill for several days, is slightly better this morning, but he is not permitted to see visitors. For several days his condition alarmed the members of the family, but it is said this morning that with rest and quiet the senator will be about again within a week or ten days. He was first taken ill with a severe cold. During the past month he has had a great deal of hard committee work to do and this has weakened his general condition. For many days he had Mr. Huntingdon under a severe examination in connection with Central Pacific railroad matters, and in addition to this he has been in constant consultation with the members of the house committee on the proposed bill for the construction of the Nicaragua canal, he being chairman of that committee in the senate.

THE SOUTH LAWRENCE FIGHT.

Interesting Contest on Legal Points Expected—Much Discussion Caused.

Haverhill, Mass., April 8.—It is probable that there will be an interesting contest on legal points over the South Lawrence prize fight. Judge Stone has granted a hearing for Saturday morning on the point of the responsibility of the stakeholder, Duncan McRae, who was not present at the fight. The mayor will appear as counsel for him. It is also claimed by counsel for the men, as no admission was charged, that those who were present were not aiding and abetting a prize fight, and that they took no part in it. The law applies, it is said, to the referee and officials of the match, but not to the spectators unless admission fee is charged. The matter is causing much discussion here and all legal points will be hotly contested. The spectators will make a determined fight against conviction.

THE BOY TRAIN WRECKERS.

Lawyers Think They Will Be Convicted of Second Degree Murder.

Rome, N. Y., April 8.—District Attorney Klock says that the New York Central railroad authorities have not offered to furnish him with eminent counsel in the trial of the Rome boy train wreckers on April 20, as reported by certain papers. The summoning of seventy-five witnesses for the trial is now in progress, and it is understood that one of the principal witnesses for the defense will be Dr. Carlos F. MacDonald of New York, an expert in epilepsy. Mr. Klock says he will conduct the prosecution alone, and is confident of convicting the boys of murder in the first degree. An extra panel of 200 jurors is to be drawn next Monday. The members of the bar here are looking for conviction of murder in the second degree.

AGAINST ROBERT CALLAGHAN.

Judgment for $222,683.90 Issued by New York Supreme Court.

New York, April 8.—In the supreme court yesterday a judgment for $222,683.90 was obtained against Robert Callaghan, a gingham manufacturer of Philadelphia, by Albert Callaghan, trustee for Elizabeth Callaghan. An execution against Callaghan's property to insure satisfaction of the judgment was issued to the sheriff. Two executions, amounting to a total of $229,389 were issued against the property on March 17 by the court of common pleas at Philadelphia.

HUNDREDS REFUSED

Only a Few Will Witness the Hanging of Holmes.

DR. MACDONALD'S REQUEST DENIED

The Murderer Declined To Permit His Emotions To Be Recorded by the Kymographion—Entitled to a Quiet, Peaceful Death.

Philadelphia, April 8.—Hundreds of applications have been made to Sheriff Clement for permission to witness the execution of H. H. Holmes, who is to hang on May 7 for the killing of Benjamin F. Pietzel, but very few will be admitted. Without a doubt the most interesting of these requests is that of Dr. Arthur MacDonald, the head of the psycho-neurological department of the national bureau of education in Washington. Dr. MacDonald has a world-wide reputation as a psycho-neurologist. His principal study has been among criminals. Science and ingenuity have contrived an instrument which is known in scientific laboratories as the kymographion. This is an instrument for recording, in visible lines, human emotion. With this machine the scientist wishes to ascertain the emotions of the convicted murderer just before he goes on the gallows. It is predicted that the result will show whether or not Holmes was at all agitated over his taking off. Dr. MacDonald wrote to Sheriff Clement and the inspectors of the county prison for permission to attend the execution and experiment on the murderer. He explained that it was in the interest of science, and that he was acting in his official capacity. But the authorities have refused to grant the doctor's request. Holmes himself was consulted in the matter and he declined to submit to such examinations. The sheriff says the prisoner is entitled to a quiet, peaceful hanging.

Holmes' Alleged Confession.

The time of the condemned man nowadays is taken up chiefly with efforts to dispose of a statement which he has written, purporting to be a true autobiography, or "confession." There was some lively bidding for this document by New York newspapers. One of them, it is said, has secured it for a large sum, and its publication is expected soon. In fact there are several alleged statements abroad in the land and newspaper readers may look for the simile statements in the prisoner's handwriting and all sorts of alleged interviews with him from now until the day of his execution.

THE CUBAN REBELLION.

Several Rebel Defeats Reported from Spanish Sources.

Havana, April 8.—An official report states that government troops attacked Maceo's forces at La Palma, province of Pinar del Rio, on March 29. The rebels were compelled to retreat. They left behind them thirty-nine dead lying in the streets of the town. Other dead and a number of wounded were carried off by the insurgents. The total losses of the rebels are calculated to have been over ninety. The Spanish loss is given at six volunteers killed and seven regular troops wounded. This is the first news of a battle having been fought at La Palma, and it is impossible to verify the truth of the government's account of the engagement. The alleged rebel loss when compared with the losses sustained by the Spaniards lend an air of improbability to the official report. Gen. Oliver reports the capture of another rebel camp at Santa Rosa. The rebel losses in the engagement were large. The Spanish lost one lieutenant and four soldiers killed and twenty were wounded.

TWO SCHOONERS LOST.

Their Crews, Numbering 100, Suffered Severely from the Intense Cold.

St. Johns, N. F., April 8.—Two schooners were lost in the straits of Bellisle on March 17 while engaged in the seal fishery in the gulf of St. Lawrence. They had combined crews of one hundred persons, all of whom suffered severely from the intense cold and exposure which they underwent for several nights. A number of the men were badly frostbitten. They were rescued and brought home by another vessel. The crews lost everything. No further news has been received from the sealing steamers.

Kassala and Agordat Evacuated.

Rome, April 8.—A dispatch from Massowah, dated April 5, says that on Friday last Col. Stovani attacked the Dervish entrenchments in the vicinity. He won a partial success and proposed to renew the attack on Saturday, but Gen. Baldissera, the commander-in-chief, ordered him to make no further attack and instructed him to evacuate Kassala and Agordat. These orders have been complied with.

CHICAGO'S ELECTION

Knives and Pistols Figured in It Prominently.

SEVERAL VERY SERIOUS OUTBREAKS

Two Men Severely Injured—Numerous Riot Calls Turned In and Many of the Disorderly Poll Workers Placed Under Arrest.

Chicago, April 8.—During the progress of the municipal elections yesterday several affrays occurred. Blood was shed in the first ward and the police were called on to quell several incipient riots at the polling places among the followers of the rival aldermanic candidates. The levee section of the ward also provided its usual quota of lesser brawls, with fists, rocks and clubs as weapons and whiskey as the accessory in every case. There were disturbances among the Italians of the nineteenth ward. Fist fights and ejections of tresspassers from the polling places by the police were reported in the second, eighteenth and twenty-second wards. The police quickly restored order whenever an outbreak occurred. The open violation of the law against saloons selling liquor during the voting hours made most of the trouble for the police.

A Serious Outbreak.

The most serious outbreak occurred in the levee district near the polling place at 400 Dearborn street. Joseph Grogan, a clerk for the Chicago & Eastern Illinois railroad, who was not in any way connected with the rioters, was shot in the leg and the bones were so shattered that amputation may be necessary. He was going to his office when a gang of colored and white men engaged in a fight and half a thousand of the same class of men were quickly on the spot. An unknown colored man drew a revolver and fired six bullets into the mob, one of them striking Grogan, who fell to the sidewalk. The fighters and the man who used the gun were pursued by officers but all escaped. At the same place the different factions came in conflict with fists and revolvers, one man receiving several blows with a weapon.

A Riot Call Turned In.

A riot call was turned in by the officers on duty and numerous arrests were made. Close upon this disturbance came another in the same part of the ward. Sol Van Praag, a deputy United States marshal, who is a character in the ward, was attacked by a gang of heelers and the crowd rushed to the rescue, precipitating a free fight, in which shots were fired. No one was hit and the police captured two of the shooters. The first blood shed was just after the opening of the polls at 192 Washington street, first ward. William Martin shot William Hickey in the arm and the trouble led to a small riot. The police arrested Hickey and a gang of imported sluggers tried to rescue him. The prisoner was being taken away when a riot call brought a force of detectives from the city hall and the mob was beaten back.

AHLWARDT FINED.

The Anti-Semitic Lecturer Pays $100 for Being a Public Nuisance.

Hoboken, N. J., April 8.—Ahlwardt, the German anti-Semitic lecturer, was fined $100 yesterday on the charge of being a public nuisance. He was then held in $300 bail for threatening to shoot a man named Aronsburg. Ahlwardt swore out a warrant for Aronsburg on the charge of perjury, and the latter was placed under $250 bail. Both are held for the grand jury.

ESTHER CLEVELAND ILL.

A Case of Measles Causes Great Excitement at the White House.

Washington, April 8.—President Cleveland and private Secretary Thurber are quarantined at the White House. Mrs. Cleveland and her children are quarantined at Woodley and Mrs. Thurber and her little ones are quarantined at their house on I street. All this and a postponement of a cabinet meeting in addition is the result of the discovery in the White House that little Esther Cleveland, the president's second daughter, who is two and a half years old, had developed symptoms of measles. Immediately there was great excitement throughout the mansion. The president was informed and he sent telegrams to all the cabinet members saying that there would be no meeting yesterday. Miss Bathmann, the teacher of the White House kindergarten, was sent posthaste to Woodley, the president's country place, and hurried preparations were made for taking Esther and her sisters there. Shortly afterwards the sick child was sent to Woodley in a closed carriage, accompanied in that and another vehicle by her mother, nurses and sisters.

THE BELLARDEN BEACHED.

A Hole Stove in Her Side by the Friesland in a Collision.

Quarantine, S. I., April 8.—The British steamer Bellarden of the Lamport & Holt line, while outward bound last night, collided off Owl's Head buoy with the Belgian steamer Friesland, which was just leaving Quarantine for her pier. The Bellarden at once began to fill and the pilot headed for the Staten Island shore and beached his boat between the Clifton Ferry landing and the Merritt Wrecking company's dock. At the time of grounding the Bellarden had fourteen feet of water in her hold. The Friesland was not injured and proceeded to her dock. The Bellarden was struck a glancing blow on the port side abaft the midships house.

FOR THE COLLEGE BOAT RACE.

Saratoga Lake Surveyed and a Course Marked Out.

Saratoga, N. Y., April 8.—The citizens' athletic committee, anticipating that the Harvard-Columbia-Cornell-University of Pennsylvania boat race may be rowed on Saratoga lake, have had a course surveyed. The start will be made from a point just north of the White Sulphur Spring hotel at the south end of the lake and the finishing line will be opposite Barrett's at the north end. Four lanes were chained out, each 100 feet wide. The first three miles of the course are buoyed every half mile, and the fourth mile at every quarter. The shallowest water found was thirty feet and the deepest ninety-eight feet.

WILL BE SENTENCED FRIDAY.

Graves, Collins, Quirk and Hyde To Know Their Fate Then.

Buffalo, April 8.—Sentence will be passed Friday afternoon upon Capt. Graves, who yesterday pleaded guilty to manslaughter in the first degree, and Irving Collins and John Quirk, who withdrew than pleir of not guilty of murder in the first degree and entered a plea of guilty to manslaughter in the second degree. Capt. Hyde, indicted with the others for participation in the Tonawanda riots, was convicted last Wednesday of murder in the second degree, and he also will be sentenced Friday.

CHAPMAN DECISION UPHELD.

The Recalcitrant Sugar Trust Witness Must Serve His Sentence.

Washington, April 8.—The court of appeals has affirmed the decision of the lower court in the case of Elverton R. Chapman, the recalcitrant witness before the senate committe which investigated the sugar trust. The lower court sentenced Chapman to one hundred dollars' fine and thirty days' imprisonment. It is believed that no further appeal can be taken. Mr. Chapman is now out on bail but will immediately surrender.

ALMOST INEVITABLE

General Strike of Street Railway Employes Imminent.

ONLY EXTREME TACT CAN AVERT IT

The Men Will Demand Better Wages, Fewer Hours and Recognition of Their Unions—Labor Agitators at Work. New York Police Prepared.

Boston, April 8.—Reports from various cities of the eastern and middle states indicate that there is great uneasiness among the men employed by the street railroad companies. In some of the dispatches a strike is predicted. Labor agitators have for some time been among the men endeavoring to organize them into unions. What the particular grievance is, is not known, but it is thought that the strikes, if they do occur, will be for better wages, shorter hours and the recognition of the unions to which they belong. From the dispatches received here it seems that a general strike on the lines in some of the principal cities of the north is almost inevitable, and, if the trouble is averted, it will be, from the present outlook, only through the exercise of extreme tact and the making of concessions by both employers and employes.

POLICE IN RESERVE.

New York's Chief Preparing for Railroad Strike Troubles.

New York, April 8.—President W. D. Mahon of the Amalgamated Association of Street Railway employes of America has sent a letter to President Vreeland of the Metropolitan Street Railway company, requesting a conference in the hope of bringing about a settlement of the difficulty existing between the company and the association over the discharge of a number of gripman and conductors, some of whom are members of the association. Chief Conlin has all the police in reserve at the various station houses in consequence of the threatened strike on the cable road. Mr. Conlin says that he is holding the reserve as a precautionary measure. He does not anticipate any trouble, but will be fully prepared if there is any. In his reply to President Mahon's letter, Mr. Vreeland says that there is no contention between the association which Mr. Mahon represents and the railroad company, that the men were discharged for violating rules of the company and that he finds himself unable to comply with Mr. Mahon's request for a conference.

THE STORY SCOUTED.

Pennsylvania Railroad Officials Do Not Think the Employes Are Organizing.

Philadelphia, April 8.—While not positively denying the story of their men organizing, the officials of the Pennsylvania Railroad company have no knowledge of any such movement among their employes. In the office of General Manager Prevost all knowledge of any such combination was denied outright and the suggestion was scouted as highly improbable, although, of course, within the range of possibility. Vice-President Pugh was equally positive in asserting that such a movement was highly unlikely. "Our men have had little to do with the American Railway union," he said, "and I hardly think they are now being recruited into the union, especially as an aid to the street railway men in the event of a possible strike or future trouble of any sort. We have heard nothing of the kind, though it is not to be expected that they would come to us with the information should they really contemplate allying themselves with the Amalgamated Association of Street Railway Employes, I still think we should have some inkling of such a movement, involving, as it does, such diversified interests.

Chancellor McGill yesterday afternoon reappointed Vice-Chancellor Pitney, whose present term will expire tomorrow.

When Elizabeth has a fall of thirteen inches of snow at this time of the year, there is no use of denying that winter is lingering in the lap of spring, and doing a good deal of hugging, too.

Two important city notices are published in the advertising columns of The Press today. One refers to the appointment of Commissioners of Assessments for the sewerage system by Mayor Gilbert, and the other to the raising of the annual city budget.

There is much quiet speculation among the New Jersey Congressmen as to the probable decision of the Republican Congressional convention which will be held in Trenton on April 16th, in the question of endorsing one or any of the prominent Presidental possibilities. One month ago the drift of the sentiment seemed to be in favor of Speaker Reed, but since the McKinleyites have developed such apparent strength there is a disposition on the part of the members to make but few observations upon the probable action of the State convention. It is thought that the wiser course will be for the delegates to be sent without instructions, but the mandate of the "bosses" will doubtless be obeyed, and it is expected that whatever the Republican leaders decide upon will be rushed through without opposition.

WHERE AND WHAT ARE THEY DOING

The Watchung Avenue Commissioners Should Get a Hustle On.

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—It is said on good authority that the ostrich when wishing to hide from his pursuers burries his head in the sand and imagines that he is entirely hidden from sight. Alas, poor bird, he is fooling himself and will soon be caught. Not so foolish as this proud bird is the action of some human bipeds. They not only keep their official heads out of sight but neither they or their actions are visible. Really now, what is the matter with the commissions appointed, on behalf of the city, to open Watchung avenue? Has anyone seen them? Why do they not report and draw their pay? These are hard times and I should think they would want to make their stipend as quickly as possible. I understand that the county freeholders make their annual appropriations for bridges at the next meeting of the board. Will the city and borough be in shape to ask of the two boards that a good substantial bridge be built this summer, or will we have to wait another year? Let our commissioners get a move on them or resign.

WINTER IN THE LAP OF SPRING.

Elizabeth Seems to Have Been the Centre of a Hard Storm.

The greatest snowstorm ever known in Elizabeth at this time of the year raged there yesterday when thirteen inches of snow fell on the level.

The peculiarity of the storm was that it seemed to be rather local in its character. When it was snowing the hardest, at 10 a. m. there, the sun was shining brightly at Rahway, six miles south and only a few scattered flakes were falling. The snow belt did not at noon extend further south of there than Linden.

In this city there was occasional flurries of snow, but it melted as fast as it fell.

THEATRICAL.

Last night in Music Hall the Waite company again proved their worth as good actors in the performance of Milton Noble's "From Sire to Son." The piece is a sterling melo-drama, combining all the necessary dramatic elements to give it a favorable reception with a popular priced audience. Billy Barbour, as Alfred Armitage, in the leading role, acted the part of the repentant gambler, who, from the time he reformed, was made the object of persecution and innumerable attacks by his erstwhile partner, with an earnest and sentimental spirit. W. A. Moriarty, as the villain, was a scheming scoundrel, whose subtle art of dominating over and fastening for the time being his wrongs on others, was aggravating, but naturally enough he got his just deserts in the last act. The character was an unsympathetic one with the audience, but the impersonator carried it through with ability. D. H. Woods had a character that he was eminently fitted for in physique—that of a sheriff of a mining camp—and his gruff, but honest endeavor, to let no one escape who was guilty, pleased the audience greatly. The comedy parts were successfully carried out by Wm. H Case and Cameron Clemens. In the feminine roles, Miss Catherine Crego was in the lead, and and in the dual character of a wife and daughter, she acted so unaffectedly that she became a favorite with the ladies of the audience. Henrietta St. Felix was fascinating and vivacious in the leading juvenile, and her specialties were appreciated. The other characters were well-assumed.

—The contestants of the Peter Wooden will have decided, it is understood, to take the case to a higher court.

—A business meeting of the Women's Temperance Aid Society will be held in Reform Hall tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock.

—Rev. Mr. Blewitt, of New York, representing the foreign missionary interests of the Christian Endeavor society, addressed the Warren Chapel Christian Endeavor society last evening.

—The Parliamentary Club will meet tomorrow morning, and each member will bring an egg with a Scriptural text printed thereon. The eggs will afterwards be given to the needy poor.

—In placing lawyer Nelson Runyon's safe in his new offices over J. P. Laire's store on Front street this morning, it was found necessary to take out a window. It could not be taken up the stairs.

—Rev. M. P. Kirkpatrick will speak about the work in Burmah in the Park Avenue Baptist church this evening at 8 o'clock. All interested in the evangelization of this vast country are promised a rare treat.

—The art exhibition of the Camera Club will open tomorrow in their rooms in the Babcock building. The exhibits are varied and valuable and will prove very interesting to the people who attend the event.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the eustachian tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube be restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give one hundred dollars for any case of deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

The estate funds showed considerable gain, the balance on hand this year being $438.46 against $17.56 of last year. An estimate from the trustees gave the estimated amount of the usual deficit as about $200 less than for the past year. The total assets were reported to be $58,105 81. Five of the six trustees were re-elected. They were F. W. Westcott, Norman Dunn, Charles N. Flanders James D. Cleaver, A. D. Beacon, G. E. Hall. The new trustee was William Banks. FANWOOD.

For some time past that section of Fanwood Township situated in and around Willow Grove, have been very much dissatisfied with the treatment received at the hands of the Township Committee. They have desired more lights, more improvements and better fire protection. The committee have not given this section all the attention it should, hence the residents in that locality have petitioned the committee to set off their portion into a street lighting district, under the law of 1894, with the suppliments and amendments thereto. In the meantime a fire company has been organized for protection. The citizens feel much incensed over the indifference of the Township Committee, and they are determined to secure their rights if possible. Just what will be the termination of their efforts is at present hard to tell.

KILLED AT HIS BRIDE'S SIDE.

Shocking Accident at a Railway Station in Elizabeth This Morning.

Daniel McGinlay, thirty-two years old, of Elizabethport, who was married this morning at Elizabeth, was almost instantly killed less than half an hour later, at the passenger station of the Pennsylvania Railroad, while preparing to start on a wedding trip, by an east-bound passenger train; his bride, who was Miss Kate Galligan, of Elizabeth, was at his side and barely escaped. They were married at eight o'clock, by Father Gessner, of St. Patrick's church, in the presence of a large number of friends and were driven uptown to the station in a coach gaily decorated with white satin.

EARLY INTELLIGENCE.

—George E. Rogers will furnish the music at Miss Sandford's reception tomorrow evening and at the Park club Friday evening.

—M. B. Kirkpatrick, of the Burmah Mission, will again make an address in the Park Avenue Baptist church. He will speak this evening.

—The sale of wet goods at White's Monday and yesterday was the most successful sale they have ever had. At times during the day it was about impossible to get near the counters. They sold over ten thousand yards.

—A narrow escape from a serious fire occurred Monday night at A. D. Thompson's real estate office on North avenue. The stove used to heat the office stands on a small base, and in some manner a portion of the base broke during the night, allowing the stove to fall partially over. It was discovered by the man at the office and thus a fire was prevented.

The friends of J. S. King, insurance agent, will be glad to know that he is convalescent and able to receive callers.

THE WOMAN OF FASHION.

She Excludes Men from Gatherings and Dresses as She Pleases.

A Maiden's Love for Black—Keynote of the Styles for the Coming Season—New Things in Neckwear—Hints About Fans and Veils.

[COPYRIGHT, 1896.]

Fashionable women show great wisdom in excluding men from their lenten luncheons and readings for the two principal objects of both these functions are to give the ladies an opportunity to get acquainted with one another and to improve their minds—and how is a woman to improve her mind or have any interest in another woman when there is a man around? There is no denying the fact that masculine influence is distracting, even to those who profess not to be susceptible to it—especially in the matter of mind culture. This is due in a great measure to the satirical literature that has emanated from the masculine pen, purporting to be a true account of the proceedings of certain women's clubs. Women do not like to be criticised, and notwithstanding their present stage of advancement, they are still a little sensitive about having men listen to their efforts in the literary or forensic line. It takes a courageous woman to address a masculine or even a mixed audience, so, for the benefit of the timid ones, the clubs and luncheons flourish without the sunshine of man's presence, and the women incidentally learn a little something.

One would expect very simple costumes at these gatherings of women only, and with the young, unmarried ladies this is the case; but the married ones appear at their best, for Mrs. de Jessups "doesn't want that gossipy Mrs. Brown-Jones to go home and tell her husband 'what a frump Mrs. de Jessups looked at the tea to-day.'"

SEEN AT AN AFTERNOON TEA.

At the readings, there is usually a man in the capacity of instructor, but that is a different matter, and he is very much in the minority, anyway. The young ladies continue to dress very simply in spite of him.

I have even seen the young lady who acted as hostess dressed in plain black India silk. I wonder why very young women are so fond of black. Women of "uncertain age" shun it as they would the plague, but young girls of 17 or 18 have a perfect passion for it. The India silk at the tea was made with a simple, loose blouse and skirt, high stock, and bishop sleeves. No one could reproach the wearer of such a gown for too much gayety in the penitential season. Indeed, with this particular young woman it was a fad to wear no colors but black and violet in lent. I saw her afterwards on the street wearing a violet hat with her black gown, a combination of which suggested some kind of second or third mourning.

One of the guests at the tea wore a gown of the new spring goods that is speckled—pepper and salt fashion. It was trimmed with velvet and had a jacket with pointed fronts and short godet back. The points on each side were formed of velvet which was laid in plaits starting from the shoulder. Pendants of jet hanging from the velvet yoke fell over the loose front of soft silk. Velvet straps starting from the stock radiated out over the tops of the sleeves. This costume is in the foreground of the picture, and if you examine it carefully you will find nearly all the elements of the coming season's styles. There is the jacket effect with edges on each side of the front, the coat back, the cuff and the blouse front. The hat is also an index of coming fashions. The brim projects over the face in front and is turned up in the back. The soft, velvet crown we are familiar with on the midwinter hats. There is a suspicion of refurbished headgear about some of the hats that appear on the street. Those hats that flared up so high in front in the early part of the winter can be worn reversed. Trimming, if high, is set on the left of the front, or at the back. The broad effect from side to side will be continued for awhile.

High collars are bigger than ever, if such a thing is possible. The Elizabethan collar seen in the picture with loops inside of it next the hair is a fair sample of some that will be worn. Some of the ribbon stocks have a fluting or frill of ribbon sewed on the upper edge to stand up around the face.

The latest thing in linen collars is a band that is pinned inside the neck band with a pointed flounce at the top to stand out almost straight. These points are bordered with pink tucks.

These turn-down or turn-out collars are great favorites with girls who wear black dresses. Some of the turn-down collars have rows of valenciennes insertion running around, with an edging of lace.

None of the new lace collarettes hang loose or flaring in front. Ordinary collars are split in front, V shape, making two points, edged with embroidery or lace, whatever the trimming happens to be. More elaborate collarettes are made to fit the figure in front. Some have a yoke with two points reaching just below the bust, and two lace flounces standing out over the shoulders.

A white Swiss collarette is made yoke-shape with alternate strips of fine tucks and insertion and edged with lace. On the shoulders is a strip of Swiss ornamented with a row of tiny spherical pearl buttons.

The empire fan is still the favorite, though it is rivaled by those very large ones composed of 15 or 20 beautiful ostrich feathers. The fan that is carried by the swellest people is a double one; that is, there are sticks set in the body of the fan, making a sort of open work stripe through the middle.

Veils have come to be a necessary addition to one's custume. Black and white are the only correct colors, though one does see a brown chiffon veil once in awhile. Chiffon veils are not popular, however, especially in black, for it makes the face look very dark. Indeed, there is a story of a woman reporter who wore one into the office when she brought in her report of a negro mass-meeting, and the next day the paper came out with a column about the "colored newspaper woman." Veils with large dots, all black or white on black are for ordinary wear. Lace edged veiling is sold by the yard. A pretty woven veil has tiny black flowers on a white ground. Some of the black veils have fancy edges down in points with a border of white valenciennes. A new veil has the valenciennes edge gathered on full.

The favorite flowers on the spring hats will be violets, button roses, geraniums and lilacs.

Plaid and checked silks trimmed with coarse lace and fancy buttons will be pretty street dresses next summer, but that is still a long way off and one really should not broach such frivolous topics at this unseasonable hour.

To Revolutionize Can Making.

One of the pioneer fruit-canners of California has just perfected an invention that will revolutionize the can-making industry. His machine can be operated by a child. It is fed at one end by sheets of tin of the proper size, and it turns out at the other end 64 cans of any size every minute. At this rate the machine will produce 38,400 cans in ten hours. All the joining of seams and soldering are done by parts of the machine. With a number of these machines one factory would be able to supply all the cans used on that coast for fruit, vegetables and salmon at one tenth of the present cost.

out in the rain

A good drenching in a cold rain is often the beginning of consumption. Yet no one claims that the germs of this disease exist in the rainwater. Then how was this brought about? The exposure was followed by a cold; the vitality was lowered; the cough continued for some weeks; the throat and lungs became congested; and thus all the conditions were favorable for the consumption germs.

Scott's Emulsion

of Cod-liver Oil, with Hypophosphites, does not directly attack these germs and kill them. But it does tone up the whole system and restores the body to health before serious harm is done. The germs of consumption thrive best when the system is weakened and the throat and lungs congested. Do not delay until it is too late, but treat your cough early. Cod-liver oil and the hypophosphites, in the form of Scott's Emulsion, are the very best remedies.

COPYRIGHT, 1894, BY BRET HARTE.

He turned his blazing eyes upon her. "If you were a man!" he began, passionately, then stopped.

"No! I am a woman and must fight in a woman's way," she interrupted, bitterly. "I entreat, I implore, I wheedle, I flatter, I fawn, I lie! I creep where you stand upright, and pass through doors to which you would not bow. You wear the blazon of honor on your shoulder. I hide mine in a slave's gown. And yet I have worked and striven and suffered! Listen, Clarence—" her voice again sank to its appealing minor. "I know what you men call 'honor'—which makes you cling to a merely spoken word and an empty oath. Well, let that pass! I am weary; I have done my share of this work, you have done yours. Let us both fly; let us leave the fight to those who shall come after us and let us go together to some distant land where the sounds of these guns or the blood of our brothers no longer cry out to us for vengeance! There are those living there—I have met them, Clarence—" she went on, hurriedly, "who think it wrong to lift up fratricidal hands in the struggle, yet who cannot live under the northern yoke. They are—" her voice hesitated, "good men and women—they are respected—they are—"

"Recreants and slaves, before whom you, spy, as you are, stand a queen!" broke in Brant, passionately. He stopped and turned back toward the window. After a pause he came back again toward the bed, paused again, and then said in a lower voice: "Four years ago, Alice, in the patio of our house at Robles, I might have listened to this proposal, and, I tremble to think, I might have accepted it. I loved you; I was as weak, as se fish, as unreflecting, my life as purposeless, but for you, as the creatures you speak of. But give me now at least the credit of a devotion to my cause equal to your own, which I have never denied you. For the night that you left me I awoke to a sense of my own worthlessness and degradation—perhaps I have even to thank you for this awakening—and I realize the bitter truth. But that night I found my true vocation, my purpose, my manhood—"

A bitter laugh came from the pillow on which she had languidly thrown herself. "I believe I left you with Mrs. Hooker—spare me the details."

The blood rushed to Brant's face, and then receded as suddenly.

"You left me with Capt. Pinkney, who had tempted you, and whom I killed!" he said, furiously.

They were both staring at each other. Suddenly he said: "Hush!" and sprang towards the door, as the sound of hurried footsteps echoed along the passage. But he was too late; it was thrown open to the officer of the guard who appeared standing on the threshhold.

"Two confederate officers arrested hovering around our pickets. They demand to see you."

Before Brant could interpose two men, in riding cloaks of confederate gray, stepped into the room with a jaunty and self-confident air.

"Not demand, general," said the foremost, a tall, distinguished-looking man, lifting his hand with a graceful deprecating air. "In fact, too sorry to bother you with an affair of no importance except to ourselves. A bit of after-dinner bravado brought us in contact with your pickets, and of course we had to take the consequences. Served us right, and we were lucky not to have got a bullet through us. Gad! I'm afraid my men would have been less discreet! I am Col. Lagrange, of the Fifth Tennessee; my young friend here is Capt. Faulkner, of the First Kentucky. Some excuse for a youngster like him—none for me! I—"

He stopped, for his eyes suddenly fell upon the bed and its occupant. Both he and his companion started. But to the natural unaffected dismay of gentlemen who had unwittingly intruded upon a lady's bedchamber, Brant's quick eye saw a more disastrous concern superadded. Col. Lagrange was quick to recover himself, as they both removed their caps.

"A thousand pardons," he said, hurriedly, stepping backwards to the door. "But I hardly need say to a fellow-officer, general, that we had no idea of making so gross an intrusion! We heard some cock-and-bull story of your being occupied with an escaped or escaping nigger—or we should never have forced ourselves upon you."

Brant glanced quickly at his wife. Her face had apparently become rigid on the entrance of the two men; her eyes were coldly fixed upon the ceiling. He bowed formally, and with a wave of his hand toward the door, said:

"I will hear your story below, gentlemen."

He followed them from the room, stopped to quietly turn the key in the lock, and then motioned them to precede him down the staircase.

CHAPTER VII.

Not a word was exchanged till they had reached the lower landing and Brant's private room. Dismissing his subaltern and orderly with a sign Brant turned toward his prisoners. The jaunty ease, but not the self-possession, had gone from Lagrange's face; the eyes of Capt. Faulkner were fixed on his older companion with a half humorous look of perplexity.

"I am afraid I can only repeat, general, that our foolhardy freak has put us in collision with your sentries," said Lagrange with a slight hauteur that replaced his former jauntiness; "and we were very properly made prisoners. If you will accept my parole I have no doubt our commander will proceed to exchange a couple of gallant fellows of yours, whom I have had the honor of meeting within our own lines, whom you must miss probably more than I fear our superiors miss us."

"Whatever brought you here, gentlemen," said Brant, dryly. "I am glad for your skaes that you are in uniform, although it does not, unfortunately, relieve me of an unpleasant duty."

"I don't think I understand you," returned Lagrange, coldly.

"If you had not been in uniform you would probably have been shot down as spies, without the trouble of capture," said Brant, quietly.

"Do you mean to imply, sir—" began Lagrange, sternly.

"I mean to say that the existence of a confederate spy between this camp and the division headquarters is sufficiently well known to us to justify the strongest action."

There was no sound from within.

"And pray, how can that affect us?" said Lagrange, haughtily.

"I need not inform so old a soldier as Col. Lagrange that the aiding, abetting, and even receiving information from a spy or traitor within one's lines is an equally dangerous service."

"Perhaps you would like to satisfy yourself, general," said Col. Lagrange, with an ironical laugh. "Pray do not hesitate on account of our uniform! Search us if you like."

"Not on entering my lines, colonel," replied Brant, with quiet significance.

Lagrange's cheek flushed. But he recovered himself quickly, and with a formal bow, said: "You will then perhaps let me know your pleasure?"

"My duty, colonel, is to keep you both close prisoners here until I have an opportunity to forward you to the division commander with a report of the circumstances of your arrest. That I propose to do. How soon I may have that opportunity—or if I am ever to have it—" continued Brant, fixing his clear eyes significantly on Lagrange, "depends upon the chances of war, which you probably understand as well as I do."

"We should never think of making any calculation on the action of an officer of such infinite resources as Gen. Brant," said Lagrange, politely.

"You will no doubt have an opportunity of stating your own case to the division commander," continued Brant, with an unmoved face. "And," he continued, turning for the first time to Capt. Faulkner, "when you tell the commander what I believe to be the fact—from your name and resemblance—that you are a relation of the young lady who for the last three weeks has been an inmate of this house under a pass from Washington—you will, I have no doubt, favorably explain your own propinquity to my lines."

"My sister, Tillie," said the young officer, impulsively. "But she is no longer here. She passed through the lines back to Washington yesterday. No," he added, with a light laugh, "I'm afraid that excuse won't count for to-day."

A sudden frown upon the face of the elder officer, added to the perfect ingenuousness of Faulkner's speech, satisfied Brant that he had not only elicited the truth, but that Miss Faulkner had been successful! Nor did he doubt that his suggestion that her relationship to the young officer would incline the division commander to look leniently upon his fault—and he felt a singular satisfaction in thus being able to serve her. Of the real object of the two men before him he was convinced; they were "the friends" of his wife who were waiting for her outside the lines! Chance alone had saved her from being arrested with them, with the consequent exposure of her treachery before his own men—who as yet had no proof of her guilt, nor any suspicion of her actual identity. Nor was his own chance of conveying her with safety beyond his lines affected by this; the prisoners dare not reveal what they knew of her, and it was with a grim triumph that he thought of compassing her escape without their aid. Nothing of this, however, was visible in his face, which the younger man watched with a kind of boyish curiosity, while Col. Lagrange regarded the ceiling with a politely-repressed yawn. "I regret," concluded Brant, as he summoned the officer of the guard, "that I shall have to deprive you of each other's company during the time that you are here—but I shall see that you, separately, want for nothing in your confinement."

"If this is with a view to separate interrogatory, general, I can retire now," said Lagrange, rising with ironical politeness.

"I believe I have all the information I require," returned Brant, with undisturbed composure. Giving the necessary orders to his subaltern, he acknowledged with equal calm the formal salutes of the two prisoners as they were led away and returned quickly to his bedroom above. He paused instinctively for a moment before the closed door and listened. There was no sound from within. He unlocked the door and opened it.

So quiet was the interior that for an instant, without glancing at the bed, he cast a quick look at the window, which, till then, he had forgotten, and which he remembered gave egress upon the veranda roof. But it was still closed, and as he approached the bed he saw his wife still lying there in the attitude in which he had left her. But her eyes were ringed and slightly filmed, as if with recent tears.

It was, perhaps, this circumstance that softened his voice, still harsh with command, as he said:

"I suppose you know those two men?"

"Yes."

"And that I have put it out of their power to help you?"

"I do."

There was something so strangely submissive in her voice that he again looked suspiciously at her. But he was shocked to see that she was quite pale now, and that the fire had gone out of her dark eyes.

"Then I may tell you my own—and the only—plan to save you. But first we must find this mulatto woman who has acted as your double."

"She is here."

"Here?"

"Yes."

"How do you know it?" he asked, in quick suspicion.

"She was not to leave this place until she knew I was safe within our lines. I have some friends who are faithful to me." After a pause she added: "She has been already."

He looked at her, startled. "Impossible—I—"

"You locked the door. Yes, but she has a second key. And even if she had not there is another entrance from that closet. You do not know this house; you have been here two weeks; I spent two years of my life, as a girl, in this room."

An indescribable sensation came over him; he remembered how he had felt when he first occupied it; this was followed by a keen sense of shame on reflecting that he had been, ever since, but a helpless puppet in the power of his enemies, and that she could have escaped if she would, even now.

"Perhaps," he said, grimly, "you have already arranged your plans."

She looked at him with a singular reproachfulness even in her submission. "I have only told her to be ready to change clothes with me and help me color my face and hands at the time appointed. I have left the rest to you."

"Then this is my plan. I have changed only a detail. You and she must both leave this house at the same time, by different exits, and one of them must be private—and unknown to my men. Do you know of such a one?"

"Yes," she said, "beside the negro quarter."

"Good," he replied. "That will be your way out. She will leave here publicly, through the quarters, armed with a pass from me. She will be overhauled and challenged by the first sentry, near the guard house, below the wall. She will be subjected to some delay and scrutiny, which she will, however, be able to pass better than you would. This will create the momentary diversion that we require. In the meantime, you will have left the house by the wing, and you will then keep in the shadow of the hedge until you can drop down along the run, where it empties into the swamp. That," he continued, fixing his keen eyes upon her, "is the weak point in the position of this place, that is neither overlooked nor defended. But, perhaps," he added again, grimly, "you already know it?"

"It is the marsh where the flowers grow, near the path where you met Miss Faulkner. I had crossed the marsh to give her a letter," she said, slowly.

A bitter smile came over Brant's face, but passed as quickly.

"Enough," he said, quietly, "I will meet you beside the run and cross the marsh with you until you are within hailing distance of your lines. I will be in plain clothes, Alice," he went on, slowly, "for it will not be the commander of this force who accompanies you, but your husband, and, without disgracing his uniform, he will at least be your equal, for the instant he passes his own lines, in disguise, he will become like you, a spy, and amenable to its penalties."

Her eyes seemed suddenly to leap up to his with that strange look of awakening and enthusiasm which he had noted before. And in its complete prepossession of all her instincts she rose from the bed unheeding her bared arms and shoulders and loosened hair, and stood upright before him. For an instant husband and wife stood beside each other as unreservedly as in the nuptial chamber of Robles.

VARIOUS SPORTS.

The exhibition of gymnasium work and basket ball by the business men's class at the Y. M. C. A., which was to be held on Thursday evening, has been postponed until some later date.

Speaking of scholastic athletics, the N. Y. Sun says: "To Harry Cornish, of the New Manhattan Athletic Club, more than any other man, is due the credit for the schoolboy movement in athletics. Today it is one of the most promising branches in American athletics and it deserves all the encouragement it can get."

The New Manhattan Athletic Club has made a generous bid for the national interscholastic championships. As the meet will probably be run at a loss, the schoolboys are thinking very seriously of accepting the offer, although they have wanted to run on the same lines as those employed by the Intercollegiate Association in conducting their annual meet.

WHIST.

The "Big Four Whist team of the Park Club met the North End Whist team, of Newark, last evening, in a contest for the State whist trophy. The game was played here and the visitors captured the trophy by two points. The teams were: Parks, Messrs. McCutchen, Townsend, Rogers and Howell; Newarks, Messrs. Eagle, Cameron, Reynolds and Smith.

STRIKES AND SPARES.

The individual bowling record for April at the Park Club alleys was broken last Saturday night by Fred P. Taylor, who rolled 239. The former record was 224, made by John Drayton several days before.

—A special meeting of the Union County Country Club will be held Saturday evening, when some financial matters will come before the club and an amendment to the constitution discussed.

Disillusionment.

New Wife—But it is not that, mamma; I don't mind his finding fault with my cooking. But to think that love, which I supposed was a sentiment of the heart, is only an affair of the stomach!—Boston Transcript.

What Did He Mean?

"You do not love me as you did before we were married," she complained.

"My darling," he answered, "why, even the teeth in your mouth are dear to me." And in view of the fact that he had that very morning paid a dentist bill of $48 for her, it could not be said that he prevaricated. — N. Y. World.

DOCTORS WISH TO MAKE CONTRACTS

Discussion of the Question of Agreements with Fraternal Orders.

At a recent meeting of the Union County Medical Society in Elizabeth there was interesting debate on the motion of Dr. Victor Mearlag to rescind the section of the society's by-laws forbidding under penalty of forfeiture of membership any physician from attending under contract or agreement the members of a fraternal society. This rule, which was passed three years ago, has recently been revived by some of the younger physicians, who, apparently dismayed at the larger amount of practice thus bestowed on the older practitioners, took this means to stop it. As told in The Press two months ago, the revival threatened to disrupt the society.

After an extended discussion of the question yesterday, during which somewhat personal reflections were passed, the society decided by a vote of 30 to 7 to rescind the clause. It was afterward decided to refer the question to the New Jersey State Medical Society. The protesting physicians do not doubt that their action in rescinding this restriction will be agreed to by the State body, as the contract or agreement system is in use throughout the state. The final decision will be important, as it concerns many thousand members of fraternal orders throughout the state that furnish medical attendance to members.

DAVID BODINE TAKES A LIFE PART NER

The North Plainfielder Wedded a Pennsylvania Girl Yesterday.

The marriage of Miss Anna Sanger, of Scott, Pa., and David Bodine, of North Plainfield, was celebrated at the home of the bride yesterday morning at eleven o'clock. Rev. I. N. Moorhead, of Mt. Carmel, Pa., officiated. Only the relatives and near friends of the contracting parties were present. The bridemaid was Miss Gertrude Sanger, sister of the bride, and the best man was Lambert Bodine, brother of the groom. Both the bride and bridemaid were gowned in white Japanese silk, while the groom and best man were attired in the conventional black. A reception followed the ceremony after which supper was served. Mr. and Mrs. Bodine were the recipients of many useful and ornamental presents.

They arrived in this city last evening about nine o'clock, and will reside on Somerset street, corner of Linden avenue, from May first.

A. M. Dunham's Funeral.

The funeral of Augustus M. Dunham was held yesterday afternoon at 2:45 from the home of his son, M. M. Dunham, 514 Arlington avenue, and was very largely attended. Dr. Lewis conducted the services and spoke highly of the decedent. His words brought comfort and consolation to the bereaved ones in their hour of affliction. Dr. Livermore, who was to have been present, sent word that it would be impossible as he was away and could not get back in time. The pall-bearers, nephews of the departed, were F. A. Dunham, Charles Dunham, O. M. Dunham, Frederick Dunham, of Plainfield; David Dunn, of Brooklyn, and Allen Dunn, of Elizabeth. Interment was in the Seventh Day Baptist cemetery.

Country Club Election.

The following Board of Governors has been nominated at the Union County Country Club, to be voted upon at the annual meeting: C. J. Fisk, F. T. Baker, O. T. Waring, F. O. Herring, C. C. Burnet and H. W. Beebe. The nominating committee consisted of H. W. Beebe, Charles Schipper and R. I. Jackson.

A Good Subject for Plainfielders.

The subject of Dr. Brett's address at the Local Union meeting to be held this evening in the First Presbyterian church, is "How to prepare for the Convention in October." Service commences at 7:45 with a song service, and it is hoped that the Endeavorers will attend in large numbers.

A FINE EXHIBIT OF ART.

THE CAMERA CLUB SHOW TO OPEN IN THEIR ROOMS TONIGHT.

Everything in Readiness for the Inspection of Club Members and Their Friends—Many Valuable Collections.

Tonight a favored few will be given a private view of probably the finest and most valuable art collection ever exhibited in this city. It is the loan exhibition of the Plainfield Camera Club and will be something that all should see.

Several months ago the exhibition was planned and the club began to prepare for it, but it has now reached a size and magnificence that even the most sanguine of the club did not expect. Plainfield people have tendered their treasures with a liberal hand and many a rare and valuable curio has come to light. The exhibition is to be held in the rooms of the club on the top floor of the Babcock building. The elevator will furnish an easy means of access. A Press reporter visited the rooms yesterday and found the committee hard at work arranging the different exhibits. Order was rising from choas and many of the exhibits were numbered and in place. A large table of Oriental pottery, worth thousands of dollars, was prominent among them. In one of the side rooms architectural drawings and photographs were hung about the walls. The exhibit of the work of the members of the Camera Club occupied another room.

It would be hard to describe the display and manifestly unfair to the club to reveal the grand surprise that they have prepared for their guests this evening. It only need be said that the exhibition, even in the incomplete state it was in yesterday, is a great thing and the energy that the members of the club have shown in obtaining and arranging the exhibits is something marvelous. The Plainfield Camera Club has certainly done something to be proud of and Plainfield should be proud of possessing such an energetic club.

The reception and private view tonight is only for a select number of the friends of the members who have been invited. A number of prominent citizens will be present and the club will open their exhibit in a manner befitting such an enterprise. It will be a full dress affair. Friday night the exhibition will be opened to the public.

Must Pay Half the Expense.

An order has been received by the Somerset County Board of Freeholders from Justice Gummere of the Supreme Court to whom was referred the difficulty over the Vliet's Mills bridge by the Hunterdon County Board, directing that the bridge should be built and the expense paid jointly by the two boards. This is the bridge over an overflow and extending from the mills to New Germantown. The Somerset County Board claim that it should be built entirely by the Hunterdon Board. A bill was introduced by Assemblyman Reed at the late session of the Legislature and passed both Houses to relieve Somerset of this burden. It is believed that this will obviate the order of the court though the latter was served before the bill became a law. The order was placed on file.

Reception for Y. M. C. A. Workers.

On Friday, April 10th, a reception and dinner will be given to Y. M. C. A. workers from New Jersey at Hotel St. Dennis, New York. The object of this social gathering is a mutual acquaintance between the leaders of the association work of New Jersey and the strength and interest to be gained by hearing men of prominence in their own State as well as the gentlemen from abroad who are to make addresses on that occasion.

Train Kills a Woman.

Mrs. Anna Delamater, a widow, was struck by an engine on the Pennsylvania Railroad at the French street crossing in New Brunswick last night, and instantly killed. She was going downtown, and, on reaching the railroad track, passed under the gates, which were down, and stepped upon the track directly in front of the train. Her neck was broken.

Frightened at the Trolley.

As the carriage of J. M. Bettman, of Willow avenue, was passing Laire's hardware store on West Front street yesterday morning, one of the horses became frightened at a passing trolley car and reared. The animal finally lost its footing and fell and became entangled in the carriage of J. W. Sandford, of West Seventh street. No damage resulted, however.

Good Road to Perth Amboy.

The Freeholders of Union and Middlesex Counties agree to macadamize St. George avenue, thus completing a continuous paved system from Newark to Perth Amboy.

THE NEEDS OF THE SOUTH.

Rev. Dr. Snodgrass Tells of the Missionary Work Among Southern Negroes.

The seventh anniversary of the Women's Home Missionary Society of the First Methodist church was celebrated last evening in Vincent chapel by a very interesting meeting. After the usual devotional excercises, Mrs. Herbert Welch, of Brooklyn, sang a solo, "The Call for Reapers." The annual report of the secretary was then read. It showed the society in a prosperous condition, with a membership of 48, 18 of whom are life members. Some supplies have been sent to Alaska, but the principal work has been done among the needy home missionaries of the west and at the industrial schools of the south. Several boxes and barrels, containing supplies to the value of $331.90, have been sent out, while considerable financial assistance has been given to the colored industrial schools. Most of the supplies have been donated to the society, while $23.13 was received from the mite boxes.

The annual report of the Young Ladies Mission Circle was read by Miss Eva Jenkins. The circle has seventeen members. Its principal financial work last year was to raise $40 to support a colored girl in a southern industrial school. There was $8.23 received from the mite boxes.

After another solo by Mrs. Welch, Rev. Dr. Snodgrass, of Newark, made a short address. He spoke about the different fields for work in this country and divided it into three principal sections, viz: the people of the west who are laying the foundation for a future civilization, the south where there are four millions of colored people who until only recently were slaves and now, although they have the advantage of civilization, are utterly unprepared for it; the great uneducated masses in the large cities. He then told why a missionary society should be formed, for, said he, there must be a society before anything can be done. God's idea was co-operation. It is not the duty of everybody to go far away, but they should divide the work with someone else, doing their share in assisting to support the missionary. Some are better at one thing and others at another. He next referred to the relation of the home and foreign missionary socities and declared that both were necessary in their own line of work. He declared the work of the home missionary society particularly important. He gave as a reason why it should be the women's home missionary society as woman is the chief sufferer by sin, and he said she was particularly adapted for doing missionary work. He closed with a few words about the duty of the society, and the wonderful work it is accomplishing.

After the collection had been taken James McGee spoke about Monroe Avenue chapel and said that, although it was supposed to be a mission of the First M. E. church, they had begun to assist other missionaries themselves. He told briefly of the chapel and its growth.

Rev. W. C. O'Donnell spoke a few words in which he echoed the sentiments of the other speakers. The meeting concluded with a hymn.

A CHURCH ELECTION.

First Presbyterian Society Hears Reports and Choose Officers.

The annual meeting of the members of the First Presbyterian church was held in the chapel last evening and was largely attended. Rev. C. E. Herring, the pastor, presided. J. M. Bettman, church clerk, read the reports from all the societies in the church. Each one showed progress and improvement and the several societies are in a flourishing condition.

R. H. Radford, Jr., was re elected as elder and W. H. Shotwell was elected as an additional elder, making five elders in all. On the recommendation of the pastor the parish meeting was adjourned for one week. The reasons he gave were that in holding two meetings several of the members usually leave before the second meeting is concluded and those remaining were willing to vote for anything in order to finish the business. The pastor's suggestion was agreed to and the meeting adjourned.

Republican Primaries Tonight.

The Republican primaries for the election of delegates to the State and Congressional conventions will be held this evening as follows: First ward, Republican Association rooms, East Front street; second ward, Bryant school building; third ward, Casino of the Country Club; fourth ward, Reform Hall.

Where The Circus Will Show.

Barnum's circus will show in this city on May 6th on the grounds on North avenue above Berckman street.

GOING BACK TO THE ARMY.

Ballington Booth's Best Supporters are Leaving Him, So it is Said.

A stampede began yesterday among the members of Ballington Booth's Volunteers and several applied to the Salvation Army to be reinstated. The revolt in the new organization was led by Lieutenant-Colonel and Mrs. Glen, who were Ballington Booth's highest officers and advisers.

Mr. Glen ranked as a Major in the Salvation Army and was the first to follow Commander Booth. The latter commissioned him a Lieutenant-Colonel in the new organization. He was the Commander's right-hand man and his desertion of the new movement came with the suddenness of a thunderbolt to the others.

In the letter to the Salvation Army, signed by both Mr. and Mrs. Glen, they say:

Certain things have transpired which compel us, though very reluctantly, to conclude that Commander and Mrs. Ballington Booth took a wrong step in severing themselves from the Salvation Army. We, therefore, feel that we cannot any longer conscientiously remain in our present position, and realizing as we do that our action in associating ourselves with the Volunteer movement has been a source of sorrow and stumbling to the comrades whom we love and with whom we have fought so long, we desire to offer ourselves to spend and be spent in faithful devotion to the Army's principles, that we may, by God's grace undo the harm caused by us.

PLAINFIELD'S BRILLIANT LAWYER.

A Picture and Short Sketch of Craig A. Marsh in the Law Journal.

The New Jersey Law Journal, of which A. V. D. Honeyman, of this city, is editor, this month publishes an excellent likeness of that brilliant Plainfield lawyer, Craig A. Marsh, and the following biographical sketch:

Craig A. Marsh, Plainfield, whose portrait appears in this number, is a well recognized leader of the bar in this city and holds a prominent place among the bar of the state. He was born in Plainfield in 1856, graduated from Union College at the age of 20, studied law with Hon. Amzi Dodd and J. Harvey Ackerman, graduated from Columbia Law School in 1879, and was admitted as attorney in this state at the November term of the same year, and counselor three years later. Before taking his counselor's license he became corporation counsel of Plainfield, and has held the position ever since, having been annually reappointed thereto, although the municipal government has been of all varieties of political complexion. His higher practice is chiefly in the higher courts, where he has established the reputation of winning his cases.

Reckless With the Revolver.

A party of young men from this city went out riding last Sunday night. They rode out Park avenue towards Metuchen and as they went they fired several shots at several dogs that were barking in the yards. With a complete disregard for the consequences they pointed their revolvers in any direction. One bullet struck a neighboring house, just missing a bedroom window. The young men who made up the party are known by the authorities and steps will be taken to prevent any similar occurance.

Arrested For Begging.

Chief Marshall Wilson arrested a man this morning at the home of Borough Councilman Peck. The man gave his name as Thomas West and he was going from house to house begging and in some instances he insulted women. He had a hearing before Justice Crosley, when he stated that he hailed from Boston and Easton. His story was so conflicting that he was given fifteen days to reflect over his evil doings.

Couldn't Survive the Shock.

Robert Miller, of Allentown, Pa., who was injured on the railroad near Dunellen on Tuesday, died at Muhlenberg Hospital this morning as a result of the accident. A. M. Runyon & Son took charge of the body and sent it to Allentown today for burial.

Tom Schaefer Engaged.

Thomas Schaefer has made an engagement with Founder Bradley, of Asbury Park, for the summer, when he will give exhibitions of club swinging and baton throwing at the Auditorium. He will begin there June 10th.

It will be an agreeable surprise to persons subject to attacks of bilious colic to learn that prompt relief may be had by taking Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. In many instances the attack may be prevented by taking this remedy as soon as the first symptoms of the disease appear. 25 and 50c bottles for sale at Armstrong's pharmacy, Park and North avenues.

A CHARMING HOME EVENT

MARRIAGE OF MISS ELEANOR A. UNDERWOOD TO S. B. PARROTT.

The Home of the Bride Made Brilliant With Floral Decorations, Pretty Gowns and Smiling Faces—Details of the Affair.

A charming home wedding of last evening was that of Miss Eleanor Alice Underwood, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Underwood, of 138 Crescent avenue, and Samuel Burrows Parrott, of Buffalo. The ceremony was performed at 8 o'clock at the home of the bride's parents by Dr. Cornelius Brett, pastor of Bergen Reformed church, Jersey City, and also an uncle of the bride. The maid-of-honor was Miss Blanche Collins, daughter of Hon. Gilbert Collins, of Jersey City, and the best man was George Vincent Wendell, of Boston.

The drawing room, in which the ceremony was performed, was superbly decorated with palms, southern smilax, bride roses, Easter lilies, white tulips and carnations, while a choice arrangement of white satin ribbon amid the flowers, presented a scene of decided beauty.

The bride was richly gowned in white satin, trimmed with Duchesse and point lace, pearl passementrie and chiffon. She carried a shower bouquet of white orchids and bride roses. She also wore a tulle veil with diamond ornaments and lilies of the valley, in shower. The maid of honor wore a gown of white organdie, trimmed with lace and white satin ribbons. She carried a bouquet of bridemaid roses. The bride's gift to the maid-of-honor was a wreath brooch of green enameled leaves, set with diamonds and pearls.

The hall and stairway was prettily decorated with palms, smilax and white ribbon, while the library was exquisitely arranged with pink satin ribbon, pink azaleas, tulips, carnations, roses, ferns and smilax. A pretty effect was created in the dining room through the use of Jonquils, yellow tulips and southern smilax. A profusion of flowers in endless variety was used in the conservatory, and a number of fairy lamps gave additional beauty to the scene.

A reception followed the marriage when Mr. and Mrs. Parrott received the congratulations of their many relatives and friends present. They left during the evening for a bridal tour and after April 20th will reside in Buffalo. The bride wore a traveling gown of light broadcloth, with vest of white satin embroidered in Persian colors, also a jeweled black kid belt and brown straw toque.

The music room, where Isler, of Newark, rendered choice selections, was decorated with palms, rubber trees, thorn blossoms and ivy pansies.

The ushers were L. A. Underwood, brother of the bride, and E. M. Bain, of Elizabeth.

A large and costly collection of presents were received by Mr. and Mrs. Parrott.

Guests were present Buffalo, New York, Brooklyn, Jersey City, Elizabeth and Plainfield, making a most brilliant assemblage of wealth, beauty and culture.

A Growing Order.

Lucetta Council, No. 28, Daughters of Liberty, met in their rooms, last evening, and initiated one member and seven more were elected to membership. An official report from the State Secretary shows the order to be growing very rapidly all over the State. It also shows that there are now seventy-one councils and nearly 6,000 members; forty-four of these councils were instituted and 4,000 of the members were initated during the past year. It is the hope of the State officers to increase the number of councils to one hundred and the membership to 10,000 before the next session of the State Council in March next.

Some Trolley Talk.

The managers of the proposed trolley line between Elizabeth and Plainfield are working hard to get the preliminaries completed. It is said that the line will be completed to Westfield first. It is said that the interest of the old green line of horse cars will be purchased and connected with the Plainfield railway thus making the line nine miles long. The route will be from Elizabethport through Morris avenue, and thence through Sayre street probably, and the old road to the terminus, if the county road is not secured. The scheme has every flavor of success.—New Jersey Contractor.

Grace M. E. Church Trustees.

After the regular prayer meeting at the Grace M. E. church last evening a business meeting was held, at which time Dr. H. K. Carroll, J. S. Lunger and John Valiant, were re-elected trustees. The other business was of a routine nature.

FRIENDS FIGHT.

An Exciting Scrap in a North Avenue Barber Shop This Morning.

North avenue was awakened this morning from its usual quietude by a lively little scrap at Lemuel Perry's barber shop. One of the combatants, S. T. Johnson, the colored man who runs the little restaurant on Madison avenue, came into the shop this morning and asked the proprietor to pay a bill for a small amount. Perry did not want to pay at present on learning that Johnson was not going to move away or leave town. High words were exchanged and the two men, who have have hitherto been good friends, resorted to blows.

In the excitement after a lively little scrap, Perry struck Johnson just under the eye. The ring on Perry's finger smashed Johnson's glasses and cut a gash just below the eye. The wound bled freely and both men were soon bedaubed with gore.

They were both arrested and taken before City Judge DeMeza who held them in $100 bail each, to appear later. Bail was secured for both and they were released.

Dr. Hallock sewed up Johnson's wound, while Perry was not much worse for the encounter.

A SORRY SURPRISE FOR HER.

Mrs. Donald McInnes Fractures Her Leg While Riding a Bicycle.

While learning to ride at the Columbia Cycle Academy yesterday, Mrs. Donald McInnes, of West Third street, received a painful accident. Some time ago, her husband presented her with a new wheel and promised to teach her to ride as soon as the roads were in conditon. Mrs. McInnes determined to surprise her husband and started to learn at the academy. She has taken two lessons and learned to ride alone. Yesterday, she took her third lesson and was riding about the hall when her wheel slipped on the waxed flooor and she fell, breaking her left leg in two places. She was immediately conveyed to her home. Her husband has been confined to the house with the grip since Monday.

OLD VETS ARE COMING.

Second Brigade, New Jersey Volunteers, Will Visit Plainfield in 1897.

Today the Second Brigade, New Jersey Volunteer, are holding their annual re union at Paterson, and an effort will be made to secure the brigade to meet in Plainfield next year. For this purpose Mayor Alexander Gilbert, of this city, Mayor B. A. Hegeman, Jr., of the borough, Commander I. L. McVoy, of Post 73, Mrs. Brokaw, president of the Woman's Relief Corps, Past Commanders W. C. Smith, W. W. Coriell, William Hand and Comrades J. Goodwin and T. O. Doane, Sr., of Post 73, T. O. Doane, Jr., of the Sons of Veterans, and William Townley, whose father was a member of the brigade, went to Paterson to invite the brigade to this city. It is more than likely that the invitation will be accepted.

A telegram was received by The Press at 2:30 this afternoon from T.O. Doane, stating that the convention would come to Plainfield in 1897.

Brimful of Facts.

Josiah Browne, who resides at 1225 Watchung avenue, was a witness in the hearing against the American Tobacco Company at Newark yesterday. The Tribune this morning said: "Josiah Browne, the secretary of the defendant corporation, proved to be brimful of facts relating to the trusts, but he guarded them in such a way as to cause the attorneys for the complainant no end of trouble."

The Famous Union County Roads.

County Road Inspector Fink denies the statement of a Newark newspaper that the roads are in bad condition He says there is not a mile out of repair.

—Frazee's sea food market on Park avenue, off North avenue, has roe shad, buck shad, halibut, codfish, catfish, striped bass, perch, lafayettes, eels, flounders, fresh mackerel, smelts, sturgeon, soft clams, all fresh and cheaper than in any other market in the city.

During the winter of 1893, F. M. Martin, of Long Reach, West Va., contracted a severe cold which left him with a cough. In speaking of how he cured it he says: "I used several kinds of cough syrup but found no relief until I bought a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, which relieved me almost instantly, and in a short time brought about a complete cure." When troubled with a cough or cold use this remedy and you will not find it necessary to try several kinds before you get relief. It has been in the market for over twenty years and constantly grown in favor and popularity. For sale at 25 and 50 cents per bottle at Armstrong's pharmacy, Park and North avenues.

TURPIE'S INVECTIVE

Indiana Senator Furnishes Amusement for the Galleries.

SHERMAN AND LODGE ATTACKED

Cuban Resolution Provides the Opportunity—Efforts of Other Members To Suppress Their Merriment Causes Them Considerable Trouble.

Washington, April 9.—The joint resolution introduced by Senator Call proposing intervention in the war now being prosecuted in Cuba will probably be taken up for action this afternoon. Senator Turpie's speech on this resolution afforded much amusement for his brother senators and a large audience in the galleries. He clothed the most stinging sarcasm in picturesque language, and the efforts of the other members to suppress their merriment caused many of them considerable difficulty. The object of Senator Turpie's invective were not so much Gen. Weyler and the Spanish government as the chairman of the committee on foreign relations—Mr. Sherman, rep., Ohio—and the junior senator from Massachusetts, Mr. Lodge. He ascribed to Mr. Sherman helpless inertia, delay and irrational obstruction; and spoke of his taking refuge in the crypt of the conference committee, very glad to be rid of his former action. Mr. Lodge was portrayed by him as belonging to the jingo class of extremists, and as being singularly gifted with the power to clothe an interesting and exciting subject with all the dullness of time worn commonplaces. He drew an amusing sketch of the controversy between Mr. Lodge and the Spanish minister and said that he had expected it to end in a duel in which the champion of senatorial privileges would go into the lists, fully armed, his visor down and his lance at rest. But, instead of that, the junior senator from Massachusetts had retired to the room of the committee on foreign relations and regaled himself on "puffs, mere puffs." Mr. Turpie closed his sarcastic remarks on Mr. Lodge by the quotation that "pygmies are pygmies still, though perched on Alps."

The Behring Sea Treaty.

The executive session of the senate yesterday afternoon was brief and, besides a few confirmations, was devoted to the reception of a report from Chairman Sherman, of the committee on foreign relations, on the treaty now before the senate relating to the appointment of a commission for the assessment of damages growing out of the seizure of the Canadian vessels for violations of the regulations relating to the Behring sea fur and seal fisheries. Mr. Sherman reported a few amendments which were ordered printed. The treaty will be taken up in a few days. Objection was made to its consideration on account of the illness of Senator Morgan, although Mr. Sherman stated that the state department was very anxious to have the matter disposed of. The amendments reported are only verbal and will not change the text of the treaty in any material manner. It is believed that the treaty will be disposed of next week.

House of Representatives.

This afternoon the house will vote on the bill repealing the compulsory pilotage system in force in nine southern states. The conference report on the agricultural appropriation bill was presented and agreed to. The bill reported to the house from the committee on coinage, weights and measures providing for the adoption by the government of the metric system as the standard had been recommitted to that committee.

THE ATLANTIC MINE ACCIDENT.

First That Has Occurred Since Electricity Was Introduced for Hauling.

Phillipsburg, Pa., April 9.—Yesterday's fatal accident in the Clearfield region in Atlantic mine No. 1 is the first that has occurred since the introduction of electricity for hauling. A train in charge of motorman Ernest Pie collided with a train in charge of John Shoff and Pie was so seriously injured that he died within an hour. The conductor of Pie's train, Nicholas John, had his leg crushed.

Privileges for Foreign Yachts.

Washington, April 9.—Mr. Payne of New York has introduced in the house a bill providing that yachts belonging to a regularly organized yacht club of any foreign nation, which shall extend like privileges to the yachts of the United States, shall have the privilege of entering or leaving any port of the United States without entering or clearing at the custom houses or paying tonnage tax.

The Black Plague in China.

Washington, April 9.—Reports have been received at the state department from consular officers in China and Japan concerning the existence of the black plague in Hong Kong. According to the information contained, the disease has been kept within bounds at Hong Kong, although the arrival of a ship at Yokohama with a case on board is reported.

Knitting Mill Shuts Down.

Ohio's Anti-Lynching Law.

Columbus, O., April 9.—The Senate has concurred in the Smith anti-lynching bill and it is a law. It makes any county whose officials permit a lynching to occur, liable to the family of the victim for damages.

FOR HIGH TREASON.

Members of the Reform Committee Held for Trial at Pretoria.

Pretoria, April 9.—All of the members of the reform committee, who were implicated in the recent disturbances, were arraigned yesterday in the Landdrost's court and committed on charges of high treason for the next criminal session of the high court. The Landdrost reserved decision as to the admission of the prisoners to bail.

COTTON MULE SPINNERS.

Reports of Delegates Occupy Most of the Time of Their Convention.

Boston, April 9.—The most of the time of the convention of cotton mule spinners of America was taken up in considering reports from the district delegates. These reports showed that ring spinning frames were falling into disfavor and that mill managers were gradually going back to the use of mules for spinning cotton. The Tremont and Suffolk mills of Lowell, Mass., and the Pawtucket, R. I., mills were reported by the delegates from those sections as among the places where ring spinning frames were being displaced by mules. This news was received with much favor by the delegates, because it means that more men spinners and fewer women and young children will be employed at spinning. The New Hampshire delegate reported that the wages in the mills in Dover were about 8 per cent. less than in other districts, and he asked the assistance of the organization to secure an advance over present rates. In Utica, N. Y., according to the report of the delegate from that district, wages had been slightly advanced through the splendid organization of mule spinners. Fall River was reported as being comparatively quiet in trade matters, while the condition of trade in Lowell was regarded as fair.

MORE DESPERATE EVERY DAY.

A Fearful Scourge Adds to the Horror of the Armenian Situation.

Philadelphia, April 9.—Prof. William H. Pancoast, president of the Red Cross society of Pennsylvania, has received a cablegram from Miss Clara Barton which indicates that the situation in Armenian is growing more desperate each day. Miss Barton's message reads: "Relief work firmly settled. No opposition, no direction from authorities; a fearful scourge at Marash and Zeitoun. Have called eight physicians to Heirbut. Dysentery, smallpox and typhus fever epidemic. Do you wish to send medical supplies? Please do." Prof. Pancoast stated that the Red Cross society sent Miss Barton $500 in cash last week, which she has not yet received. A meeting of the local society will be called at an early date to take action upon the appeal sent by Miss Barton.

Washington, April 9.—The United States patrol fleet in Behring sea will leave for the scene of operations from San Francisco about the 13th inst., and will rendezvous at Port Townsend, Wash., leaving that port April 20. It is expected the fleet will arrive in Behring sea May 1. Capt. C. L. Hooper will be in charge. The fleet will be comprised of the best revenue cutters, viz.: Grant, Wolcott, Corwin, Bear, Rush and Perry. While the fleet is in the north Pacific ocean its headquarters will be at Sitka, Alaska, and when it reaches Behring sea the headquarters will be Dutch Harber, Ounalaska. Capt. Hooper will remain ashore during most of the season, directing the operations of the fleet from shore headquarters.

THE OLYMPIC GAMES.

Americans Gratified by the Generous Conduct of the Greeks Toward Victors.

Athens, April 9.—Nearly all the members of the royal family and the king of Servia were present at the Olympic games, which were continued to-day. No Americans competed yesterday. They are much gratified by the generous attitude of the Greeks toward the victors, and the utmost good feeling prevails. The bicycle race at a distance of 100 kilometres yesterday was won by Flamant, the Frenchman, with the Greek contestant second. Time of the winner, three hours and eight minutes.

THE STRIKE DANGER

Railway Men May Go Out in Pennsylvania and New England.

WILL BE NO TROUBLE IN NEW YORK

Geographical Position of That City Would Aid in Its Suppression—Archbishop Corrigan Said To Have Interested Himself—The A. R. U. Story.

Philadelphia, April 9.—The street car troubles of Philadelphia and New York are closely linked. From what can be learned here to-day there will be no strike at present, but the agitation will be transferred to Philadelphia, Pittsburg and, perhaps, Boston and other New England cities. Edwin Byrne, president of the local branch of the Amalgamated Association of Street Railway Employes, went to New York yesterday and saw President Mahon. The immediate object of Byrne's visit to Mahon was to have him modify the terms of the ultimatum which the Amalgamated association is to submit to the Union Traction company. One clause of this ultimatum requires of the traction company to recognize the association. The local leaders of the association know full well that the traction company will fight this demand to the death. Therefore, Mr. Byrne went to New York to see President Mahon and have him erase this demand in the ultimatum. This president Mahon consented to do. Despite the admisssion of the local leaders of the Amalgamated association that the A. R. U. had become affiliated with the street railway men, Mr. Mahon authorized Byrne to deny that such a deal had been accomplished or would be considered. The local leaders of the great railway brotherhoods also denied to-day that they had any intention of affiliating with the A. R. U.

No Strike in New York.

From what could be gathered here to-day among the Amalgamated association men it is unlikely that there will be a strike in New York. Mahon is credited with being too sharp to call a strike in New York, where the peculiar geographical facilities of the city aid in the suppression of any disorders which would follow a strike, and, in consequence it is said that if the Metropolitan Traction company show a firm front, Mahon will recede from his position and transfer the scene of action to Philadelphia. It was further talked of at the association's local headquarters to-day that the good offices of Archbishop Corrigan had been secured in behalf of the New York men and that the archbishop was doing his best to bring about an amicable solution of the trouble. Mahon told Byrne that the reported national brotherhood of street railway employes in New York is a myth, and has no conception except in the brain of the officials of the Metropolitan Traction company. A meeting of the local branch of the Amalgamated association will be held this afternoon.

My

Nerves are weak, many people say, and yet they do not seem to know that they are literally starving their nerves. Weak, pale, thin blood cannot give proper sustenance—that is why you are nervous, tired, exhausted. The cure for this condition is to purify, vitalize and enrich your blood. Take Hood's Sarsaparilla fairly and faithfully, and the rich, red blood, which it makes, will soon feed the nerves the elements of true strength they require; they will cease their agitation and will resume their proper place—being under the control instead of controlling the brain and body. Read Miss Bartley's letter:

"I want to express my gratitude for what Hood's Sarsaparilla has done for me. My health has been very poor for three years, due to trouble with my

Kidneys

I was nervous, had pains in my back. I cannot tell what I suffered. My eyesight became affected and I was so despondent I did not have any interest in life. I had two physicians, but my complaints became worse. I was told that I was affected with Bright's disease. A relative urged me to try Hood's Sarsaparilla. I did so and in a short time I began to notice a change in my condition. Things began to appear brighter, my eyes improved and did not trouble me so severely. My appetite returned and I gained strength every day. I am now able to do my own work, and feel perfectly well. I cannot find words to express my gratitude for what Hood's Sarsaparilla has done for me and I gladly recommend it." MISS ELLA BARTLEY, 213½ S. Grant Ave., Columbus, Ohio.

Dyspepsia,

Gastritis

and all stomach troubles where that great life-maintaining organ refuses to dispense nourishment to every part of the body, and the sufferer gradually wasting away and losing flesh daily, finally meets his death from the perforation of a gastric ulcer or dies by actual starvation, can be cured, as has been done time and again, by the use of that great blood enricher, flesh and muscle builder, and strength creator. Give the vital centres of the body strength to perform their regular functions and perfect health is a natural sequence. Dr. Louis Faust, of Schenectady, N. Y., says of Bovinine, "In the severest cases of gastritis the stomach will bear it. For one month my mother lived almost exclusively on it during such a sickness." Over 25000 physicians use and endorse it.

Your Spring clothing

Rather early to speak of it, but if it needs cleaning or dyeing, it isn't too early to have us do that work for you. This is our dull season—our employes are here ready for work. We'd like to have your goods now. We can give them better attention than in the rush of the spring season. Then we'll have to have more time or rush them at the expense of good work. Now we can take our time, do the work better than if hurried and you'll have the clothing all ready for warm weather.

Look in the closet or trunk and find your spring wear that needs cleaning and dyeing and bring it to us now, or better still, our wagon will call for it if you will send us word.

EVERY RULE MUST BE ENFORCED

Decisions Must Be Uniform Upon Every Point of Play—The Laws in Relation to Fines and Removals—Courtesy and Firmness Are Enjoined.

Washington, April 9. — President Young of the National Baseball league has issued the following circular of instructions to all the league umpires: "As the gentlemen selected to fill the positions of league umpires for 1896 are all men of large experience and mostly old league umpires it seems almost unnecessary for me to issue special instructions. I desire, however, to call your special attention to the changes in the rules in relation to fining and removal of players, etc., and I shall insist that every umpire enforce, not only that, but every playing rule, both in letter and spirit. If any rule is faulty it can only be demonstrated by its strict enforcement. It is useless for one umpire to enforce the rules unless each and every one does exactly the same. If you commence from the very first game to do your whole duty, you will have little trouble in doing so during the entire season, but if you do not, your trouble will have just commenced and your usefulness as an umpire practically at an end. I have the utmost confidence in every one of the umpires and I believe that every decision rendered will be governed by his best honest judgment. In the discharge of your duty on the field, you all well know that you have my unqualified support, and you are also entitled to, and I believe you will receive, the support of every league official.

Courtesy and Firmness Enjoined.

"The umpires will provide themselves with a blue flannel suit and cap, and always present a neat appearence on the field. Be courteous and polite to all players whenever you meet them and I would advise that you avoid familiarity with any. With many it would be harmless, while with others it would be taken advantage of and destroy your usefulness to a very great extent. You will consider all assignments as confidential, as circumstances might make a change necessary at very short notice. After a game go directly to your hotel, as you may find a telegram awaiting you. You cannot be too careful in watching for telegrams, and by so doing, you can save us both considerable trouble. It is also very important that you should advise me at once by letter or wire where you are stopping in each city, and if possible I would like a list of all the hotels where you stop during the season and then make no change without previously advising me. If you have any doubt about the proper construction of any rule let me know and I will always take pleasure in giving you full information. Your decisions must be uniform upon every point of play. Don't be too hasty in rendering a decision, but I cannot too strongly impress upon your minds the importance of being prompt in doing so after you have formed an intelligent judgment. Even a very slight delay gives the audience the impression that you are in doubt. Be perfectly fearless in doing just exactly what you believe to be right."

HORRIBLE ACCIDENT.

Wagon Shaft Penetrates the Breast of a Woman Bicyclist Fully Six Inches.

Philadelphia, April 9.—A peculiarly horrible accident occurred yesterday afternoon on Girard avenue near Fifteenth street. While Mrs. Edward F. Morse, aged 30 years, wife of the president of the Morse Elevator company, was riding a bicycle towards her home at 1601 Girard avenue, she was run down and killed by a runaway horse attached to a huckster's wagon. Mrs. Morse did not see the runaway animal approaching her on account of a street car which intercepted her view. She turned in towards the curb and as she did so the runaway horse was upon her. The shaft of the wagon struck her squarely in the breast and entered her body fully six inches. Mrs. Morse was hurriedly picked up and taken to the hospital, but she died upon reaching there. While the crowd was still collected around the scene, Mr. Morse, who was on his way home to lunch, attracted by the commotion, inquired of a policeman the cause of the people gathering. The policeman recognized Mr. Morse and gave an evasive answer to his question. Something seemed to warn Morse of the trouble that had come upon him. When he was told that a lady had been run down and hurt by a horse, he asked to see the machine that she was riding. When the bicycle was shown him, Mr. Morse recognized it as that of his wife's, and in a frenzy of anxiety he hurried to the hospital only to find her dead body.

HAVANA'S SANITARY CONDITION

New York's Health Officer Takes Precautions Against Infection.

New York, April 9.—Dr. Doty, the health officer of the port of New York, who arrived yesterday from Havana, says that the sanitary condition of that city is in extremely bad shape. Although at present the number of cases of yellow fever in Havana is small, the season has hardly begun. There is very little doubt that the number of cases will increase, owing to the political conditions, which necessitate the presence of a large body of fresh troops from Spain. These are unacclimated, and a large percentage of them will probably succumb to the disease. While in Havana Dr. Doty was in consultation with Dr. Burgess, the United States marine hospital inspector, who is resident in that city. He visited the various hospitals and saw a few cases of yellow fever. He made arrangements with Dr. Burgess to enforce certain regulations, similar to those in force last season, to prevent the introduction of that disease into the port of New York. On May 1 next all passengers from Havana who fail to present satisfactory certificates of acclimatization from Dr. Burgess will be required to stay in quarantine until the expiration of the usual incubation period of yellow fever, five days. That is, five days from leaving Havana.

INDIANA OUT OF DRYDOCK.

Strong Winds, Causing a Recession of the Water, Delayed the Work.

Washington, April 9.—The telegram received at the navy department from Beaufort, S. C., reporting that it was impossible to take the battleship Indiana out of the government drydock at Port Royal on account of the prevalence of strong westerly winds which had driven the water from the bay, was later contradicted by a dispatch announcing that the war vessel was safely floated. The depth of water had been in the neighborhood of twenty-four feet while fully a foot more was required to allow the Indiana to get away. These winds have been continuous for about four weeks. Their subsidence with the increasing spring tide last night permitted the accomplishment of the intention to take the vessel from the dock. A report has been made to the department by Constructor Taylor who has been at Port Royal. He says the Indiana's bottom was found to be in excellent condition. She has been thoroughly cleaned.

The bicycle has figured prominently in many of the State Legislatures this winter. In the New York Legislature yesterday, a bill was passed classifying bicycles as baggage on railroads.

The article from the Chicago Times-Herald, published in another column of The Press today, relative to the appointment of Gen. Miles as Lieutenant General of the United States Army, is one filled with strong points in his favor.

There is not expected any contest at the Republican primaries to be held this evening, though it is understood that the delegates to be elected will stand for McKinley for the Presidential nomination, and no doubt feel favorable to Garrett A. Hobart for second place on the ticket.

The New York World has been publishing letters from prominent Democrats all over the country as to whether or not they favor a third term for Grover Cleveland. The south and west are almost unanimously opposed to a third term. The eastern state leaders are not so bitterly opposed as the southern and western ones, but there seems to be a strong element for Whitney or Morrison.

Many of the points made in the communication published in The Press today concerning the work of the Common Council are very good, and then again others are very bad. The observations show that it takes all sorts of people to make up a world, and that no matter how or what a public official does, he is bound to be catechised by some one whose ideas of public administration are widely different. The correspondent's conclusions that the Councilmen are in league with avaricious corporations is ill-advised and without truth, but his ideas of economy in municipal improvements are well-timed.

An important decision was made by Judge McCormick in the County Court of Sessions yesterday when he declared that he would try no more criminal cases without a jury, as he holds that the passage of the law abolishing the lay judges does not give him power to try cases alone, and he does not intend to do it. This will cause all small criminal cases to go to the Grand Jury, and if the offender cannot obtain bail he must remain in jail until the jury meets, even if he wishes to plead guilty. This will not only increase the cost of running the county jail, but also entail much extra labor on the grand and petit jurors and prolong the sessions of the Common Pleas Court, besides largely increasing the cost of this court.

SOME GOOD, SOME BAD POINTS.

A Correspondent Takes the City Officials to Task.

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—I observe from the talk and actions of some of our Common Council of late, that they wish more money for improvements of streets sewerage, etc., than appropriations have been made for. My impression is that our city officials have been pushing improvements of late about as fast as the people are able to stand. I question whether any city in our State has paid out more money for improvements than ours, according to population. Our macadam roads and streets, sewerage, electic lights, etc., have cost large amounts, much more I think than should have been with good financiering. The best officers are those that run a city with the greatest economy. Our streets have been kept in a bad condition from allowing one improvement to tear up another; our macadamized streets, many of them, are nearly as bad now as before the heavy expense was laid out on them. It seems as if our officers were controlled more by the desires of stock companies, combines and syndicates, than they are for the great interests of the taxpayers and the common people. This ought not so to be.

Debt has been increased largely for the last few years taxes have increased and must continue to increase, unless our city is run with more economy. It is nice to have things nice, but if bankruptcy is to follow as it has in some of our surrounding cities, we would in the end be better off to go a little slower. Bankruptcy and high taxes will drive away eventually more than our beauty will draw to us. Our city from its birth for a series of years was run by the people; but office seekers have managed to amend laws and charter until the people have lost the power to control their own business. And it seems of late that the officers were in league with the jobbers to take advantage of the people if they have to do it by moonlight.

Tricksters are apt to work in the darkness There is nothing like a clear sky to work hones ly by. The officers seem to think that $15,000 is not enough to keep our streets in repair for the year, and make other improvements We have lived without a sewer from the railroad bridge on Park avenue, that they seek, and can live a little longer, rather than heap more heavy burdens upon the people. This matter should have been taken care of by the railroad company, but it was very poor financiering by our city fathers when they assumed that responsibility. It seems that we often get sold out by our officers. Had we better not have a change? It is no small tax for many of our people to make the connections with the sewer, outside of other taxes. L.

THE LIEUTENANT-GENERALSHIP.

General Miles' Services Render Him Worthy of Appointment.

The more carefully we examine the objections that are offered to the recreation of the office of lieutenant-general in the interests of Major General Miles, commanding the United States army, the less reasonable they appear. This office (and, indeed, that of general) is recognized as a fundamental part of every well organized army of the world.

General Miles' services since the war render him worthy of recognition as lieutenant general to say nothing about his services during the war. The office of lieutenant-general should not be bestowed grudgingly, nor, indeed, made the plaything of the executive department of a government. As a matter of fact, there should not only be the permanent rank of lieutenant-general, but also that of general. The idea that the lieutenant-generalship can only be held by an officer who has waded through seas of blood is an unwise and unpatriotic view to take of the subject. It offers a perpetual incentive to our officers to embroil us in war in order that they may win a coveted prize otherwise denied them. Our army is so small that every means should be taken to heighten its patriotism and dignify and ennoble it in the eyes of the public Rightly the head of the army should be a general, and those in charge of the great departments lieutenant-generals. Such an organization would be in harmony with the practices of other countries and only appreciative of the needs of our army.

Everything indicates that congress is extremely friendly to General Miles; that the people are so there can be no doubt. His long connection with the army, his brilliant services on the frontier since the war and his gallantry during the great rebellion all attach them to him. His courage, skill and modesty are the attributes of a great man.

The plea that the office of lieutenant-general shall only be given to those who distinguish themselves in some great and bloody war will not bear examination or reflection. Whoever is thought worthy to be put in command of the United States army should have the title of general—or lieutenant-general at least. It is only merited recognition and only what the good of the country as well as the good of the army requires.—Chicago Times-Herald.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the eustachian tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube be restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give one hundred dollars for any case of deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

ARTIFICIAL LIMBS.

Improvements Which Make Their Use Hardly Noticeable.

Painstaking skill and constant improvement are necessary factors in the perfection or success of almost any industry, but nowhere, says the New York Mail and Express, are they more fully attended than in the making of artificial limbs. There was a time when the lame and the crippled had to show their defects and misfortunes to the world. Now it is just the other way. People with artificial legs can now walk so perfectly as to avoid detection, and a person with a single amputation can almost defy detection. Improvements make it possible to move the knee and ankle joints, and this innovation also strengthens the whole limb and makes it more durable.

One of the latest improvements is in the knee joint of the leg for thigh amputation, which is so arranged that when in a sitting position the cord and spring are entirely relaxed, thus relieving all strain and pressure. There are in the United States 100,000 persons who have to be supplied with new limbs on an average of once in every five to eight years. The manufacturing of these articles in New York has become quite an enterprise.

A Wealthy Railroad Fireman.

A young man in blue overalls and a greasy cap and jacket is now employed as fireman on the Long Island railroad. He is George D. Pratt, the son of the late Charles Pratt, the multi-millionaire Standard Oil prince. Young Pratt was graduated from Amherst college with honors in 1893. As one of the representatives of his father's estate, who is the second largest stockholder of the Long Island Railroad company, he proposes to learn the railroad business through every grade, from laborer up. He started in the car shops at Morris Park, and after service at the bench, the forge and in the assembling-room, he learned how to use tools, how every part of a locomotive is made, and how the whole is put together. After having served the requisite apprenticeship in that department, he jumped into the locomotive cab and commenced shoveling coal in the capacity of a fireman.

Prisoner's Retorts.

Prisoners have a fair proportion of "happy answers" credited to them. Of these, perhaps, the best known are those of the man who, when asked if he pleaded "guilty or not guilty," replied that he couldn't say until he had heard the evidence; and the naive response of the prisoner to the usual question before sentence: "Have you anything to say, prisoner, before sentence is pronounced upon you?" "It's very kind of your honor, and if it's quite agreeable to the court I should like to say 'good evening.'"

Leprosy in Iceland.

There are lepers in Iceland—about 200 in all. Now an enthusiastic priest has determined to follow heroic Father Damien's example—to devote himself wholly to the care of the unfortunates. Already he has raised 10,000 francs and is promised enough more to assure the early erection of a comfortable hospital.

It is not a miracle. It wont cure everything, but it will cure piles. That's what DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve will do, because it has done it in hundreds of cases. For sale by L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

THE A. P. A. IN THE FIGHT.

Its Members Trying, It Is Said, to Defeat Frederick Severs.

The selection of Frederick L. Severs as a candidate for Freeholder by the Elizabeth Republicans has aroused the ire of the A. P. A. of Elizabeth. He is an active member of the Catholic Benevolent Legion.

The members of the A. P. A. intend, it is alleged, to knife both John C. Rankin, candidate for Mayor, and Mr. Severs. Never has there been so much interest manifested in a city election as in this one. The Democrats have put up such men as F. C. Marsh for Mayor and Judge P. H. Gilhooly, Benjamin H. Campbell, P. J. Ryan and George Ford, for Councilmen, and the Republicans have renominated their present officers, with the exception of Mr. Severs, who is a new man.

The city is naturally Democratic by 800 votes.

Did Not File Their Acceptances.

The Democratic voters of the Fifth Ward of Rahway are wondering what to do on election day, April 14th. It is compulsory that the candidates for offices file or sign a bond of acceptance with the City Clerk before 12 o'clock Tuesday night, but this was not done. The City Clerk, S. Rusling Ryno, remained in his office until 12 o'clock Tuesday night for the acceptances.

Two Quit the Hospital Staff.

The trouble in the medical staff of the Alexian Brothers' Hospital in Elizabeth was settled yesterday by the appointment of Dr. John P. Rielly and City Physician Arthur Stern in place of County Physician O'Rielly and Dr. Thomas F. Burnet. The hospital authorities demanded the resignation of Dr. O'Rielly. Dr. Burnet handed in his resignation.

Two Dry Towns.

Judge Morrow, of Warren County, has revoked all the Washington and Hackettstown licenses, and both towns are dry. The action is based on the unconstitutionality of the license law applied to these boroughs.

—Mr. and Mrs. Robert Gorton, of West Fifth street, last night entertained the Fortnightly Whist Club. There were eight tables.

—Wahl & Hatfield, who run the stone crusher at Westfield, have a contract to supply Woodbridge with $1,000 worth of crushed stone.

Duer Randolph has resigned his position at Edsall's Commercial Palce. He leaves Saturday night.

Miss Eleanor Williams, of West Seventh street, was the guest of Miss Mabel Ladd, of Brooklyn, last evening.

A False Diagnosis.

La Grippe is confounded by many persons with a severe attack of catarrh, which in some respects resembles the former. These individuals suffer severely with pain about the forehead, eyes and ears, with soreness in throat and stoppage of the nasal passages, and, in fact, are incapacitated for work of any kind for days at a time. These are catarrhal sufferers. Ely's Cream Balm has been used with the best results in such cases. The remedy will give instant relief.

THE POLITICAL FIELD

Opinion of Col. Swords as to the Republican Nominee.

WILL BE HARRISON OR ALLISON

Says McKinley Will Lead on First Ballot, But After That His Forces Will Disintegrate—No Chance for Quay, Morton or Bradley.

St. Louis, April 8.—Col. H. L. Swords, sergeant-at-arms of the republican national convention, when asked his opinion as to who would be the standard-bearer of the republican party for the presidency, replied that the choice would undoubtedly fall upon either Senator Allison or ex-President Harrison. He intimated that McKinley would lead on the first ballot, but that after that his forces would begin to disintegrate. He is of the opinion that Senator Allison has the best chance. He said, in answer to a question, that he did not think Bradley, Morton or Quay had any possible chance of securing the nomination. He has engaged accommodations for 200 persons at the Lindell and made a new contract with the Planter's hotel for forty-five rooms. He has also contracted for twelve rooms at Hurst's hotel and accommodations for fifty more Iowa delegates at another.

POLITICS IN KENTUCKY.

List of the Delegates from the Various Counties.

Lexington, Ky., April 9.—Following is a carefully compiled list of delegates from counties that have held republican conventions: For McKinley, 28 counties, outside of Jefferson, 382; for McKinley in Jefferson, 123; total, 505. For Bradley, 33 counties, outside of Jefferson, 403; for Bradley in Jefferson, 72; total, 475. Uninstructed, 10 counties, 151. Contested, two counties, 47.

Quay Endorsed for President.

Danville, Pa., April 9.—The republican conference of the Seventh congressional district met here yesterday and elected two delegates and alternates to the national convention. The resolutions endorsed Senator Quay for president.

McKinley Delegate Elected.

Williamsport, Pa., April 9.—The republican county convention met here yesterday and elected a delegate to the national convention. The convention adopted resolutions endorsing McKinley, the protective tariff, the state administration and the Monroe doctrine; opposing free silver coinage and Cleveland's administration.

THE CUBAN REBELLION.

Insurgents Fire a Town — The Belmont Swindle—Patriot Camps Captured.

Havana, April 9.—The town of La Salud, in the Havana province, was entered by insurgents, who sacked several stores and set fire to a number of houses. Three insurgents also made their way into Marianao, in the same province, at night, and before their presence was known to the troops stationed at the forts robbed the store of Manuel Valdes of a number of pairs of shoes and a quantity of provisions and succeeded in making their escape. Gen. Barges reports the capture of a rebel camp at Jarahueca. In the fight which occurred before the rebels were compelled to abandon their camp five of them were killed. The capture of a camp at Ti Arriba, in the province of Santiago de Cuba, is also reported by Gen. Barges. In this engagement the insurgents lost fifteen killed and two of the Spanish force were wounded. Two arrests have been made by the police of Guanabacoa, near Havana, in connection with the recent swindle of the New York banking house of August Belmont & Co. One of the prisoners is named Pelegrin and the other is an ex-employe of the Hidalgo company. In the possession of the latter were found several blanks and papers which prove his connection with the swindle.

J. W. S. HILL'S DEATH.

Analysis Shows He Was Poisoned—No Clue to the Murderer.

Harrisburg, Pa., April 9.—The analysis of the contents of the stomach of J. W. S. Hill, who died suddenly at Steelton, near here, March 27, shows that he was poisoned from drinking tea in which there was arsenic. The district attorney will begin an investigation at once. There is no clue to the poisoner. Within the past year Mr. Hill had several hogs and three horses die from the effect of poison.

TWELVE-OARED BOAT RACE.

Flagship New York Sailors Defeat Those of the Raleigh.

Fort Monroe, Va., April 9.—The 12-oared cutters of the flagship New York and the cruiser Raleigh had a spirited race in Hampton roads yesterday. The course was a mile and a half to a stake boat and return. In coming down the homestretch the siren whistles of the squadron gave them a terrific blast. New York won by about two lengths. Over $5,000 changed hands on the result.

Died at the Age of 101.

Westchester, Pa., April 9.—At the age of 101 years, Thomas W. Hall, the oldest resident of Chester county, died at the home of his son-in-law, in Cain township yesterday. He was born in Philadelphia on March 4, 1795, and lived until yesterday without ever having suffered a day's illness. His death resulted from no particular cause but old age.

The Bicycle Bill Will Soon Become a Law

Albany, April 9.—The Armstrong bicycle bill, compelling railroads to carry bikes free as baggage, if a release for damages is given, now in the governor's hands will, it is believsd, be approved by the exeeut.ve.

FLAT FEET ARE THE THING.

Use Wide Shoes and You Will Be Able to Walk Erectly.

Not more than two men in 100 walk erectly. This observation comes from a man who is a crank about the benefits of wide, flat shoes, says the New York Press. He declares he has made notes and knows what he is talking about. He thinks that the "two men in 100" wear the same kind of shoes that he wears, which look like those used for walking on water. This man also believes that the percentage of women who walk straight is so small that it is not worth considering.

The whole trouble he attributes to shoes. He says men and women were never intended to wear shoes at all. It is his observation that when the foot is flattened out and the toes spread the natural movement of the body is to straighten itself. This he attributes to certain muscular action, and he has a chart to prove it.

When the foot is compressed by a shoe and the toes jammed together there is a sympathetic tension on the whole muscular and nervous system which draws the body forward or bends it.

It has been noted in his calculations that persons in bathing costume on the beach walk much straighter. It is also a notable fact that the Indian, who runs barefooted on the plains, has the proudest kind of a walk. He is as straight as an iron pole.

HE CHANGED HIS MIND.

Praying for Death, the Lover Struggled Against It When Menaced.

A curious case of nervous hallucination is reported in the London Telegraph. At Bordeaux recently a hysterical Frenchman visited the tomb where his beloved was laid. Carrying a lighted candle and kneeling by her coffin, he exclaimed passionately: "Would I could die! Would I could die!" Just then the wind closed the door and extinguished the light. The bereaved lover who had just prayed for death rushed for the door; he could not open it; he tore at it, knocked, kicked, struggled, calling loudly for help. No answer, only the utter silence and darkness of the tomb. His wish to die was forgotten. He sank down and wept; his tears were not for his beloved, but for himself. He felt the pangs of hunger; he thought of his candle and cut it into four parts. He ate the first quarter the first day, the second quarter on the second day, the third on the third day, and the last quarter on the fourth day. No more, and he must die of starvation. He made one more desperate effort to open the door, when it suddenly opened and the keeper of the cemetery stood before him; the sunlight blinded him, and he fell from exhaustion. He had been there just four hours.

A RIGHT START.

The Child is Lucky Who Gets the Proper Kind of One.

Not Wealth or Position Alone Means "Starting Right"—Health Counts for Something.

When a child is born to very wealthy parents, we are inclined to say, "what a start in life it has." If it is a girl, the father may give a bridal present of a million dollars. If a boy, the father may take him in partnership, and give him many millions.

But what does all this amount to if the family history shows that there is a marked tendency to the development of serious disease? What comfort, if one expects that every slight cold may terminate in consumption; or every nervous pain indicate approaching nervous prostration, or even insanity? Wealth cannot make happiness when pain is present, and the shadow of approaching disease always hovering near.

Happy is the child who inherits a sound constitution. He laughs at a little cold, and does not mind a darting pain or two. But, alas, many of us inherit a tendency to weak lungs, an inability to endure exposure, or some weakness of the nervous system. Yet, with a perfectly sound ancestry, we may still suffer from all these and other complaints.

It is a great gift to have a strong nervous system. Neuralgia, sciatica, nervous dyspepsia, inability to concentrate the mind, sleeplessness, and nervousness are symptoms of weak nerves. Opiates and other narcotics, do not strengthen nerves; they weaken, debilitate. To be sure they may quiet a temporary pain, but the real cause, which is one of weakness, remains.

Weak nerves call for food and nerve tonics. The hypophosphites are generally acknowledged to be the best nerve tonics. They tone up the whole nervous system, and every part of the body responds. Cod-liver oil supplies a valuable food to all the tissues; while the medicinal agents which naturally exist in this oil exert their good effects also. Scott's Emulsion is a combination of the best cod-liver oil and the purest hypophosphites. It is called an emulsion, because the oil is emulsified or digested. Hence it is more acceptable to invalids, and all those who do not have very strong digestive powers. One dose of Scott's Emulsion may not quiet pain, but one bottle will often so strengthen the nervous system that no pain will be present to quiet.

Nearly twenty-five years ago the proprietors of Scott's Emulsion discovered a process of emulsifying Cod-liver Oil, so as to remove from it almost entirely its obnoxious fishy taste and smell, and at the same time increasing its food and remedial properties. They found also that by combining the Hypophosphites with it that they added still further to its power.

Since that time thousands of imitations have come into the field, but the original has never been equalled.

COPYRIGHT, 1894, BY BRET HARTE.

"When shall I go?"

He glanced through the window, already growing lighter with the coming dawn. The relief would pass in a few moments; the time seemed propitious.

"At once," he said. "I will send Rose to you."

But she had already passed into the closet, and was tapping upon some inner door. He heard the sound of hinges turning and the rustling of garments. She reappeared, holding the curtains of the closet together, with her hand and said: "Go! When she comes to your office for the pass, you will know that I have gone."

He turned away. "Stop!" she said faintly.

He turned back. Her expression had again changed. Her face was deadly pale; a strange tremor seemed to have taken possession of her. She dropped the curtain. Her beautiful arms moved slightly forward; it seemed to him that she would in the next moment have extended both her hands. But even then she said hurriedly: "Go! Go!" and slipped again behind the curtain.

He quickly descended the stairs as the sound of trampling feet on the road and the hurried word of command announced the return of the scouting party. The officer had little report to make, beyond the fact that a morning mist, creeping along the valley, prevented any further observation, and bade fair to interrupt their own communications with the camp. Everything was quiet in the west, although the enemy's lines along the ridge seemed to have receded.

Brant had listened impatiently, for a new idea had seized him. Hooker was of the party, and was the one man in the party in whom he could partly confide and obtain a disguise. He at once made his way to the commissary wagons, one of which he knew Hooker used as a tent. Hastily telling him that he wished to visit the pickets without recognition, he induced him to lend him his slouched hat and frock coat, leaving with him his own distinguishing tunic, hat and sword. He resisted the belt and pistols which Hooker would have forced upon him. As he left the wagon he was half amusedly conscious that his old companion was characteristically examining the garments he had left behind with mingled admiration and envy. But he did not know, as he slipped out of the camp, that Mr. Hooker was quietly trying them on, before a broken mirror in the wagon head.

The gray light of that summer morning was already so strong that to avoid detection he quickly dropped into the shadow of the gully that sloped towards the run. The hot mist which the scouts had seen was now lying like a tranquil sea between him and the pickets of the enemy's rear guard, which it seemed to submerge, and was clinging in moist tenuous swathes—like drawn out cotton wool—along the ridge, half obliterating its face. From the valley in the rear it was already stealing in a thin white line up the slope like the advance of a ghostly column, with a stealthiness that, in spite of himself, touched him with superstitious significance. A warm perfume, languid and treacherous, as from the swamp magnolia seemed to rise from the half hidden marsh. An ominous silence that appeared to be a part of this veiling of all things under the clear, opal tinted sky above was so little like the hush of rest and peace that he half yearned for the outburst of musketry and tumult of attack that might dispel it. All that he had ever heard or dreamed of the insidious south, with its languid subleties of climate, and of race, seemed to encompass him here.

But the next moment he saw the figures he was waiting for stealing towards him from the shadow of the gully beneath the negro quarters.

Even in that uncertain light there was no mistaking the tall figure, the gaudily striped, clinging gown and turbaned head. And then a strange revulsion of feeling, quite characteristic of the emotional side of his singular temperament, overcame him. He was taking leave of his wife—the dream of his youth—perhaps forever! It should be no parting in anger as at Robles; it should be with a tenderness that would blot out their past in their separate memories—God knows! it might be even a parting that at that moment was a joining of them in eternity. In his momentary exaltation it even struck him that it was a duty, no less sacred, no less unselfish than the one to which he had devoted his life. The light was growing stronger; he could hear voices in the nearest picket line, and the sound of a cough in the invading mist. He made a hurried sign to the oncoming figure to follow him, ran ahead and halted at last in the cover of a hackmatack bush. Still gazing forward over the marsh, he steadily held out his hand behind him, as the rustling skirt came nearer. At last his hand was touched—but even at that touch he started, and turned quickly.

It was not his wife, but Rose!—her mulatto double! Her face was rigid with fright, her beady eyes staring in their china sockets; her white teeth chattering. Yet she would have spoken.

"Hush!" he said, clutching her hand, in a fierce whisper. "Not a word!" She was holding something white in her fingers; he snatched it quickly. It was a note from his wife—not in the disguised hand of her first warning, but in one that he remembered as if it were a voice from their past.

"Forgive my disobeying you to save you from capture, disgrace or death—which would have come to you where you were going! I have taken Rose's pass. You need not fear that your honor will suffer by it, for if I am stopped I shall confess that I took it from her. Think no more of me, Clarence, but only for yourself. You are in danger."

He crushed the letter in his hand. "Tell me," he said, in a fierce whisper, seizing her arm, "and speak low. When did you leave her?"

"Sho'ly—just now!" gasped the frightened woman.

He flung her aside. There might be still time to overtake and save her before she reached the picket lines. He ran up the gully and out on to the slope towards the first guard post. But a familiar challenge reached his ear, and his heart stopped beating.

"Who goes there?"

There was a pause, a rattle of arms, voices, another pause—and Brant stood rooted to the spot. Then the voice rose again, slowly and clearly: "Pass the mulatto woman!"

Thank God! she was saved! But the thought had scarcely crossed his mind before it seemed to him that a blinding crackle of sparks burst out along the whole slope below the wall, a characteristic yell, which he knew too well, rang in his ears, and an undulating line of dusty soldiers came leaping like gray wolves out of the mist upon his pickets. He heard the shouts of his men falling back as they fired; the harsh commands of a few officers hurrying to their posts, and knew that he was hopelessly surprised and surrounded.

He ran forward among his disorganized men. To his consternation no one seemed to heed him! Then the remembrance of his disguise flashed upon him. But he had only time to throw away his hat and snatch a sword from a falling lieutenant before a scorching flash seemed to pass before his eyes and burn through his hair, and he dropped like a log beside his subaltern.

An aching under the bandage around his head, where the spent bullet had grazed his scalp, and the sound of impossible voices in his ears were all he knew as he struggled slowly back to consciousness again. Even then it still seemed a delusion, for he was lying in the hospital of the headquarters, with officers of the division staff around him, and the division commander himself standing by his cot, and regarding him with an air of grave, but not unkindly concern. But the wounded man felt instinctively that it was not the effect of his physical condition, and a sense of shame came suddenly over him, which was not dissipated by his superior's words. For, motioning the others aside, the major general leaned over his cot, and said:

"Until a few months ago the report was that you had been captured in the first rush of the rear guard, which we were rolling up for your attack, and when you were picked up, just now, in plain clothes on the slope, you were not recognized. The o[illegible] be as improbable as [illegible] added, significantly.

The miserable truth flashed across Brant's mind. Hooker must have been captured in his clothes—perhaps in some extravagant sally—and had not been recognized in the confusion by his own officers. Nevertheless he raised his eyes to his superior.

"You got my note?"

The general's brow darkened. "Yes," he said, slowly, "but finding you thus unprepared—I had been thinking just now that you had been deceived by that woman—or by others—and that it was a clumsy forgery. He stopped, and seeing the hopeless bewilderment in the face of the wounded man, added, more kindly: "But we will not talk of that in your present condition. The doctor says a few hours will put you straight again. Get strong—for I want you to lose no time—for your own sake—to report yourself at Washington."

"Report myself—at Washington!" repeated Brant, slowly.

"That was last night's order," said the commander, with military curtness. Then he burst out: "I don't understand it, Brant! I believe you have been misunderstood, misrepresented, perhaps maligned—and I shall make it my business to see the thing through—but these are the department orders. And for the present—I am sorry to say you are relieved of your command."

He turned away, and Brant closed his eyes. With it it seemed to him that he closed his career. No one would ever understand his explanation—even had he been tempted to give it, and he knew he never would. Everything was over now. Even this wretched bullet had not struck him fairly, and culminated his fate as it might. For an instant he recalled his wife's last offer to fly with him beyond the seas—beyond this cruel injustice—but even as he recalled it he knew that flight meant the worst of all—a half confession. But she had escaped. Thank God for that! Again and again, in his hopeless perplexity, this comfort returned to him. He had saved her. He had done his duty. And harping upon this in his strange fatalism, it at last seemed to him that this was for what he had lived, for what he had suffered, for what he had fitly ended his career. Perhaps it was left for him now to pass his remaining years in forgotten exile, even as his father had, his father—his breath came quickly at the thought—God knows, perhaps as wrongfully accused. It may have been a providence that she had borne no child, to whom this dreadful heritage could be transmitted.

There was something of this strange and fateful resignation in his face, a few hours later, when he was able to be helped again into the saddle. But he could see in the eyes of the few comrades who commiseratingly took leave of him a vague, half-repressed awe of some indefinite weakness in the man that mingled with their heartfelt devotion to a gallant soldier. Yet even this touched him no longer. He cast a glance at the house and at the room where he had parted from her, at the slope from which she had passed, and rode away.

And then, as his figure disappeared down the road, the restrained commentary of wonder, surmise and criticism broke out:

"It must have been something highty bad, for the old man, who swears by him, looked rather troubled. And it was deuced queer, you know, this changing clothes with somebody—just before the surprise!"

"Nonsense! It's something away back of that! Didn't you hear the old man say that the orders for him to report himself came from Washington last night? No," the speaker lowered his voice, "Strangeways says that he had regularly sold himself out to one of them d—d secesh woman spies! It's the old Marc Antony business over again."

"Now I think of it," said the younger subaltern, "he did seem mightily taken with one of those quadroons or mulattoes he issued orders against—I suppose that was a blind for us! I remember the first day he saw her; he was regularly keen to know all about her."

Maj. Curtis gave a short laugh. "That mulatto, Martin, was a white woman, burnt-corked! She was trying to get through the lines last night and fell off a wall, or got a knock on the head from a sentry's carbine. When she was brought in Dr. Simmons set to washing the blood off her face the cork came off, and the whole thing came out. Brant hushed it up—and the woman, too—in his own quarters! It's supposed now that she got away somehow in the rush!"

"It goes back further than that, gentlemen," said the adjutant, authoritatively. "They say his wife was a howling secessionist four years ago in California, was mixed up in a conspiracy, and he had to leave on account of it. Look how thick he and that Miss Faulkner became before he helped her off!"

CYCLING COMMENT.

Charles Dunlap has purchased a Zimmy wheel.

William Schaefer, of West Second street, will ride a Stearn's racer this year.

J. Hazelwood Craig. of Dunellen, is now representing the Eldridge Bicycle Company at that place.

The Crescent Wheelmen will hold a special meeting this evening at which important business will be considered.

Frank G. Tower, of Bloomfield, has been appointed a L. A. W. representative by Chief Consul Gentle, of the New Jersey division of the league.

Chief Counsul Phinney, of the New Jersey Division of the L. A. W., has appointed the following State Racing Board: E. W. Sargent, F. A. Fish and T. E. McAfee.

The officers of the Crescent Wheelmen desire The Press to say that the club runs are only intended for club members and no outsiders are allowed, especially boys under eighteen years of age.

L. H. Bill, the manager of the Lozier & Company's bicycle factory, and Sydney B. Bouman, one of the leading bicycle dealers of New York, were the guests of F. L. C. Martin on Sunday.

As J. Hazelwood Craig, of Dunellen avenue, was riding down to the High School yesterday morning his chain broke and he walked to the nearest station at Grant avenue and took the train for Plainfield.

"Columbia bicycle is standard of excellence," is the testimony of thousands of riders. For years the Pope Manufacturing Company have given the people an unexcelled wheel and they will still continue to do so.

Capt. Chamberlain, of the Union County Roadsters, says that his club will not have its annual race meet on May 30th, but will confine its racing to a series of events among the members to take place during the summer.

Of all the riders who have been on the track during the last three years, W. W. Taxis, of Philadelphia, was perhaps the unluckiest of all. Plainfield people will remember the terrible tumble he took on the Crescent Oval two years ago. He has now decided to ride again after an absence from the track of a year and a half.

Secretary Bassett. of the League of American Wheelmen, desires to say that owing to the rush of renewals of membership, over 500 being received each day, and a delay in the receiving of new membership cards, members must not get impatient if their letters are not promptly acknowledged, as all will be attended to in regular order.

VARIOUS SPORTS.

Two of the latest recruits in the business men's gymnasium class at the Y. M. C. A. are Rev. C. R. Barnes, D. D., and Rev. H. S. Johnston.

The first annual track and field championship of the newly formed New Jersey Interscholastic Association, says the New York Sun, will be held on the grounds of the New Jersey Athletic Club, Bayonne, N. J., on Saturday, June 6th. President Smith has appointed his committee to manage the meeting and everything points to a successful day's sport. The association is composed of the leading schools of New Jersey and the boys will work hard to win championship honors. Arrangements have been made with the officers of the New Jersey Athletic Club so that the school boys can use the track of the New Jersey Athletic Club on Saturdays for practice. They expect to begin training outdoors on Saturday next.

Arrangements are now being made by the New Jersey Athlectic Club for the Decoration day athlectic meet to be held at Bergen Point on Saturday, May 30th, beginning at 1 p. m. There will be a number of track and field events and several bicycle races. Harry McMillan of Philadelphia will referee the athletic events, and Frank Prial will act in the same capacity for the bicycle racing men. A championship game of basketball will be played by two of the strongest teams in this district. A football game will be played by two teams under Association rules. A local race of interest will be a team race open only to the schools of the New Jersey Interscholastic Association in which the High School of this city expects to enter a team. The final event will be a baseball game between the N. J. A. C. and Bayonne Field Club nines.

From present prospects this spring will be a lively one in athletics at the High School. A very important meeting of the Plainfield High School Athletic Association was held yesterday afternoon, and the plans for the season were made. Charles Noble, manager of the baseball team, made his report. He stated that it would be impossible for the High School to put a team on the diamond this year, as most all of the players were either unable to play, as they were on the track team, or else were incapacitated by some physical ailment The first game with the Montclair High School he had already cancelled, and was authorized by the association to cancel the rest. There seemed no lack of interest in general athletics, and it was decided with much enthusiasm to hold a fleid day on May 9th, open to students at school which are members of the New Jersey Interscholastic Athletic Association. The list of the events was decided on as follows: 100 yard dash,220 yard dash,440 yard dash, putting the shot, pole vault, one mile bicycle race, one quarter mile bicycle race, throwing, running high jump, 220 yard hurdle race. The committee of arrangements will be composed of George P. Smith, chairman, Walter Serrell, Charles Noble, F. W. Cornwell and H. L. Richardson. The question of a track team was discussed and George P. Smith was elected captain. Wilbur F. Cornwell is already manager. It was then ascertained who were the candidates for the team. They are as follows: 100 yard dash, Craig, Richardson, Smith, Serrell, Morgan and Stewart; 220 yard dash, Richardson, Craig, Smith, Lederer and Morgan; 440 yard dash, Lederer, Richardson, Craig, Serrell, Eggerding and Morgan; one mile run,none; one mile walk, Noble; 220 yard hurdle race, Smith, Noble and Craig; putting the shot, Smith, Carroll, Serrell and Runyon; throwing the hammer, Smith, Runyon and Serrell; pole vault, Cornwell, Smith and Carroll; runaing high jump,Craig and Carroll; one mile bicycle race, Runyon, Coard and Hillman; running broad jump, Serrell and Craig; junior 100 yard dash, Stewart. Those that will try for a place on the team of four men that will contest in the relay race in the games of the New Jersey Athletic Club on May 30th are Richardson, Serrell, Smith, Eggerding, Morgan, Craig and Lederer.

GOLF.

A meeting of the Board of Governors of the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club was held last Tuesday evening at the home of the vice-president, George P. Mellick, of LaGrande avenue. The following committees were appointed: Golf committee—T. F. Sykes, chairman; H. W. Beebe,W. C. Baker, J. S. Anthony, A. D. Shepard, Jr. Tennis Committee—J. H. Atterbury, chairman; J. H. P. Wharton, C. Pfeiffer, R. A. Beebe, Sherwood West, Grounds committee—W. L. C. Glenney, chairman; Jan. Van Her Werden, Carl Walz. House committee—G. P. Mellick, chairman; John Doull Miller, B. VanD. Hedges, M. D., F. W. Walz. Applications for membership were acted upon. The question of joining the National Golf Association was discussed and the matter left in the hands of the golf committee. The tennis courts and golf course will be put in order as soon as the weather permits. They will probably be ready for play about May 1st. The golf course will be opened later than usual on accouut of the newness of the ground. It will be quite popular with the ladies this season, and a large number expect to try their hand at that fascinating game. The varied attractions of the club drew many into its ranks last year, and it is expected that the membership will be greatly increased this year. Those joining at once will, of course, enjoy the benefits of the club from the opening of the season.

MAGNIFICENT LOAN EXHIBITION OF THE CAMERA CLUB OPENED.

The Affair Attended by the Cultured People of City and Borough—Beautiful Things Produced by Artistic Hands.

Never before in the history of Plainfield has art ever received such a popular recognition as it did last evening at the opening of the loan exhibition of the Plainfield Camera Club. The exhibition was a grand success, both from an artistic point of view and as regards the attendance. The citizens of Plainfield responded generously when the club asked for their art treasures and then, last evening, they turned out in full force at the invitation of the club and spent a delightful evening amid a collection of paintings, sketches, porcelain and other works of art, the equal of which has never before been seen in Plainfield or any of the neighboring towns.

The exhibition was planned several months ago and the members of the club started out among their friends in search of exhibits. How well they succeeded was shown at the opening last night. Every bit of available space in the large rooms of the Camera Club, which are located on the top floor of the Babcock building, was crowded with the work of some artist, amateur or professional, and the guests were given some idea of the art resources of this city.

The rooms of the club were specially arranged for the occasion. The main room was papered to a certain height in dark red as a fitting back ground for the pictures.

Numerous electric lights illuminated the rooms and cast a bright light on the exhibits. In the main rooms tables and show cases were arranged, and on these the miscellaneous porcelain and works of art were displayed. Part of the photographing room in the rear was devoted to the etchings and engravings, while architectual designs and sketches filled the rest of the room. The hall contained its share of the exhibits, while the ladies' room was devoted to the work of the club.

The finishing touches were put on the exhibition late yesterday afternoon and all was made ready for the opening. Dressing rooms were arranged on the floor below and here the elevator deposited its load of passengers to allow them to lay aside their wraps. Soon after eight o'clock the guests began to arrive in a steady stream and the room presented an animated scene, with its occupants, many of them in evening dress, busily engaged in viewing some particularly handsome specimen and in discussing the merits of some rare old piece of porcelain. In one of the rear rooms, the Young Men's Symphony orchestra, led by P. Ludwig Conde, rendered a number of enjoyable selections.

Shortly arter nine o'clock, Otto Arens, president of the Camera Club, stepped to the slightly raised platform at one end of the room and, in a few appropriate sentences, introduced Mayor Gilbert as the first speaker of the evening. The Mayor spoke very highly of the energy and enterprise shown by the Camera Club in arranging for such a magnificent exhibition and complimented them on the results of their efforts. He also spoke well of the club and its regular work and thought it a very good way to pass the leisure hours. B. A. Hegeman, Jr., mayor of the borough, also made appropriate remarks and added to the expressions of pleasure and surprise over the many rich treasures that Plainfield has.

After an interval, during which the orchestra rendered several selections, George A. Audsley, chairman of the exhibition committee, delivered a very able address on "Art" and spoke of the training of the young to have have an eye for the beautiful. The audience was a representative one and a number of the leading citizens of the city and borough were present with their families.

Catalogues, which were a work of art in themselves, contained a short description of each article and were sold at the door.

It is beyond the province of a daily paper to give anything like a detailed description of the exhibition, although there was scarcely an exhibit there that did not merit especial mention.

As the visitor entered the room, after a casual glance at the tables, the most prominent objects to attract attention were two large Chinese religious banners hung at either end of the main room. One was made of scarlet cloth, embroidered with all sorts of fantastic characters in silk and gold. The other was of crimson satin, elaborately decorated in gold and brilliant. A number of smaller embroidered hangings and a Japanese court robe graced the sides of the room. They were all the property of W. G. Hockridge. Along the southern end of the room was arranged a number of large exhibits. One was a Japanese cabinet of carved wood, beautifully decorated. There were two seats, the work of Italian wood carvers, a Chinese cabinet of elaborately carved dark wood and a wonderful curiousity from Japan, a Buddhist shrine, richly carved and gilded inside and out, and containing standing figure of Quanon, one of the Japanese gods.

In front of these was a glass case containing a collection of Chinese and Japanese curiousities. In the corner a cabinet contained a choice collection of objects in porcelain painted by the late Mrs. W. H. Griffin. A row of three tables came next in line. On one an exhibit of Oriental and European porcelain. A number of pieces of Japanese porcelain and some American amateur and professional work from the collections of Mrs. George H. Babcock and Miss M. Clauson were contained in another. Work by the latter was also exhibited as well as specimens of china painting by Mrs. Philip B. Macintyre, Mrs. J. M. MacNaughton, and Miss Lillian Fritts. The third table was covered with handsome painted porcelain, the work of Miss Beatrice Doane Craig.

Opposite the entrance was a long glass case containing a beautiful display of embroidery and textile fabrics. Among the embroideries was the portion of a box cover of Chinese embroidered silk. It belonged to the Emperor of China but was stolen from the Summer Palace during the war between England and China. There was a handsome red stool embroidered in colored silks and gold by Miss Mary Embury, and some of the work of Miss A. B. Contrelli, Miss Helen A. Coward and Miss E. B. Graham, beside a number of interesting curios.

In the centre of the room was a large table on which was displayed a magnificient collection of Oriental porcelain, chiefly Chinese, the property of T. E. H. Curtis, G. A. Audsley, Julian Scott and Mrs. George H. Babcock, and valued at over $10,000. Many of them are centuries old and cannot be replaced.

On one side of this central table was a glass-covered case, containing a fine collection of Japanese books and paintings, the property of G. A. Audsley. The books were finely illustrated by some of the most famous of Japanese artists, and were very beautiful. A miscellaneous collection of trinkets and curiosities, most of them of foreign manufacture, occupied another case on the other side of the central table. A small stand contained four pieces of very rare and valuable Sevres porcelain, the property of T. E. H. Curtis. On either side of this were long tables. A handsome exhibit of decorated porcelain, the work of Mrs. Colles T. Pond, occupied one. The plates of royal blue, with an elaborate scroll-work design in raised gold, were particularly pleasing in appearance. The other table held a mixed collection of porcelain and pottery, including some work of the late Mrs. W. H. Griffin, Staffordshire, Wedgewood, and Old Liverpool porcelain, and German stone work. There were also several photographs on porcelain.

The stand at the northern end of the main room was mostly devoted to the work of W. J. Audsley, one of the finest amateur artists in the country on porcelain and potery. There were also plaques by G. A. and M. A. Audsley.

The walls of the room were covered with the oil paintings and water colors loaned for the occasion. There were a number of very good ones but lack of space prevents special mention Among the local artists whose works were exhibited, were Julian Scott, W. H. Griffin, Harold Serrell, Miss Harriet French, Miss Kate Newhall, Mrs. A. M. Ross, H. Seymour Barnes, Mrs. Elizabeth Kitchel, George Wharton Edwards, Miss Ella Serrell, Mrs. Nelson Runyon, Mrs. John D. Runyon, Henry McBride, Miss Caroline D. Elliott, L. B. C. Joseph, Berthold Audsley, M. A. Audsley, A. M. Hicks, G. H. Schorey, K. E. DeGalm, Mrs. A. H. Burrows and E. B. Graham. The most valuable thing in all the collection is an original drawing in black chalk by Michael Angelo, entitled "The Lost Soul." It is now the property of E. C. Perkins.

On a painted cabinet in semi-mediæval style, designed and painted by G. A. Audsley, are several famous pieces of Sevres porcelain. There are two highly ornamented vases, once in the possession of Marie Antoinette, and a beer jug of Vienna porcelain presented to Napoleon I. by an Austrian ambassador.

The etching and engraving department occupied part of one of the rooms in the rear of the main room. Here a handsome and valuable display was shown, a number of engravings by John Dalziel. Several speci-

TALK OF THE CONVENTION

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVORERS HEAR OF THE BIG EVENT TO BE HELD HERE.

Dr. Brett, State President Announces Some of the Speakers Who Will be Present to Give Spiritual Enthusiasm.

An important and interesting meeting of the Plainfield Local Union of Christian Endeavor societies was held last night in the First Presbyterian church. The meeting opened with a service of song, led by Horace J. Martin, and a choir of Endeavorers. The stirring Endeavor songs, sung with enthusiasm, made an excellent opening for a meeting of unusual interest.

Prayer by Rev. T. E. Davis, of Bound Brook, and Scripture reading by Rev. A. I. Martine followed, then began the business of the evening. The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved, then the Secretary, Miss Florence G. Hawkins, read her annual report, giving a summary of work done by the union during the past year. In February of last year a reception was given to the delegates of the Y. M. C. A. convention. During the hottest weeks of August, two union consecration meetings were held, the attendance being good and the meetings full of power. Who that attended the Atlantic City convention will ever forget those days beside Old Ocean? The sunrise prayer meetings on the beach, the consecration and enduement services, the services at the Life Saving Stations, all will be long remembered by those who participated in them. In November, Plainfield and Paterson delegates met for a supper and reception at the First Baptist church, and convention days were lived over again. On Christmas morning, the first union Christmas service ever held by this union took place. The Christmas spirit of charity and love filled every heart. Through this winter, for four weeks, the Endeavorers entered with the deepest interest into the evangelistic services which they had suggested to the Ministers' Association. The last service was led by President E. E. Anthony, and participated in by over one hundred Endeavorers.

Fifteen out of nineteen societies have sent condensed reports of their work during the past year. The record is one of helpful meetings, committee duties faithfully done, and much outside work in various lines accomplished. We have done well, but have we done our best? There is still room for increased effort. May the next year show a still better record of work for Christ and His church.

The officers for the coming year were now elected as follows: President, E. E. Anthony; first vice-president, G. W. DeForrest; second vice-president, A. I. Martine; secretary and treasurer, Miss Florence G. Hawkins.

Rev. Cornelius Brett, of Jersey City, was now introduced and delivered a deeply interesting address upon "Preparation for the Plainfield, '96 Convention."

"This convention," he said, "will be arranged somewhat differently from any that have preceded it. Evangelistic effort has heretofore held a second place in Christian Endeavor Conventions. In this one it will hold emphatically the first place. Rev. B. Fay Mills will be in your city before the opening of the convention. He preaches now more than ever to the church of God. It is a revival of Christians that this world needs today. You are promised a rare treat in the presence at your convention of Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage, Father Endeavor Clark, too, has promised to be here if he is in the country at that time. We have asked "Teddy" Roosevelt to come and tell you how to run your city, but we are not yet certain that he will be here. For the missionary part of the programme, we intend to have the best that are in the country at that time. For the music, the Park sisters with their cornets, the Rutgers College Glee Club, and a chorus choir under such efficient leadershsp as you have had tonight, ought to make the welkin ring with sweet melody. The finance committee and the entertainment committee will have their hands full in preparing for this great convention, but I am sure they will do their part well.

"But there is another sort of preparation required. Pray for the Convention in your closets, at the family altar and in your society meetings. Gather in recruits; make your one thousand members two thousand. Every society will be on exhibition; have as good a society as you can. It is the receptive Spirit that we shall need if we are individually to receive a blessing from this convention. Throw wide open the windows of your soul; God is prodigal in His gifts. And may He give you all such an outpouring of His Spirit at this '96 Convention as was never witnessed at a convention before."

And offering was then received, while Miss Bessie Blair sang very sweetly, "When our ships come sailing home."

Rev. T. E. Davis then made a few remarks in regard to "Washington, '96," telling of the excellent arrangements that have been made for the New Jersey delegates, and urged all to go who could possibly do so. Singing and sentence prayers asking God's blessing on the Endeavorers of Plainfield and their Convention followed, then the meeting was closed by the Mizpah Benediction.

ENTERTAINED BY THE LADIES.

Sons of Veterans Given a Reception Full of Pleasure.

Red Men's Hall contained a large and very select audience last evening, when the lady friends of John Hand Camp, No. 28, Sons of Veterans, gave them an entertainment and dance. First Lieutenant H. C. McVoy was chosen master of ceremonies, and in his usual jovial manner announced the several numbers. The first selection was a piano solo by Mrs. Reilly, followed by a recitation by Miss Maude Mosher. A piano duet was given by Miss Tallamy and Miss Mary Graves. A recitation by Miss Sutton and piano solos by Miss Graves and Miss Jennie Smith were rendered. Miss Lottie Chamberlain then favored the audience with a reading. A vocal duet and character sketch by Miss Agnes Bailey and Master Callahan, accompanied by James Bailey on the piano, was a pleasing number. Little Miss Bailey was kindly remembered with a present of a basket of choice flowers. A reading by Mrs Charles Steiner was enjoyed as was also a song by Jennie Smith. The last number was a recitation by Miss Mosher.

The floor was cleared and dancing was then indulged in and continued till the early hours of the morning. The music was furnished by Bert Naylor. At about midnight an excellent collation was served. The committee to whom is due the success of the affair consisted of Mrs. W. V. Sutton, Miss May Dowd, Miss May Hughes and Miss Mary Graves. They were assisted by H. C. McVoy, Willard V. Sutton, Raymond McVoy, Charles F. Stephens and Fred Sutton.

RECITATION, TEA AND FLOWERS.

Delightful Social Event Held at a Washington Avenue Home.

A delightful afternoon tea that was more than a tea was given yesterday afternoon by Miss Jessie Munger, daughter of H. Raymond Munger, of Washington avenue. Mrs. Munger and Miss Munger were assisted in receiving by Mrs. Talcott, of Middletown, N. Y.; Miss Munger, an aunt of the hostess; Mrs. Warren, of Fanwood; Miss Evarts, of St. Paul; Mrs. James Joy and Miss Erskine. After social chat, the guests were seated and entertained delightfully for more than an hour by Miss Evarts, who recited to a charmed audience. Her first selection was a scene from "Twelfth Night," followed by Mrs. Browning's "The Rhyme of the Duchess May." An encore elicited a humorous selection from Bret Harte.

There was then an intermission, during which the Misses Margaret McCutchen and Cora Haviland passed among the guests carrying large straw hat baskets filled with beautiful pink and white roses, from which they gave a long-stemmed beauty to each person. Miss Evarts' next selection was from one of George Elliot's long entitled poems, "The Spanish Gypsy." Every one was charmed with Miss Evarts' rendering of her selections, which created a desire for indefinite encores. At the conclusion of the recitations ices were served, while friend talked with friend.

MRS. FROST'S TEA.

A Charming Afternoon Event for Plainfield Society Women.

A charming afternoon tea was given at the home of Councilman George H. Frost, of Watchung avenue, yesterday by Mrs. George H. Frost, in honor of her daughter-in-law, Mrs. Charles H. Frost. Mrs. Frost was assisted in receiving her guests by Mrs. Henry R. Halloway, Mrs. O. R. King, Mrs. D. W. Pond, Mrs. W. E. Honeyman. Mrs. Henry C. Bowen, Mrs. E. H. Ladd, Jr. and Mrs. W. H. Murray presided at the table in the dining room, where the following young ladies assisted, the Misses Pierson, Bowen, Helen Clark, Carrie Vail, Annie Muller, Harriet Halloway and Clara Frost. The table was tastefully decorated with pink roses and ribbon while pink candelabra added to the artistic effect.

The tea was largely attended and the parlors were crowded throughout the afternoon.

C. T. Rogers, of New Market, has recovered from a very severe illness.

THEY ARE FOR M'KINLEY

ONLY ONE WARD COMMITTED, BUT THE REST ARE FAVORABLE.

Republicans Elect Delegates to the State and Congressional Conventions—The Ohio Man Seems to Be Very Popular.

The Republican primaries were not largely attended last night by the voting element of that party, though all the party leaders were in evidence. Although the First ward was the only one to give instructions as to Presidential preferences, there was a strong feeling for McKinley, and there is but little doubt that he is the most popular Republican among Plainfielders for the Presidential nomination. The results of the primaries were as follows:

FIRST WARD.

Although all the "big guns" of the First ward attended the Republican primary of that ward, in the Republican Association hall, last night, the attendance was very small. W. R. Codington, was chairman and J. B. Coward secretary of the meeting. The delegates elected were as follows: State convention, J. B. Coward, and Amos Andrews; Congressional convention, William Addis, Louis Donovan and W. A. Woodruff. The meeting was full of McKinleyism and the delegates were instructed to support the McKinley and Hobart delegates.

SECOND WARD.

The Second ward primary, was held in the Bryant School building, and was presided over by George D. Patten. Armstrong Mulford was secretary and C. A. Baynon and A. E. Slauson, judges. The delegates selected for the State Convention were Marion S. Ackerman and C. A. Baynon. Those to the Congressional Convention were C. B. Corwin, Armstrong Mulford, Stephen Cahoone and John B. Dumont. After the election of the delegates had been accomplished, Henry E. Bowen offered the following resolution:

Resolved, That we have the fullest confidence in the ability and statesmanship of the Hon. William McKinley, and we believe if he is selected as the leader in the Presidential canvass of the Republican party he will be triumphantly elected. We recognize him as the champion of the American idea of protection, and as the friend of American industries and the American workingman.

The resolution was seconded by Mr. Corwin, and opposed by J. B. Dumont and H. B. Newhall, who did not want to see the delegates pledged for any one for the Presidential nomination. It was suggested to Mr. Bowen that he withdraw the resolution, but he declined to do so and said "I will not withdraw the resolution favoring a man whom I believe will be nominated and elected." A motion was formally made to lay the resolution on the table and it was carried by a small majority.

THIRD WARD.

The Third ward primary was held at the Casino and was called to order by R. F. Murray. P. E. Marsh was chosen chairman, with H. C. Runyon as secretary. R. F. Murray and W. T. Kirk were appointed inspectors. C. J. Fisk and William T. Kirk were appointed as delegetes to the State convention, while R. G. Horr, J. W. Murray, Sr., H. C. Runyon and J. F. Hubbard were appointed as delegates to the Congressional convention. The above-named delegates were empowered to fill all vacancies.

FOURTH WARD.

The Fourth ward Republican caucus was called to order last evening at 8:15 by Wm. Newcorn, who was afterward made chairman. James Huntington was chosen secretary, Wm. B. Ayers judge and James Stewart inspector. Mr. Newcorn read the call of the meeting which was for the purpose of electing two delegates to attend the State convention and five delegates to attend the Congressional convention. Wm. A. Westphal and William Newcorn were chosen for the State convention and James Stewart, W. B. Ayers, Wm. Newcorn, W. Fisher and Wm. A. Westphal for the Congressional convention. They were empowered to select their own alternates. A motion was made that the delegates follow the dictates of their own conscience and consequently they were not instructed, though it is believed that they stand for McKinley. George Rockafellow, who was nominated as a delegate to the Congressional convention, declined and the secretary cast the ballot for the remaining five

WESTFIELD.

The Westfield primary was held last evening. The delegates to the State convention are Charles N. Coding and L. M. Whitaker, and the delegates to the Congressional convention are A. K. Gale, Wm. Schoonmaker, C. H. Denman and A. K. Jones.

FANWOOD.

The Republican primary for Fanwood township was held last night, at which Sheriff George Kyte was elected delegate to the State convention and E. L. Hand and L. W. Miller to the Congressional convention. The delegates favor McKinley.

FLAW IN RAINES LAW

Ridiculous Error Discovered in New York's New Excise Measure.

SEWERS AND BEER CLOSELY JOINED

One Section of the New Statute Provides for the Repeal of a Law of 1893, Relating to a Town Sewer.

Albany, April 10.—A prominent lawyer is authority for the statement that even if the Raines liquor law does repeal another law relating to the sewerage in the town of Gates, Monroe county, and even if this is proven to be an error, the law must still be enforced as found. It was part and parcel of the Raines law, and it made no difference whether the question of sewerage was germane to the matter of excise or not. The only question was as to the condition in which the sewerage at Gates would be left by the enactment. There might have been some error in the number of the chapter inserted in the law, but those charged with the enforcement of the act must be bound by the law as they find it. The chapter repealed is: "An act to repeal chapter 55 of the Laws of 1893, entitled, 'an act to authorize and provide for the extension of the main sewer provided for in chapter 605 of the Laws of 1892 and the construction of laterals to connect said main sewer in the town of Gates, in the county of Monroe,' and to authorize the commissioner of sewerage under chapter 603 of the Laws of 1892 to extend or change the southern terminus of said sewer and to change its route." Notwithstanding the opinion of the lawyer quoted above, there are a number of members of the legislature who believe that the little "joker" may destroy the validity of the law.

SEVERAL REBELS KILLED.

Slight Engagements with Government Troops Reported in Cuba.

Havana, April 10.—Maceo is now at Le Chuza. Gen. Arolas reports from the trocha, the fortified line across the island, that while reconnoitering on the Carlota, Neptuno and Jobo estates he met a rebel party under Carillo, who intended to pass the line near San Jose. In the fighting that followed the rebels lost one killed, five wounded and six prisoners. Insurgents have burned sixty-two houses and huts at La Salud, province of Havana. Gen. Ochando, chief of staff, recently announced that Spanish columns would operate at night. The first report under the new order comes from the commandante of the town of Aguacate, who arranged an ambush of one hundred troops belonging to the Espana battalion. A rebel party marched into the trap and it is known that nine were killed. It is supposed that their losses were heavier than this. The troops lost one killed and five wounded.

FIRMLY ESTABLISHED.

Clara Barton Writes of the Red Cross Armenian Relief Work.

Boston, April 10.—Notwithstanding rumors to the contrary, Miss Clara Barton cables the New England Armenian relief committee of Boston of her successful work as follows: "News from expeditions just received proves our relief work firmly established. In no manner do authorities endeavor to control our actions. Caravans divided at Aintab, one for Oorfa, Diabeker, Harpoot, the other for Marash, Zeitoun, Malatia and Harpoot, are relieving towns and villages enroute. Our doctors' medical supplies sailed via Beyrouth Friday; eight days to Marash. Epidemic still raging." The latest reports received by the committee state that the suffering is intense and that many in their despondency are driven to suicide.

AN IMPORTANT CLUE.

Detectives Working on the Whitinsville Bank Burglary Case.

Worcester, Mass., April 10.—Chief Wade has detailed Detective Whitney of Boston to assist State Detective Murray in the Whitinsville bank burglary case. The officers are now at work upon an important clue in the shape of a photograph of one man, a noted safe blower. The bank officials at Whitinsville think the original of the photograph is a man who called at the bank a few days before the robbery to get a bill changed.

Condition of the Iron Market.

Pittsburg, April 10.—The American Manufacturer this week says: The iron and steel market is not in the furore shown this time last week. It seems that everything is in a waiting condition, holding back to see the full results of the declared advance in Bessemer steel. Of course, the only changes have been in the direction of higher figures, but these are few, and generally the market is about where it was at last report.

Staunch Sound Steamers.

Chester, Pa., April 10.—The Mohegan, the second of the two iron steamers being built at Roach's ship yard for the New London Steamboat company and which was launched yesterday will be used in carrying freight only. The steamers were built for battling with the heavy seas of Long Island sound during the winter season.

Hotel Men Off for California.

Boston, April 10.—The New England delegates to the annual convention of the Hotel Men's Mutual Benefit association in Los Angeles, Cal., which left yesterday via the Fitchburg railroad, including ladies, numbered 50 persons, and the special train on which they are traveling is one of the most elegant ever seen in this city.

PENNSYLVANIA DEFENDERS.

Survivors of Five Companies To Again Cover Their Old Route to Washington.

Harrisburg, Pa., April 10.—The First Defenders of Pennsylvania, an organization composed of the first five companies of troops that reached Washington at the beginning of the civil war, will on Wednesday next set out for Washington over the same route they took thirty-five years ago. The Ringgold Artillery of Reading, Allen Infantry of Allentown, Washington Artillerists and National Light Infantry of Pottsville will rendezvous at Reading and come to Harrisburg in the evening where they will be met by the Logan Guards of Lewistown. They will be met here by a committee of citizens and escorted to the court house, where they will be given a formal welcome and taken to their headquarters at the Bolton house. Later the Defenders will be given a reception at the executive mansion by Gov. and Mrs. Hastings. In the original five companies there were 530 members, but only 130 of them are now alive and about 100 are expected to be present on the march. The Defenders will be entertained at Baltimore, enroute, and upon arriving at Washington they will be escorted to their headquarters at Willard's hotel and given a dinner. On Friday they will partake of a planked shad dinner at Mount Vernon, and on Saturday they will call upon the president. They will return to Harrisburg on Saturday evening.

RELEASE OF LANGDON.

Annie McGrath's Death Will Now Probably Go Down as a Mystery.

Philadelphia, April 10.—The release from custody yesterday of Samuel P. Langdon, the commonwealth admitting that no evidence could be found to implicate him with the death of Annie McGrath, has revived the supposition that the girl committed suicide and also attempted to kill Langdon. The girl's death will probably go down as a mystery, as it is now believed by some of the officials who have worked on the case that even Langdon knows but little about the girl's death. The case of Annie McGrath, in which Langdon was involved, was one that attracted general attention in the east on account of Langdon's financial standing. Annie McGrath was 19 years old. For two years or more prior to her death she had led a double life. Langdon is president of the United Collieries company of Philadelphia and a well known capitalist. Langdon all along maintained that he knew nothing about the McGrath girl's death. She was alive, he said, when he left the house. He was held on suspicion. The coroner's jury held Langdon for action by the grand jury.

MULE SPINNERS ADJONRN.

An Organizer Appointed To Make a Tour of Investigation in the South.

Boston, April 10.—The convention of cotton mule spinners was ended last evening after five sessions. Among the matters acted upon was the appointment of an organizer for the southern states. Robert Howard of Fall River was the unanimous choice of the body. He was directed to make a tour of investigation in the localities where the southern textile mills are situated. After going over the ground he will begin his organizing duties. Representative Samuel Ross' bill, providing for national legislation to reduce the working time of women and children in cotton and other factories, was endorsed by the convention unanimously. Steps were taken to increase the time for dinner to one full hour in the localities where the operatives are only allowed three-fourths of an hour for dinner.

FOR COAST DEFENSES.

Liberal Appropriation To Be Reported by House Committee.

Washington, April 10.—The fortifications bill will be laid by the subcommittee before the full appropriation committee to-day. It will carry a large appropriation and provides in such a liberal manner for the purchase under contract of sites, guns, etc., that it is stated that the war department will be able to enter upon an extensive system of coast defenses for the next year.

POPE LEO FOR PEACE

Favors the Move for an International Arbitration Board.

OPEN LETTER TO A LONDON PAPER

Peace Is One of the Most Blessed Gifts Bestowed Upon the World by the Divine Redeemer, Says His Holiness.

London, April 10.—The pope, through Cardinal Rampolla, papal secretary of state, has addressed to the Chronicle a letter, of which the following is a translation: "Among the most precious gifts the Divine Redeemer bestowed upon the world was that of peace, and no better desire can exist than that peace should reign on earth. Justly, therefore, the sovereign pontiff as vicar of the Eternal Prince of Peace, desires and co-operates with every effort towards the maintenance of concord and a union of hearts among the nations. On this account his holiness, being informed by me of the earnestness with which you are prompting the institution of a permanent tribunal for the purpose of deciding international controversies and safe-guarding the peoples from the perils of war, cannot but show his satisfaction, and express the wish that God will happily crown your praiseworth efforts with success. RAMPOLLA."

ARBOR DAY IN NEW YORK.

Public Instructor Skinner Makes Suggestion for Its Observance.

Albany, April 10.—Supt. Skinner of the state department of public instruction has prepared for distribution the Arbor day manual which invites school authorities and teachers to see that Arbor day, on May 8, receives a proper observance. He asks that the 200,000 trees already planted by the school children on previous Arbor days shall receive large additions this year, and suggests many programmes for the proper observance of the day in the schools. He suggests that each child should commit to memory some sentiment appropriate to Arbor day. It is also announced that May 4 will be the one hundredth anniversary of the birth of Horace Mann, who did more to arouse public interest in the purpose of the Arbor day observance than any other person. The superintendent suggests appropriate exercises that day in the schools of the state.

REPUBLICAN PRIMARIES.

Delegates from Several Wards in Trenton Instructed for McKinley.

Trenton, April 10.—The republican primaries for the election of delegates to the state and district conventions were held in this county last night. In several wards and townships the delegates chosen were instructed to support as delegates to the St. Louis convention, supporters of McKinley. At a number of primaries resolutions to instruct were defeated. The delegates-at-large to St. Louis from New Jersey will be senator William J. Sewell, John Kean, Garrett A. Hobart and Franklin Murphy. This district (second) delegates to St. Louis will be Ferdinand W. Roebling of Trenton and Capt. A. M. Bradshaw of Lakewood, with Henry J. Irick of Burlington and Israel G. Adams of Atlantic as alternates.

IN A STORM ON ICE FLOES.

Fears for the Safety of a Large Number of Newfoundlanders.

St. Johns, N. F., April 10.—The eastern coast of the island is again blocked with ice upon which there are hundreds of seals. A large number of men along the coast ventured upon the ice yesterday, going out several miles from the different settlements which dot the coast. A severe snow storm sprang up in the afternoon rendering their progress towards the land impossible, and it is feared that many of them will go adrift. It is difficult to ascertain the number endangered owing to the scattered condition of the villages, but it is feared that many will perish from exposure. While the storm continues it is impossible to take any steps to rescue them.

MAY EXPEL TINSDALE.

His Opposition to the Armstrong Bill Called to the Attention of the L. A. W.

Boston, April 10.—Secretary Bassett of the L. A. W. has received a formal protest against Edmund J. Tinsdale of New York city asking that he be expelled from the L. A. W., on the ground of conduct alleged to be detrimental to the best interests of the organization. This grows out of Mr. Tinsdale's action in opposing the Amstrong bill at Albany.

A POISONED LIVER.

Don't Keep Poison in Your Body Longer Than You Have to.

If your stomach poisons your liver the consequences may be serious.

What poisons arise in your stomach come from undigested food which has decomposed there. They are absorbed by your blood and go to your liver, where they paralyze its functions and make you bilious.

Finally they go into the blood again and are carried all over the body, disordering your different organs, and perhaps making you dangerously sick.

This is the origion of many diseases which are not always known for what they are.

The poisons of undigested food can only be got rid of by the use of a purifying, strengthening, digestive tonic, like the Shaker Digestive Cordial.

A few doses of this wonderful cordial will soon clear away all undigested fermenting, poisonous substances, restore your appetite, aid you to digest your food, purify your liver and blood of all dangerous poisons, and restores you to perfect health.

It will cure biliousness, indigestion, nausea, headache, dizziness, mental depression, weakness, fever, flatulence, constipation, loss of appetite, bad taste in mouth, stomach-ache, anæmia, rheumatism, etc., where other medicines will barely give relief.

At druggists. Ten cents for a trial bottle.

Your Spring clothing

Rather early to speak of it, but if it needs cleaning or dyeing, it isn't too early to have us do that work for you. This is our dull season—our employes are here ready for work. We'd like to have your goods now. We can give them better attention than in the rush of the spring season. Then we'll have to have more time or rush them at the expense of good work. Now we can take our time, do the work better than if hurried and you'll have the clothing all ready for warm weather.

Look in the closet or trunk and find your spring wear that needs cleaning and dyeing and bring it to us now, or better still, our wagon will call for it if you will send us word.

FAVOR RECIPROCITY

Substance of Many Replies to House Committee's Circular.

EFFORT TO RE-ENACT M'KINLEY LAW

Some Measure Looking to the Advancement of Our Trade with Foreign Countries To Be Discussed by the House.

Washington, April 10.—Some measure, either a bill or a joint resolution, re-enacting in general terms the reciprocity feature of the tariff law of 1890, better known as the McKinley tariff bill, will, it is believed, soon be reported to the house. The sub-committee of the house ways and means committee, to whom was referred the Tawney resolution, looking to an investigation of the subject of reciprocity with foreign countries, and particularly in relation to its effect upon our trade with the Latin-American countries, have secured a vast array of data from boards of trade, chambers of commerce and kindred organizations all over the country. These replies are said so be uniformly favorable to the principle and to show, that while the law of 1890 was in force, the agricultural as well as certain of the manufacturing interests of the United States were largely benefitted as a result. It is thought to be not unlikely that when the matter comes before the house it will be fully discussed, the debate continuing possibly ten days or a fortnight.

SENATE AND HOUSE.

Nothing of Special Interest on the Programmes for To-day.

Washington, April 10.—Nothing of special importance or which promises to develop into anything outside of the ordinary is on the programme to-day in either branch of congress. The senate did a rushing business in the way of private pension bills in the last hour of yesterday's session, having cleared the calendar and passed every pension bill on it—75 in number—within sixty minutes. The earlier hours of the session were taken up in the delivery of two prepared speeches, one by Mr. Mantle, rep., Mont., and the other by Mr. Butler, pop., N. C. Mr. Mantle's speech was mainly a defense of senators from the silver-producing states, for their action in helping to defeat the Dingley tariff bill passed by the house in the early part of the session. He criticised the bill for being in the interest of the wool manufacturers, rather than of the wool growers, and he declared himself as being equally in favor of bi-metallism and of protection to American industry. He expressed the hope, therefore, that the finance committee would report back a fair tariff bill, coupled with a provision for free coinage. At the close of Mr. Mantle's speech, his maiden one in the senate, he received the congratulations of many senators and then participated in a running discussion with Senator Hawley, rep., Conn.; Hoar, rep., Mass., and Mills, dem., Tex., the latter characterizing a protective tariff as a protective humbug. Mr. Butler's speech was in support of a bill heretofore introduced by him for the establishment for a postal telegraph system.

House of Representatives.

The bill to repeal the compulsory pilotage system, so far as it affects sailing vessels engaged in the coastwise trade, was defeated in the house after a day's debate by a vote of 117 to 58. Mr. Grosvenor, rep., O., in the course of the discussion said that while this congress would not enact any legislation intended to improve the condition of laboring men in this country, he was certain the house would not pass a bill which laboring men believed would tend to still further increase the distress and discomfort of any portion of their fellows. The amended District of Columbia appropriation bill for the year ending June 30, 1897, was passed after a brief debate. The most notable incident of the debate was a bitter attack by Mr. Fitzgerald, dem., Mass., upon the A. P. A. for its attack in the dark, as he expressed it, upon the Roman Catholic church, of which he was a member, which, he asserted, resulted in depriving institutions in the District of Columbia conducted under the auspices of the church of what was justly and legally theirs. No response was made to Mr. Fitzgerald beyond a bare denial by Mr. Grout, rep., Vt., in charge of the bill, that it constituted in any sense an attack upon the Catholic church.

Maryland Bankers for Sound Money.

Baltimore, April 10.—The bankers of Maryland have put themselves squarely on record in favor of sound money. In a convention yesterday afternoon with delegates representing almost every bank of any size in the state, resolutions unalterably opposing the free coinage of silver and every debasement of our currency in whatsoever form it may be presented, and declaring that the true interests of our country will be best served by its rigid adherence to the gold standard of value were adopted.

Bills Signed by Gov. Griggs.

Trenton, April 10.—Gov. Griggs has signed the bills which were passed by the legislature. Those of general interest were the deficiency bill, the bill repealing the elective judiciary law and the bill making it unlawful for any borough or town to become incorporated except by an act of the legislature.

Denied Use of the Mails.

Washington, April 10.—The postoffice department has denied the privileges of the mails to the Matrimonial club of New York city. Also to the Winner Bicycle company of Chicago, for alleged illegal practices.

HONORS FOR THE GREEKS.

None of the American Athletes Took Part in the Fourth Day's Games at Athens.

Athens, April 10.—The weather during the fourth day of the Olympic games was excessively cold and had a marked effect upon the attendance, which showed a material falling off. None of the American athletes was entered in any of the events. It is expected that a large crowd will be present to-day to witness the finals in several of the running races. The first event on the programme for the fourth day was a shooting contest at 200 metres. It was won by M. Karassevdas, a Greek, who, with forty shots, scored 538 points. M. Pavlides, another Greek, was second, with 494. Third and fourth places were also won by Greeks, the foreign competitors following after them. Flack, the Australian, won the 800 metres race. His time was 2 minutes, 11 seconds. A Dane was second. A sabre contest between Georgiades and Karacalos was won by the former. There were several gymnastic contests in which Greeks carried of the honors. The city continues thronged with visitors, the places of those who have left being filled by new comers. Among the strangers present are many who have come from the Riviera. King Alexander, the young ruler of Servia, was again an interested spectator of the games. A banquet in his honor was given at the palace last night and there was a repetition of the illumination of the Acropolis and the city, which for beauty exceeded anything of the kind ever seen here.

CUBAN BELLIGERENCY.

The President Evidently in No Haste To Act on the Resolutions of Congress.

Washington, April 10.—The president has not yet given any intimation as to what course he will take in regard to the Cuban resolutions, nor, indeed, as to whether he will take any action upon them at the present time. Those whose opinions are entitled to weight assert that in a matter of such importance the president is not likely to act without grave deliberation. The engrossed copy of the Cuban resolutions furnished the president remains upon his desk precisely as do the concurrent Armenian resolutions adopted by congress Jan. 20 last requesting him to use his good offices with the European powers to put an end to Turkisy tyranny in Armenia by the enforcement of the provisions of the Berlin treaty. There is no indication on the surface of any purpose on the part of the president to send in a special message to congress at an early day on the Cuban question, nor has the state department thus far set its clerical force to work compiling the additional Cuban data asked for by the house of representatives. All the numerous rumors on the subject appear to be chiefly based on imagination.

NATCHAUG COMPANY CLAIMS.

A Dividend of 20 Per Cent. Considered a Generous Estimate.

Willimantic, Conn., April 10.—The claims filed against the insolvent Natchaug Silk company amount to over half a million dollars, even worse condition than expected, while the probable assets will not much exceed $100,000, so that with the exceptions of the receivership the dividend will probably be 20 per cent., or even less. The amount of debits may be somewhat varied by some claims found invalid, or judgments in several suits by creditors pending against the receiver in which goods or accounts have been attached, but no claim filed, but 20 per cent. is considered a generous estimate. More than half the liabilities are Natchaug company's notes, mostly held by the First National bank. The balance is mostly raw silk and other supplies, and services. About $80,000 assests are tied up in attachments. There is litigation between New York raw silk dealers and the First National bank, but both parties have filed claims so that the result will not materially change the figures.

FLOATED ASHORE ON A RAFT.

Terrible Suffering of a Shipwrecked Sailor. Two Companions Perished.

Jacksonville, Fla., April 10.—Axel Johnson, one of the crew of the schooner Seminole, which was wrecked several days ago off the east coast of Florida, floated ashore four miles south of Fort Pierce on wreckage to which he had been clinging without food or water for 136 hours. Two companions with him on the raft were washed overboard several days ago. Johnson is badly bruised and very weak.

American Oriental Society.

Andover, Mass., April 10.—The 111th annual meeting of the American Oriental society is now being held here. This is the first time the society has met in Andover, but its early history is connected with this home of learning through the labors of Andover scholars. There are thirty-four papers announced and a few of them will be read by their titles only. The subjects treated are philological and archeological, textual criticism and book reviews.

Strong Opposes Greater New York.

New York, April 10.—Mayor Strong reached his decision last night on the Greater New York bill. The bill and the memorandum will be taken to Albany to-day by special messenger where the decision will be made public. The general impression about the city hall and among the mayor's officeholders is that the mayor has disapproved of the bill.

Harry Wright Day in Washington.

Washington, April 10.—It has been decided that a picked nine from the Departmental league of this city will play against the Washington National League club on the Harry Wright Memorial Day, April 13 next.

HEATED DEBATE ON

Lively Session of the New England Methodist Conference To-day.

COMMITTEE ON ROMANISM THE POINT

The House Thrown into Considerable Disorder Immediately the Subject Was Broached—Freedman's Aid and Church Extension.

Springfield, Mass., April 10.—A hot session of the Methodist conference is predicted for to-day over the motion made yesterday afternoon to have a committee on Romanism appointed. Immediately after the motion was made by Rev. Austin Herrick a disturbance arose. The names of Rev. N. T. Whitaker and Rev. Hugh Montgomery were mentioned as two of the committee. Rev. C. P. Rice then moved to lay the motion on the table, and the bishop could not tell which side won until he called for a rising vote. The vot was 32 to 27 against laying the motion on the table. Rev. J. Boyd Brady, the pastor of the Peoples' church, Boston, made a speech favoring the motion and denounced Romanism as one of the evils of the country. It was doing all it could to revolutionize America and he thought the resolutions should be adopted opposing it. Rev. C. F. Rice then moved to lay the matter over till to-day, and this was done. There have been a number of resolutions passed on Romanism except last year, when it was not thought necessary to do so. When the matter was brought up to-day most of the delegates had gone away.

Freedman's Aid and Church Extension.

The anniversary of the Freedman's Aid and Southern Educational society and the Church Extension society were held in Grace church last evening. Rev. Dr. J. W. Hamilton, corresponding secretary of the former society, gave some accounts of its methods and workings. He said that some people were disposed to disparage the work of the society because it was being done among the ignorant and more or less degraded race. He thought this attitude unjust and unchristianlike and gave three illustrations showing the nature and value of the work. Rev. W. A. Spencer, secretary of the Church extension society, talked at some length upon the character and necessity of the work which is being done by that organization. He said that the socity had built or been instrumental in building 12,000 churches since he had been connected with it, but that despite this there are now 4,000 congregations who have no suitable place in which to worship.

PRIVATE PENSION BILLS.

Some of Those Passed by the Senate Before Adjournment Last Evening.

Washington, April 10.—Among the private pension bills passed by the senate last evening were the following: Increasing to $50 a month the pensions of the widows of Lieut.-Commander Rhoades, U. S. N.; Col. Black, U. S. A.; Major-Gen. Leggett, Major Bernard of the Mexican war, Chief Engineer George Sewell, U. S. N., and Lieut.-Col. Slocum. Granting pensions of $100 a month to brevet Major-Gen. Cooper; $75 a month to Gen. Oliver P. Gooding, now an inmate of St. Elizabeth's Insane asylum, Washington; $75 a month to the widow of Major-Gen. Stoneman; increasing the pensions of Major-Gen. H. Julius H. Stahl to $100 a month; of the widow of Admiral Leroy, U. S. N., to $100 a month, and granting a pension of $75 a month to the widow of Rear Admiral Fyffe.

ROMANCE IN REAL LIFE.

Miss Bancroft Re-married to Her First Husband After Ten Years Absence.

Rockville, Conn., April 10.—Mrs. C. C. Maher, formerly Miss Ellen Bancroft, was married last evening to Buel Seymour of Fitzgerold, Ga. Miss Bancroft first married Buel Seymour in Granville, Mass., in 1865. After living twelve years together in the west, having no children, they became accidentally separated. Mrs. Seymour believed her husband dead, came east and married C. C. Maher. Her second husband eloped in 1893 with a waitress, and Mrs. Maher secured a divorce. She recently learned that her former husband was living in Georgia, correspondence followed, resulting in their re-marriage here.

PRESS AGENCY FAKE.

No Truth in the Sensational School House Story from Bellefonte, Pa.

Bellefonte, Pa., April 10.—The sensational story sent out on Tuesday evening by a Chicago news agency about the burning and blowing up of a school house in Curtin township, near here, by opposing factions of patrons, who engaged in a pitched battle with axes, was wholly a "fake," based on the simple fact that the house in question was destroyed by fire, but not a person was known to have been within a mile of the building at the time and the origin of the fire was probably accidental.

Business Activity in the South.

Baltimore, April 10.—The Manufacturers' Record says that the record of the south for the past three months exhibits a phenomenal business stability as compared with the failures in the west and northwest. The failures in the south for January, February and March show a total increase in liabilities of only $500,000 over the corresponding period of 1895, and this entire increase was in Texas, where a $2,000,000 wholesale grocery failure occurred.

McKinley seems to be the man for the Republicans of New Jersey. In the Republican primaries in this city last night there was a strong feeling for the Ohio man, and much the same disposition seems to prevail all over the State. There is no doubt but what he is the popular candidate of the Republicans.

Governor Griggs has signed the bill which, it is thought, will put an end to the slipshod and careless manner in which boroughs and towns have been incorporated in this State during the last few years. The new law provides that hereafter no town or borough shall be incorporated except by special act of the Legislature.

We need a woman's college in Westfield, a college for the Education of Female Domestics, The education of domestics, in the enlightenment of their minds and the regulation of their tempers, is a pressing need. Give us such a college, not a kindergarten or a seminary, but a real out-and out college, where cooking, dusting, and all the household branches might be learned, and a large addition to the stock of human happiness might be made, and much misery prevented.—Westfield Leader.

The Republican Third Congressional District Convention, held at New Brunswick yesterday, was called to order by Charles Place, of North Plainfield. Resolutions were adopted recommending tariff reform on the principles of the McKinley bill. When the report of the committee on resolutions was read it was found that no reference to any candidates was contained in it, although the sentiment of the convention seemed to be in favor of indorsing McKinley for President and Garret A. Hobart, of Paterson, for Vice-President. The Monmouth county delegation then offered resolutions instructing the delegates to support McKinley for President and Hobart for Vice-President. This was received with tremendous applause. The resolutions were withdrawn with the understanding that they would be introduced later, but for some reason they were not presented again, and the meeting adjourned after choosing John W. Herbert, of Middlesex, and Frank Appleby, of Asbury Park, as delegates, and Charles Reed and Chas. Place, of Somerset, as alternates.

IN THE WRONG SEAT.

William H. Shotwell Looks at the Thermometer and Gets Frustrated.

An incident that created a titter of merriment at the expense of Trustee William H. Shotwell, of the First Presbyterian church, occurred on the 6 p. m. train from New York, Wednesday.

The car in which Mr. and Mrs. Shotwell were sitting was uncomfortably warm and as the train left Elizabeth, Mr. Shotwell stepped forward a few seats to look at the thermometer, which was fastened on the side of the car. The mercury registered 88 degrees and so surprised was he at the carelessness of the company in permitting such abnormal heat, that he temporarily lost his bearings and sat down. He mopped his brow and remarked, "Phew! but its hot in here, Marian." "Sir!" was the reply, and the trustee, looking up, discovered that his companion was not his better half, but a pretty young lady residing at Westfield. Mrs. Shotwell was two seats back, looking very lonesome. Mr. Shotwell politely apologized and beat a hasty retreat. A number of Plainfielders witnessed the mistake and enjoyed it hugely.

During the winter of 1893, F. M. Martin, of Long Reach, West Va., contracted a severe cold which left him with a cough. In speaking of how he cured it he says: "I used several kinds of cough syrup but found no relief until I bought a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, which relieved me almost instantly, and in a short time brought about a complete cure." When troubled with a cough or cold use this remedy and you will not find it necessary to try several kinds before you get relief. It has been in the market for over twenty years and constantly grown in favor and popularity. For sale at 25 and 50 cents per bottle at Armstrong's pharmacy, Park and North avenues.

THOSE AWFUL STREETS.

A Correspondent Makes Some Terse Observations Concerning Them.

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—It is to be taken for granted that the bad condition of our city streets—worse than those of any other place of the size of which I know—is due to the lack of funds. If so, why is it? If not, then why is it?

The Street Commissioner, of course, is a man who knows his duty. This has been shown in his arrest of citizens for not cleaning off their sidewalks when covered with snow. Presumably he was within the law in that action. I find in relation to roadways, the city ordinances say: "It shall be his duty to keep the roadways in repair and to direct and superintend work, and it shall be his duty to detect and discover every nuisance which may exist in the streets of said city and forthwith to remove the same and to prevent said streets from being improperly obstructed and encumbered and to prevent the maintenance or continuance of any nuisance or anything of an offensive or unwholesome nature within such streets" (Ordinance of February 28th, 1882, as amended December 31st, 1887.)

I have been thinking, in studying this ordinance, that perhaps the Commissioner does not understand that large holes, mounds, stones or debris constitutes a "nuisance" within the meaning of the ordinance. If so, the city cannot too soon amend the ordinance to apply to existing facts.

It is certain that nothing is expended in remedying the bad condition of the streets themselves, whatever has been done toward finding citizens for not removing the beautiful snow. Witness West Second street or North avenue, or even Front street, which I name because these seem to be among the most traveled streets. In these and scores of other streets there are depressions where there were sewer connections, and everywhere there are now loose stones such as we used to see on the old-fashioned country roads. It may be said the sewer contractors are at fault; if so, why are they not held responsible to remedy them forthwith. As a matter of fact, however, the streets were strewed with debris and nobody undertook to remove it, long before the sewer contractors came in and made a bad condition of affairs worse

For one, I heartily welcome the idea of an Improvement Association to be started by the ladies. In New England, for years past, all towns have had Improvement Associations and, in consequence, all streets are kept clean and garnished. No streets like those in Plainfield canbe found in any of the pretty towns in western Massachusetts and Connecticut and in other points in New England. Besides, there is a public spirit engendered not to throw rubbish in the street, and a generous rivalry awakened to have good lawns, without fences, and here and there a public fountain for thirsty men and animals in the summer. And when a public official grows slack, he is stirred up; if he is still pokey, he is relegated to the ex-official list.

Plainfield is a good spot to live in, but its miserably maintained streets prevent its taking rank with the poorest town in England or Germany, not to speak of New England. Can we not feel ashamed of them and do better?

An Observer.

Salvation Army Enthusiasm.

A special meeting of the auxiliary department of the Salvation Army of this city was held last evening in the small hall in the Y. M. C. A. building. Several officers from out of town were present besides the members of the Plainfield army. Captain Nice was present and told of his own experience and work in the Salvation Army and also gave a very touching account of his own life. Another short speech was made by Comrade Bjorksten, explaining the slum work of the army. Captain Elizabeth Clark was unable to be present, much to the disappointment of all.

Big Missionary Meeting.

The society has a large number of members throughout New England and the Middle States, and it is expected that fully 600 delegates will attend the meeting, some of whom will be Plainfielders.

mens of wood carving and the different stages in wood engraving were also shown The rest of this room was devoted to architectural designs, principally by Oscar S. Teale, G. A. Audsley and A. L. C. Marsh.

A small room was devoted to a very creditable display of oil paintings water colors and sketches from the Artists Artizens Institute at New York. In the hall the New York Photogravure Company had an exhibit of photo-mechanical print in three colors from untouched negatives. The Saugstad School was well represented, while a number of curios occupied the rest of the space. In the ladies' room the Camera Club exhibited some of its own excellent work and made a very creditable showing. Miss H. A. French, teacher of drawing and water colors at Miss Day's School, exhibited the work of some of her pupils in another room.

The exhibition opens tonight to the public, who can only get an idea of what the exhibition really is by personal inspection

Such a successful exhibition reflects lots of credit on somebody and the exhibition committee deserves plenty of it. The committee consisted of Geo. Ashdoun Audsley, chairman; H. H. Coward, J. Hervey Doane, Olaf Sangstad, Harold Serrell, G. H. Squires, J. E. Stewart, Oscar S. Teale and Guillermo Thorn. President Otto Arens also assisted. Special credit should be given to G. A. Audsley and his son Berthold for their indefatigable efforts in arranging and numbering the different exhibits.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the eustachian tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube be restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give one hundred dollars for any case of deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

FELL FROM A SCAFFOLD.

A Scotch Plains Carpenter Narrowly Escaped Fatal Injuries.

Edward Dorwood, carpenter, of Scotch Plains, met with a serious accident this morning. He was working for Contractor Walter S. Arthur on the latter's new house, corner of West Fifth street and Prescott place. A very strong scaffold had been erected around the second story of the house, and it was bolted through to the inside. One of the lathers who was working inside unfastened the bolt, not thinking that anyone was on the scaffold. The boards gave way, throwing Dorwood to the ground. He struck his head and right side of his body on some stones, inflicting some very serious cuts and bruises. Mr. Arthur happened to be near and he assisted the man to a wagon. He was then brought to Dr. Probasco's office and later removed to the hospital, where he was given proper treatment. In a few hours afterward he was taken to his home in Scotch Plains.

WELCOME THEM.

Men Who Have Authority to Bring a Poultry Show to Visit Plainfield.

A committee from the Garden State Poultry and Pigeon Society will visit Plainfield tomorrow with a view to deciding whether or not to have their next annual show held here in December. It will be remembered that sometime ago The Press called attention to the possibility of this affair being brought to this city and held in the Columbia Cycle Academy. A special meeting of the committee in charge of the selection of an exhibition place was held last Saturday, when it was found that they were somewhat divided whether to hold it in Plainfield or Orange. Charles H. Hand, who has been the prime mover for Plainfield's interest, received a letter from C. W. Johnson, of Cranford, secretary of the society, stating that he was in favor of Plainfield, but that a committee would visit this city tomorrow and look over the facilities for handling the show, and also to learn whether or not the people had a disposition to welcome them. The committee will meet Mr. Hand tomorrow afternoon.

A PLACE TO CALL HOME.

The Relief Association Are Working Hard to Get Such a Place.

Interest has not flagged in the plan set on foot a few weeks ago to furnish a home and headquarters for the Plainfield Relief Association such as should become the centre of the working charities of the city. Within a few days past the papers have been in the course of preparation for the conveyance of the equity in the property at 544 West Front street to the Plainfield Relief Association. Incidentally it may be mentioned here as a suggestion to benevolently disposed persons, that the Society named above was fully incorporated in 1880, and is capable of reciving bequests, and of holding property real, as well as personal.

The ladies of the Association have found so much encouragement in their effort to pay off the debt on the property, that they have gone on to occupy and use it, feeling confident that the way would be opened toward absolute ownership free of debt.

Thus they are already domiciled in their new quarters, where their work goes on now in its accostumed quiet, systematic and well-considered fashion.

It will be remembered that the amount that the ladies found it necessary to raise to pay off the debt and install themselves in their new quarters was $3,500. Of this amount two-thirds fully can now be reported as subscribed, and nearly all of it paid in. If $1,000 more were added to this cash fund, it would practically complete it, so that the Association could own the property without debt or rent obligation.

It is probable that the ladies will adopt some means to preserve in a permanent form the names of the contributors toward this building fund.

The treasurer, Mrs. H. P. Reynolds, is just at present absent from the city, meanwhile the subscriptions for this fund, or for the current work of the Association, may be sent to Mrs. L. V. F. Randolph, 741 East Front street, or to Mrs. C. E. Brooks, 563 West Eighth street.

The ladies wish to complete this subscription, if possible, during this month. The actual payments may be somewhat deferred in cases where this may be more convenient. Thus far the following list comprises the names of those who have handed in their subscriptions:

Charles W. McCutchen, Alexander Gilbert, L. V. F. Randolph, Mason W. Tyler, S. A. Ginna, Leander N. Lovell, James Clark, B. A. Hegeman, James T. Closson, George A. Chapman, John Doull Miller, I. W. SAVED THE OWNER TROUBLE.

Burglar Opened a Safe When the Combination Was Lost.

The proprietor of a large store on High street went to his place of business at an unusually early hour one morning; in fact, the sun had not yet risen when he turned the key in the door. On entering he was surprised to find a man trying to open the door of his safe. He stood and watched him for some time, apparently deeply interested in the proceedings, says the West Bedford (Mass.) Windmill, when finally the burglar swung open the door of the safe with a delighted chuckle, but happening to turn he saw that he was discovered, and became very much alarmed. He jumped up and was about to make his escape through a back window, when the merchant called to him:

"Don't be in a hurry, my friend; come back and sit down awhile and smoke a cigar, while I straighten things up a bit, and then come to breakfast with me. You have done me a great favor."

"Why, how's that?" asked the burglar, in great surprise.

"Well, you see, I had the combination of the safe on a bit of paper, and last night I accidentally locked it in the safe and forgot how to work it. I spent most of the night trying to get the thing open, and came in early this morning to have another try at it."

A DETECTIVE MYSTERY.

Was the Noted Sleuth Himself a Successful Bank Cracksman.

"The most mysterious affair I ever knew in detective circles," said a well-known sleuth to a Washington Star writer, "was a case in the west. A detective had become famous by reason of his success in ferreting out heavy robberies. It seemed that none of the professionals could escape when he once started upon their trails. After a time all such cases were placed in his hands. The first one that he could not discover the thief was a big bank robbery, then after a year or two another, then another; his reputation was suffering, but it was still good, as during the same period he was successful in other difficult cases. He was taken sick with fever, and while delirious told how he himself had perpetrated the robberies, describing every movement in detail. When he recovered, it was claimed that his failure to unravel the mysteries had caused the raving confessions, but other men were put upon them, and they failed to find any clew whatever. The detective retired and lives in elegant style, but whether or not he was as successful in eluding law as in enforcing it will probably never really be known."

QUEEN VICTORIA DRESSED UP.

She Is Then Quite Royal in Appearance, But Otherwise Only Ordinary.

Queen Victoria, in her best bib and tucker, is still a very good-looking woman. In the hideous bonnets and old-fashioned shawls the queen so constantly wears when not "on exhibition" she gives one the impression of being merely a nice, cozy motherly old lady whose whole life's interest is centered in her family. One would never suspect her of being able to rise to the occasion and look the part of queen. With the assumption of court finery, however, says the Philadelphia Times, Victoria doffs her homely manners and becomes at once the personification of a gracious sovereign.

To those who have seen her in both characters the metamorphosis has seemed little short of a miracle. On account of the queen's lack of height she is rarely photographed standing; for though she scarcely measures five feet, her waist line is abnormally long, so when she is seated she gives one the impression of being a tall woman—an advantage the vanity of any woman, even a queen, would never ignore.

Hypnotism in Medicine.

The Journal of the American Medical Association has an editorial, the general trend of which is to show that hypnotism has had its day and is practically being laid upon the shelf, or, at least, its use confined to irregulars outside of the recognized school of medicine. This is a rather curious statement to make, at least if one measures the interest of a medical topic by the number of articles written about it. There are few subjects upon which German physicians are writing more monograms at present or in which they seem to take a more active interest. The sensational side of hypnotism is certainly dying out, but a certain practical side, which is represented by the word "suggestion," has undoubtedly come to stay and to be used in therapeutics.

Early Piety.

D. L. Moody, the evangelist, told a story in Philadelphia recently about his life before his conversion, when a boy of 17. He said that while he was a pretty bad boy in his unregenerate days, deep in the follies and errors of the world, he never broke so far away from his early religious training as to forget to say his prayers every night. "I used to sleep with my brother," he said, "and if either one of us happened to jump into bed without first getting on his knees, the other would swear at him vigorously and kick him out on the floor."

Mead for Russians.

The officials intrusted with the arrangement of the details of the czar's coronation in Moscow this spring have ordered 15,000 hogsheads of mead, which is to be made of pure honey. It is an old Russian custom to regale the people with mead for three days during the festivities at the ancient capital.

New Parisian Food.

Camel's flesh is the latest addition to the Parisian bill of fare, Algerian butchers undertaking to provide the supply. The meat is said to taste like beef, though white like veal. The hump is considered a great delicacy by the Arabs.

Children Cry for Pitcher's Castoria.

When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria.
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria.
When she had Children, she gave them Castoria.

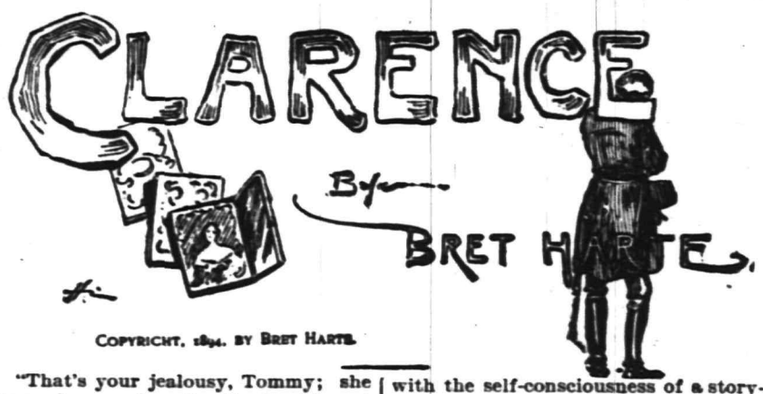
CLARENCE

By BRET HARTE.



COPYRIGHT, 1894, BY BRET HARTE.

"That's your jealousy, Tommy; she knew he was, by all odds, the biggest man here, and a good deal more, too—and you had no show!"

In the laugh that followed it would seem that Brant's eulogy had been spoken and forgotten. But as Lieut. Martin was turning away a lingering corporal touched his cap.

"You were speaking of those prowling mulattoes, sir. You know the general passed one out this morning."

"So I have heard."

"I reckon she didn't get very far. It was just at the time that we were driven in by their first fire, and I think she got her share of it, too. Do you mind walking this way, sir?"

The lieutenant did not mind, although he rather languidly followed. When they had reached the top of the gully the corporal pointed to what seemed to be a bit of striped calico hanging on a thorn bush in the ravine.

"That's her," said the corporal. "I know the dress. I was on guard when she was passed. The searchers, who were picking up our men, haven't got to her yet—but she ain't moved or stirred these two hours. Would you like to go down and see her?"

The lieutenant hesitated. He was young and slightly fastidious as to unnecessary unpleasantness. He believed he would wait until the searchers brought her up—when the corporal might call him.

The mist came up gloriously from the swamp like a golden halo. And as Clarence Brant, already forgotten, rode moodily through it toward Washington, hugging to his heart the solitary comfort of his great sacrifice, his wife, Alice Brant, for whom he had made it, was lying in the ravine, dead and uncared for. Perhaps it was part of the inconsistency of her sex that she was pierced with the bullets of those that she loved, and was wearing the garments of the race that she had wronged

PART III.
CHAPTER I.

It was sunset of a hot day at Washington. Even at that hour the broad avenues which diverged from the capitol like the rays of another sun were fierce and glittering. The sterile distances between glowed more cruelly than ever, and pedestrians, keeping in the scant shade, hesitated on the curbstone before plunging into the Sahara-like waste of crossings. The city seemed deserted. Even that vast army of contractors, speculators, place-hunters and lobbyists, which hung on the heels of the other army, and had turned this pacific camp of the nation into a battlefield of ignoble conflict and contention—more disastrous than the one to the south—had slunk into their holes in hotel back bedrooms, in shady barrooms, or in the negro quarters of Georgetown, as if the majestic, white-robed goddess, enthoned upon the dome of the capitol, had at last descended among them, and was smiting to right and left with the flat and flash of her insufferable sword.

Into this stifling atmosphere of greed and corruption Clarence Brant stepped from the shadow of the war department. For the last three weeks he had haunted its anterooms and audience chambers, in the vain hope of righting himself before his superiors, who were content, without formulating charges against him, to keep him in this disgrace of inaction and the anxiety of suspense. Unable to ascertain the details of the accusation, and conscious of his own secret, he was debarred the last resort of demanding a court-martial, which he knew could only exonerate him by the exposure of the guilt of his wife, whom he still hoped had safely escaped. His division commander, in active operations in the field, had no time to help him at Washington. Elbowed aside by greedy contractors, forestalled by selfish politicians and disdaining the ordinary method of influence, he had no friend to turn to. In his few years of campaigning he had lost his instinct of diplomacy without acquiring a soldier's bluntness.

The nearly level rays of the sun forced him at last to turn aside into one of the openings of a large building—a famous caravansary of that hotel-haunted capital—and he presently found himself in the luxurious barroom, fragrant with mint and cool with ice slabs, piled symmetrically on its marble counters. A few groups of men were seeking coolness at the small tables, with glasses before them and palm-leaf fans in their hands, but a larger and noisier assemblage was collected before the bar, where a man, collarless and in his shirt sleeves, with his back to the counter, was pretentiously addressing them. Brant, who had moodily dropped into a chair in the corner, after ordering a cooling drink as an excuse for his temporary refuge from the stifling street, half regretted his enforced participation in their conviviality. But a sudden lowering of the speaker's voice into a note of gloomy significance, seemed familiar to him. He glanced at him quickly, from the shadow of his corner. He was not mistaken—it was Jim Hooker.

For the first time in his life, Brant wished to evade him. In the days of his own prosperity his heart had always gone out towards this old companion of his boyhood; in his present humiliation his presence jarred upon him. He would have slipped away, but to do so he would have had to pass before the counter again, and Hooker, with the self-consciousness of a story-teller, had an eye on his audience. Brant, with a palm leaf fan before his face, was obliged to listen.

"Yes, gentlemen," said Hooker, examining his glass dramatically, "when a man's been cooped up in a rebel prison, with a death line before him that he's obliged to cross every time he wants a square drink, it seems sort of like a dream of his boyhood to be standin' here comf'ble before his liquor, alongside o' white men once more. And when he knows he's bin put to all that trouble jest to save the reputation of another man, and the secrets of a few high and mighty ones, it's almost enough to make his liquor go agin him!" He stopped theatrically, seemed to choke emotionally over his brandy smash, but with a pause of dramatic determination finally dashed it down. "No, gentlemen," he continued, gloomily. "I don't say what I'm back in Washington for—I don't say what I've bin sayin' to myself when I've bin picking the weevels outer my biscuits in Libby prison—but ef you don't see some pretty big men in the war department obliged to climb down in the next few days my name ain't Jim Hooker, of Hooker, Meecham & Co., army beef contractors, and the man who saved the fight at Gray Oaks!"

The smile of satisfaction that went around his audience—an audience quick to seize the weakness of any performance—might have startled a vanity less oblivious than Hooker's, but it only aroused Brant's indignation and pity, and made his position still more intolerable. But Hooker, scornfully expectorating a thin stream of tobacco juice against the spittoon, remained for an instant gloomily silent.

"Tell us about the fight again," said a smiling auditor.

Hooker looked around the room with a certain dark suspiciousness, and then in an affected lower voice, which his theatrical experience made perfectly audible, went on: "It ain't much to speak of, and if it wasn't for the principle of the thing I wouldn't be talkin'. A man who's seen Injin fightin' don't go much on this here West Point fightin' by rule-of-three—but that ain't here or there. Well, I'd bin out a-scoutin'—just to help the boys along, and I was sittin' in my wagon about daybreak, when along comes a brigadier general, and he looks into the wagon flap. I oughter to tell you first, gentlemen, that every minit he was expectin' an attack—but he didn't let on a hint of it to me. 'How are you, Jim?' says he. 'How are you, general?' says I. 'Would you mind lending me your coat and hat?' says he. 'I've got a little game here with my pickets, and I don't want to be recognized.' 'Anything to oblige, general,' says I, and with that I strips off my coat and hat, and he peels and puts them on. 'Nearly the same figure, Jim,' he says, lookin' at me. 'Suppose you just try on my things and see.' With that he hands me his coat—full uniform, by God—with the little gold cords and laces and the epaulets with a star, and I puts it on—quite innocent like. And then he says, handin' me his sword and belt: 'Same inches round the waist, too, I reckon,' and I puts that on, too. 'You may as well keep 'em on till I come back,' says he, 'for it's mighty damp and malarious at this time around the swamp.' And with that he lights out. Well, gentlemen, I hadn't sat there five minutes before bang! bang! rattle! rattle! kershiz! and I hear a yell. I steps out of the wagon; everything's quite dark, but the rattle goes on. Then along trots an orderly leadin' a horse. 'Mount, general,' he says. 'We're attacked—the rear guard's on us!'

He paused, looked around his audience and then in a lower voice said, darkly: "I ain't a fool, gentlemen, and in that minute a man's brain works at high pressure, and I saw it all! I saw the little game of the brigadier—to skunk away in my clothes and leave me to be captured in his. But I ain't a dog, neither, and I mounted that horse, gentlemen, and lit out to where the men were formin'! I didn't dare to speak lest they should know me, but I waved my sword, and by G——! they followed me! And the next minute we was in the thick of it. I had my hat as full of holes as that ice strainer; I had a dozen bullets through my coat, the fringe of my epaulettes was shot away, but I kept the boys at their work—and we stopped 'em! Stopped 'em, gentlemen! until we heard the bugles of the rest of our division, that all this time had been rolling that blasted rear guard over on us! And it saved the fight! But the next minute the Johnny Reds made a last dash and cut me off—and there I was—by G——, a prisoner! Me that had saved the fight!"

A ripple of ironical applause went round as Hooker gloomily drained his glass and then held up his hand in scornful deprecation.

"I said I was a prisoner, gentlemen," he went on bitterly, "but that ain't all. I asked to see Johnston, told him what I had done, and demanded to be exchanged for a general officer. He said: 'You be d—d.' I then sent word to the division commander in chief, and told him how I had saved Grey Oaks when his brigadier ran away, and he said: 'You be d—d.' I've bin 'you be d—ded' from the lowest non com. to the commander in chief, and when I was at last exchanged—I was exchanged, gentlemen, for two mules and a broken wagon. But I'm here, gentlemen, as I was thar!"

"Why don't you see the president about it?" asked a bystander in affected commiseration.

Mr. Hooker stared contemptuously at the suggestion, and expectorated his scornful dissent. "Not much!" he said. "But I'm going to see the man that carries him and his cabinet in his breeches pocket—Senator Boompointer."

"Boompointer's a big man," continued his auditor, doubtfully. "Do you know him?"

"Know him?" Mr. Hooker laughed a bitter sardonic laugh. "Well, gentlemen, I ain't the kind o' man to go in for family influence, but," he added with gloomy elevation, "considerin' he's an intimate relation of mine by marriage, I should say I did."

Brant heard no more; the facing around of his old companion toward the bar gave him that opportunity of escaping he had been waiting for. The defection of Hooker and his peculiar inventions were too characteristic of him to excite surprise, and, although they no longer awakened his good-humored tolerance, they were powerless to affect him in his greater trouble. Only one thing he learned, that Hooker knew nothing of his wife being in camp as a spy. The incident would have been too tempting to escape his dramatic embellishment. And the allusion to Senator Boompointer—monstrous as it seemed in Hooker's mouth—gave him a grim temptation. He had heard of Boompointer's wonderful power; he believed that Susy would and could help him, Clarence, whether she did or did not help Hooker. But the next moment he dismissed the idea with a flushing cheek. How low had he already sunk to even think of it!

It had been once or twice in his mind to seek the president, and, under a promise of secrecy, reveal a part of his story. He had heard many anecdotes of his goodness of heart and generous tolerance of all things—but with this was joined—so said contemporaneous history—a flippancy of speech and a brutality of directness, from which Clarence's sensibility shrank. Would he see anything in his wife but a common spy on his army; would he see anything in him but the weak victim, like many others of a scheming woman? Stories were current in camp and congress of the way that this grim humorist had, with an apposite anecdote or a rugged illustration, brushed away the most delicate sentiment or the subtlest poetry, even as he exposed the sham of the Puritanic morality or of epicurean ethics. Brant had even solicited an audience, but had retired awkwardly and with his confidence unspoken before the dark, humorous eyes that seemed almost too tolerant of his grievance. He had been to levees and his heart had sunk equally before the vulgar crowd who seemed to regard this man as their own buffoon, or the pompousness of position, learning and dignity which he seemed to delight to shake and disturb.

One afternoon a few days later, in sheer listlessness of purpose, he found himself again at the white house. The president was giving audience to a deputation of fanatics who, with a pathetic simplicity almost equal to his own pathetic tolerance, was urging upon this ruler of millions the policy of an insignificant score, and Brant listened to his patient, practical response of facts and logic, clothed in simple but sinewy English, up to the inevitable climax of humorous illustration, which the young brigadier could now see was necessary to relieve the grimness of his refusal. For the first time Brant felt the courage to address him, and resolved to wait until the deputation retired. As they left the gallery he lingered in the ante-room for the president to appear. But as he did not come, afraid of losing his chances, he returned to the gallery. Alone in his privacy and shadow, the man he had just left was standing by a column in motionless abstraction, looking over the distant garden. But the kindly humorous face was almost tragic with an intensity of weariness. Every line of those strong, rustic features was relaxed under a burden which even the long, lank, angular figure—overgrown and unfinished as his own west—seemed to be distorted in its efforts to adjust itself to, while the dark, deep-set eyes were abstracted with the vague prescience of the prophet and the martyr. Shocked at that sudden change, Brant felt his cheek burn with shame. And he was about to break upon that wearied man's unbending—he was about to add his petty burden to the shoulders of this western Atlas. He drew back silently and descended the stairs.

But before he had left the house, while mingling with the crowd in one of the larger rooms, he saw the president reappear beside an important, prosperous-looking figure, on whom the kindly giant was now smiling with humorous toleration. He noticed the divided attention of the crowd, the name of Senator Boompointer was upon every lip; he was nearly face to face with that famous dispenser of place and preferment—this second husband of Susy. An indescribable feeling, half cynical, half fateful, came over him. He would not have been surprised to have seen Jim Hooker join the throng, which now seemed to him to even dwarf the lonely central figure that had so lately touched him! He wanted to escape it all!

But his fate brought him to the entrance at the same moment that Boompointer was leaving it, and that distinguished man brushed hastily by him as a gorgeous carriage, drawn by two spirited horses, and driven by a resplendent negro coachman, dashed up. It was the Boompointer carriage.

CYCLING COMMENT.

Harry Fulper, of East Second street, has secured a position with the Plainfield Cycle Company.

Owing to an increase in business Lister, the North avenue cycle dealer, has been obliged to make additional room for his wheels.

The Racing Board of the League of American Wheelmen have transferred some well known riders to the professional ranks this week. The paced flying start record for one mile, made by W. W. Hamilton, of Denver, has been accepted.

Lister, the North avenue cycle dealer, has sold the following wheels recently: Harry VanEmburgh, C. C. Beard, Keatings; L. E. Waring, Eclipse; James Anderson, Fowler; Fred Haynes, Hunter; Frank Howland, Apollo; Mr. Hotchkiss, Eagle; Daniel Page, Outing.

Chairman Gideon, of the racing board, states that all the national championships this year will be assigned to the National League meet, at Louisville, Ky., next August, instead of having them scattered among the State Division meets, as has been the custom in years past.

The following sale of wheels have been made by the F. L. C. Martin Cycle Company: W. C. Baker, Howard Beebe, Swell Specials; Ralph Vail, Bertram Leggett, Crescents No. 3; Mr. McKelvey, J. O. Sinkerson, New York, Swell Specials; Mrs. William Brown, Montclair, Crescent No. 5; Mr. Hoffman, Westfield, Cleveland, No. 9. The company shipped the Cleveland tandem this morning to Charles Taylor, Denver, Col.

The new clubhouse of the Union County Roadsters at Elizabeth is one of the finest owned by any of the wheeling clubs of New Jersey. It is a three-story and basement frame house of colonial style. The basement is to be used as a cafe. The first floor will be fitted up with parlor and reception rooms. The trustees', reading and smoking rooms, as well as lockers and shower-baths are on the second floor. The third floor is given over to card rooms and pool and billiard rooms. During the summer an extension will be built on the rear of the building to allow for building bowling alleys.

The appointment of John C. Wetmore, of Elizabeth and New York, as the official handicapper of the League of American Wheelmen for the State of New Jersey has met with hearty approval. The choosing of Mr. Wetmore by Chairman Gideon of the racing board was made known recently and in cycling circles where the news was current the Chairman was commended for what was termed his "wise selection." Mr. Wetmore is an old-timer in cycling, and what he doesn't know about the sport is said not to be worth bothering about. He is a gifted writer, being an associate-editor of the Referee and a prominent member of the Quill Club Wheelmen. In selecting Mr. Wetmore, Chairman Gideon was guided largely by the recommendation of Robert Gentle, Chief Consul of New Jersey, and the entire State board of officers. This fact in itself emphasizes the new handicapper's popularity. S. W. Merrihew was Mr. Wetmore's predecessor.

INS AND OUTS.

The Woodbridge Athletic Association of Woodbridge, N. J., is placing an exceptionally strong amateur team in the field this year.

Prof. Riggs Secured.

The many friends of Dr. James F. Riggs will be pleased to learn that the supply committee of Trinity Reformed church, have secured him to supply the pulpit during the pastor's vacation during the month of August.

—Owing to the fact that Staff-Captain Watkins, of New York, was unable to be present at Reform Hall last evening the presentation of the colors to the American Volunteers was postponed to next Wednesday evening.

VARIOUS SPORTS.

The members of the Yale Freshman crew are going through an unusually hard course of training for the race with the University of Wisconsin representatives. Wesley Abbott, of this city, is still a candidate for the crew but has been put on the second boat.

The estate is valued at $20,000, and, it is alleged, the executor has never made an accounting. Mr. Kirch has cited him to make a settlement. There are two heirs of the estate living in North Plainfield.

DEAD, YET ALIVE.

An Interesting Enoch Arden Case in an English Court.

A curious Enoch Arden case, in which the lord justice of appeal had to intervene in order to bring a man to life again legally, has just been decided in England. Forty-two years ago a woman married a sailor in the British navy, who deserted, went to the United States and was not heard of again for 36 years. Six years after his disappearance she married another man, with whom she lived for 18 years, but from whom she at last obtained a judicial separation and alimony in 1892. The second husband pleaded that his marriage was null, as her first husband was alive at the time, but the jury in the divorce court found that the man was dead. Last year husband No. 2 discovered husband No. 1, brought suit again and produced him in court, where he was fully identified, but the judge held that as a jury had declared he was dead, he could not admit that he was alive and dismissed the suit. The appellate judges seem to be of his opinion, for they refused to allow the appeal and annul the marriage on the ground of the man's being alive till the second husband had given security that he would pay the woman an allowance.

HIS LEG IS PULLED.

That is How a Southern Congressman Regards His Lot.

"Some people may think that a congressman saves a pile of money out of his salary," said a well-known southern congressman, who was talking to a Washington Star reporter on the vicissitudes of running for office, and especially for congress, "but a man has to be a small walking bank to accommodate the large number of his 'friends' and supporters who need a little money for some urgent matter. In my state we have to make campaigns and appear before the people at meetings. Well, I have never attended a meeting but that I did not have some kind of a subscription poked into my face.. Somebody wants something for a church and for missionary purposes or for helping some fellow who has been burned out.

"You can't avoid subscribing, and have to head the list with the largest sum. Then about the time you think you are through with having your leg pulled some lazy fellow will walk up and say: 'How do, gineral? I had ter quit my work ter come out and hear you terday, and I thunk yer mout giv' me a dollar.' While you have the greatest contempt for the man, you give him the dollar.

"When you leave the meeting you are out anywhere from $20 to $50. These are just a few instances of what a candidate has to spend money for. After he gets through the campaign and is elected he has to furnish every dead beat from his district who should happen to come to Washington with money. I've actually given them money and railroad tickets to get home and have them go back and work against me."

IRONY OF FATE.

It Pursues Two Eminently Respectable Ladies Who Could Not Agree.

Not long ago there were two ladies stopping at the same boarding house. They were single ladies, be it said, and both highly respectable. But for some reason, says the Minneapolis Times, known only to themselves, they "couldn't get along," and matters went between them from bad to worse till they "quit speaking."

They both got tired, of course, living in the same house with a mortal enemy, and finally both determined to move. Arrangements were made, and, as luck would have it, both moved the same day. Lady No. 1 loaded up her household goods in the morning, and in the afternoon a dray pulled up and carried away the trunk, shawlstraps, and other effects of lady No. 2.

Lady No. 1 was just composing herself to view the surroundings of her new lodging place, when a wagon stopped at the front door and began to unload a collection of articles unmistakably feminine. She sized up the trunk and went downstairs, filled with a horrible suspicion, to interview the landlady.

Her suspicions were true. They had moved into the same house.

There is no more to the story. Of course, they should have made up their differences and lived in peace and charity ever after. But they did not. Lady No. 2 never got her trunk inside of the house.

DEAF MUTES DANCE.

A Jumping Mummy on the Piano Keeps the Step for Them.

A social club of deaf mutes exists in Warsaw since 1883, and as there are a large unmber of persons thus afflicted in the capital of Russian Poland, the club is doing very well. During the last week of carnival the club arranged a ball, and in order to enable the member to dance to the music in time, a very curious plan was adopted, which proved quite efficient. A large paper doll was rigged up on the piano, and the player, also a deaf mute, who furnished the music, which, of course, could not be heard by the members of the club, used a pedal to make the paper figure move up and down in time with the piece played. A large sign alongside announced the character of the dance, and thus it became possible for the deaf mutes to enjoy the dances as if they were not afflicted with their organic shortcomings. Besides that, they were spared the agony of those who could hear, for some wag had tampered with the piano, which was frightfully out of tune, even the player never noticing that fact. The deaf mutes danced into the early morning hours and unanimously voted the entertainment a magnificent success.

ARCHITECTURAL EXHIBIT

LOCAL DESIGNERS SHOW CREDITABLE WORK AT THE EXHIBITION.

The Attendance at the Second Night Not as Large as Might be Expected—Some of the Building Ideas Represented.

The rooms of the Plainfield Camera Club were thrown open to the public last evening, and the loan exhibition regularly begun. Quite a number visited the rooms but the patronage was not what the club deserved or such a splendid exhibit of art should bring. The exhibition appeared better than the night before, if that were possible, for the few arrangements, forgotten in the hurry of the opening night, had been looked after.

Every part of the exhibit was worthy of considerable study but the display of architectural designs was particularly interesting in that it showed what fine work the Plainfield architects have done. The display included work by G. A. Audsley, A. L. C. Marsh and Oscar S. Teale, and occupied one half of the photographing room.

Oscar S. Teale's exhibit contained a number of buildings erected in this city. There were the original designs for the Park Avenue Baptist and Unitarian churches. Mr. Teale had entered in the competitions for the High School and the new primary school, and his designs for them were shown. There was also a design submitted for the reconstructing of the City National Bank. Among the residences pictured were those of Elias R. Pope, W. K. McClure, Stephen Cahoone, S.A. Cruikshank, Henry McGee, Robert Miller, Charles Potter and Chas. Schipper. An elaborate building, with wide handsome entrance and immense windows on the lower floor, was Mr. Teale's idea for the new Y. M. C. A. building.

Three of the present school buildings, the Franklin, the Bryant, and the Irving, were exhibited by their architect, Mr. Teale, as were also his work among the churches, which included the Seventh-Day Baptist, the Bethel Mission, the Wilson Memorial chapel, the Grace M. E., the German Reformed, and the First Presbyterian.

A. L. C. Marsh's display included among others his design submitted for the fire department headquarters, the original designs for the Brookside Sanitarium, and the residences of E. R. Ackerman and A. D. Cook.

W. J. & G. A. Audsley, architects, of whom G. A. Audsley lives in this city, had a fine exhibit, although the only local design was that of a magnificent edifice for the new High School building. The Broadway facade of the Bowling Green offices, New York, now in process of construction was shown in several. There were a number of designs of buildings erected elsewhere according to plans of W. J. & G. A. Audsley. Among them were the Layton Art Gallery, Milwaukee, Church of St. Margaret, Liverpool, England, Jewish Synagogue, Liverpool, Christ church, Liverpool and Church of St. Mary, Lancaster, England. There was also a design submitted for the City Hall at Manchester, England.

A very pretty exhibit by these same architects was an architectural model of the garden front of a residence in the Old English half-timber style of architecture. The model was made of cardboard and showed some very pretty work. It was constructed by Berthold Audsley.

The exhibition will be continued next week and is worthy of being visited, for Plainfield contains a great number of beautiful and wonderful things, and many of them are now on exhibition.

A GOOD YEAR FOR WARREN CHAPEL.

Encouraging Reports Made at the Annual Meeting of That Society.

The annual meeting ef Warren chapel was held last evening, and was largely attended by the members. Rev. J.O. McKelvey, pastor, presided. The first report was that of the chapel by Mr. McKelvey. It was very encouraging and showed that twenty-four persons had joined the chapel during the year. J. W. Gavett, treasurer of the Sunday-school, gave an excellent report. The collections during the year were excellent and wisely expended. Superintendent of the Sunday-school L. N. Lovell stated that the average attendance had been 324. He also read the report of the Ladies' Aid Society, showing the department to be in a flourishing condition. Mr. McKelvey presented the report of the relief committee. Considerable had been done in relieving the needy, and in all the committee had accomplished much good. The Christian Endeavor society report was read by Miss Koller, the secretary, and Mrs. E. R. Taylor, assistant superintendent of the Junior Christian Endeavor society, gave an excellent report for her society. All reports were encouraging and showed marked advancement in every particular. The chapel had contributed to all boards of the Presbyterian church. The Foreign Missionary Society received $65, and the Home Missionary Society $21. It was announced last evening that the Junior and Senior Christian Endeavor societies had decided to support Baij Nath Bando, a native preacher in India.

On examination, he found that they were Siamese quadruplets, each being joined to the other at the abdomen by ligaments. They are healthy and will live.

AN OFFICER ON TRIAL.

MARSHAL BARRY HELD TO AWAIT THE ACTION OF THE GRAND JURY.

William N. Pangborn Appeared as Counsel for the Plaintiff in the Case, Who Claims Assault—Counselor Reed for Defendant.

The case of Charles L. Vanduary against William Barry, special marshal, charging the latter with assault and battery, was tried last evening before Justice Mattison. W. N. Pangborn represented Vanduary and Borough Counsel Charles A. Reed represented the defendant. It will be remembered that a short time ago both the plaintiff and defendant were at the Arlington Hotel and beeame engaged in a fight, and Marshal Barry attempted to arrest Vanduary. In the fracas it was claimed that the latter was assaulted, hence a warrant was issued for Barry.

The fact was brought out last evening that both men were under the influence of liquor, and the majority of testimony showed that both were very much intoxicated.

Julius Werts, the bartender, stated that on the night in question both men were refused drink. Vanduary then went out and the others followed.

There was conflicting testimony given as to where Vanduary was attacked, but it was believed that it happened on the sidewalk in front of the hotel. A. Baldwin, of Washingtonville, who saw the affair, gave the strongest testimony. He testified that he saw Vanduary assaulted. However, no one would swear positively that they saw the man kicked. Mr. Reed claimed that the complaint was wrong and that Marshal Barry was justified in his actions, there being no proof that he acted otherwise.

Mr. Pangborn made a short, but strong, plea on behalf of his client. The general opinion seemed to be that the witnesses knew more than they would tell.

The witnesses called were A. Baldwin, Marshal Line, J. J. Kleiner, T. Melcher, T. McGann, Frank Vermeule, A. Lutkins, Elias Southard, D. F. Drake, Chief Marshal Wm. Wilson, Jacob Hipp, and Marshal Barry. After both sides were given an opportunity to talk, Justice Mattison held the defendant in $200 bail to await the action of the grand jury, on Tuesday, April 11th. Mayor B. A. Hegeman, Jr., furnished the bail.

WASN'T UP TO RECOMMENDATION.

A Bound Brook Farmer Skips Out With His Wife's Money.

Some time ago H. A. C. Hines, of South Bound Brook, engaged a man named Henry Postel to farm for him, and about the 15th of March Postel took possession of Mr. Hines' cottage. The farmer came well recommended both as a tiller of the soil and as a man, but must have been on his good behavior where formerly employed, because on Monday he sought pastures new, not forgetting to take with him all the money he could lay his hands on. He left his wife, who is evidently much too good for him, as since her marriage, some time last September, he has spent nearly $400 belonging to her, all the poor woman had. She is now penniless and in poor health, but Mrs. Hines will look after her.

A meeting of the Plainfield branch of the State Mutual Building and Loan Association was held last night. H. O. Hance was elected a member of the Board of Directors in the place of A. Vanderbeek. George R. Rockfellow was appointed to represent the association at the meeting of the State association at Camden on April 22d. The annual meeting of the Plainfield society, was called for May 5th.

Hackmen Arrested for Soliciting Custom.

John Lynch and Wm. Kennedy, two hackmen, were arraigned before City Judge DeMeza this morning on the charge of violating the hack ordinance and soliciting customers while standing on the sidewalk. Sergeant Kiely made the arrest. The men pleaded guilty and the Judge suspended sentence.

During the winter of 1893, F. M. Martin, of Long Reach, West Va., contracted a severe cold which left him with a cough. In speaking of how he cured it he says: "I used several kinds of cough syrup but found no relief until I bought a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, which relieved me almost instantly, and in a short time brought about a complete cure." When troubled with a cough or cold use this remedy and you will not find it necessary to try several kinds before you get relief. It has been in the market for over twenty years and constantly grown in favor and popularity. For sale at 25 and 50 cents per bottle at Armstrong's pharmacy, Park and North avenues.

STUBBORN MORNING FIRE

A CARELESS YOUNGSTER AND A FEW MATCHES CAUSE A BLAZE.

The Conflagration Started in a Quantity of Excelsior, and Required 40,000 Gallons of Water to Extinguish—The Loss.

A careless youngster and a few dangerous matches was the cause of a stubborn blaze for the fire department to cope with this morning. The fire was in the home of Eugene H. L. Randolph, 629 LaGrande avenue, where his four-year-old boy was playing in the attic. The little fellow had got hold of some matches and set fire to a quantity of excelsior. The flames were soon discovered, and a still alarm was sent to the fire department headquarters from Keeley's stables. The Alerts and Engine Company No. 2 responded, but before they arrived at the scene of the conflagration someone sent in an alarm from Box 24 at Scott's Press Works. A line of hose was laid from the hydrant in front of the Press Works, and water was soon put on the flames, which were confined to the attic.

A trunk of books and papers of considerable value were destroyed as well as some bedding, but a trunk containing the wedding dresses of Mrs. Randolph were saved. About 40,000 gallons of water were used to extinguish the fire. The loss will probably amount to between $400 and $500, and may necessitate the building of a new roof on the house. The furniture in the other parts of the house was not destroyed.

Mr. Randolph, who has been ill for some time, was carried from the house and taken into the home of a neighbor.

The chemical engine was quick to respond, with Driver George Fiering in the seat, but it had only proceeded as far as tht corner of Watchung avenue and Second street, when a small section of the axle broke and set the wheel. The apparatus was unable to continue on its way, and this was why the fire got such a headway. Chief Doane told a Press reporter after the fire that the chemical engine would have quenched it in short order, if the accident had not occurred. The engine remained where it was stuck for almost an hour before it was taken back to the fire department headquarters. The break was not caused by any neglect on the part of the firemen.

THEATRICAL.

The Waite Company gave another good show in Music Hall last night, and tonight they close their engagement here with "The Hidden Hand," which shows the versatility of the company to splended advantage. This is a revival of one of the most successful pieces ever placed on the stage, and it has been so long since it was seen in this city that it will be new to most people. The specialties are refined and entertaintng, and the musical programme rendered by the orchestra connected with the show is, to use a hackneyed term, alone worth the price of admission.

Beautiful "Alabama," Augustus Thomas' famous play will be produced at Music Hall next Wednesday night. This piece will not disappoint those who go to hear an idyllic story and see a play full of pathos and delightfully characteristic southern life. Colonel Preston is an old Southerner, who fifteen years after the war hates the north, which he has weaned away his only son to become a Federal soldier. The Colonel continues to live on his old plantation at Talladega. A railroad is to run through the little town and its projection brings to the place a northern railroad man, Capt. Davenport, accompanied by a young northern surveyor. The former, who is in reality the supposed dead son of Col. Preston, conceals his idenity for some time, fearing that his father cherishes resentment. The story is played out solely in the south and deals with treachery, mystery and chivalry, all of which is, of course, adorned by incidents of love. The following clever people will be seen: Clement Bainbridge, Scott Cooper, George B. Miller, Edward B. Kelley, Robert Conness, W. N. Wadsworth, Charles Moore, the Misses Ethel Irving, Zoe Halbart, Julia Folland and Adelaide Sawyer.

An Affidavit.

This is to certify that on May 11th, I walked to Melick's drug store on a pair of crutches and bought a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm for inflammatory rheumatism which had crippled me up. After using three bottles I am completely cured. I can cheerfully recommend it. Charles H. Wetzel, Sunbury, Pa. Sworn and subscribed to before me on August 10th, 1894. Walter Shipman, J. P. For sale at 50c per bottle at Armstrong's pharmacy, Park and North avenues.

WEDDING ANNIVERSARY SURPRISE.

Mr. and Mrs. James A. Love Given an Unexpected Visitation.

Mr. and Mrs. James A. Love, of East Front street, celebrated the second anniversary of their marriage yesterday. The day passed in the usual way, but shades of evening brought a complete surprise. Their most intimate friends had previously arranged to give them a surprise, and at the appointed hour met at the home of Miss Lizzie Dunn, on West Fourth street, and then walked to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Love. The latter were unsuspecting and were completely taken back to see a small army of young people enter their home. The fright was soon over and then the young folks went in for a good time. Dancing was the feature, music for which was furnished by Frazee. About midnight refreshments were served and after hearty congratulations were extended to the host and hostess, the guests departed. Mr. and Mrs. Love received as presents a very handsome tea table, a brass kettle and a large picture. Those present were: Mr. and Mrs. Will F. Williams, Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Garretson, Mr. and Mrs. Uhler, Mr. and Mrs. Vanderhoff, Mr. and Mrs. Merton Lunger, the Misses Sheppard, Lottie Wilson, Mabel Wilson, Mabelle Force, Runyon, Lizzie Dunn, Fenner, Gardner, Mabel Vanderhoff, Mrs. Richards, of this city; Miss Love, of Succasunna; and Wm. Crawford, Edgar Sheppard, Joseph Fuller, Harry Ulrick and Wm. F. Dunn.

GLENS AND BALLINGTON BOOTH.

The Leader of the The Volunteers Says the Deserters Count for Two.

Peter Glen and his wife, who since the formation of Ballington Booth's Volunteers have been identified with the organization, left the Volunteers on Wednesday and returned to the Salvation Army, in which both were formerly officers. Mr. and Mrs. Glen were the first to resign from the Salvation Army after Commander Booth was dismissed. Next to Commander and Mrs. Booth, Glen was the most active man in organizing the new movement. When Commander Booth organized his staff Glen was made a Lieutenant-Colonel in charge of the field officers of the Volunteers.

When Commander and Mrs. Booth left for Chicago on Monday, Glen, as the senior staff officer, was left in charge of the Volunteers headquarters. Hardly had the Booths got out of New York before Glen was in communication with the Salvationists. This continued through Monday and Tuesday. On Wednesdey the Glens rejoined the Army. Then he telegraphed his resignation to Commander Booth.

"It will make no particle of difference to the Volunteer Army," says the Commander. "There will be two less, that is all. It seems to me that Col. and Mrs. Glen exhibit weakness and vacillation. Why did they join us unless they were sure they were right? You may say for me that a dozen names, each more potent, more valuable, more efficient for good than are those of these weak-kneed secéders, were added to the rolls of the Volunteers right here in Chicago today."

AN INCORRIGIBLE YOUNGSTER.

He Promised to Go Home But Ran away Again Instead.

A little colored boy has been making it lively for his parents who live in the West End. He was brought here from the south in the hope that the change might improve his character but it didn't. Thursday of last week he ran away and slept in lumber yards until last Wednesday when he returned and was arrested on complaint of his mother by Patrolman Saunders. The Judge pretended to be very stern and the youngster, very badly frightened, promised to go home again and behave himself.

Thursday the mother came and told the Judge that her boy had not come home at all but disappeared. The police are now looking for him. His name is Charles Moore.

Their Trial Adjourned.

The trial of Lemuel Perry and Samuel Johnson was adjourned this morning in the city court for one week. Ex-Judge W. A. Coddington represented Perry.

Paid for His Fun.

Ellis Eddy paid a fine of $3 this morning for being drunk and disorderly on Liberty street last night. The only other alternative was fifteen days in jail.

Miss Elsie Horne, of Willow avenue, and Miss Madeline Day, of Myrtle avenue, are spending a few days at Bethlehem.

EVENING DANCED AWAY.

A PLEASANT SOCIAL DANCE AT THE PARK CLUB LAST NIGHT.

First Event After the Lenten Season at That Popular Place of Society—Names of Those Who Were Present.

The social season after the Lenten vacation opened at the Park Club last evening with a subcription dance given by the junior entertainment committee.

The young people of the city and borough gathered there and danced or conversed while the time flew swiftly by. The attendance was good, but not large enough to uncomfortably crowd the floor. There was the usual contingent of young men who spent part of their time amid the pleasures of bowling, pool and billiards on the lower floor and returned to whirl and glide about the waxed floor with some fair partner. As is usual with Park Club events, it was a great success and added more credit to the committee in charge, which consisted of Edmund Rusmore and Charles S. Cook. The patronesses were Mrs. S. St. John McCutchen and Mrs. J. H. Howell.

Among those present were: Mrs. E P. Williams, Mrs. C. A. Reed, the Misses Shreve, Pond, Fannie Dryden, Marie Dryden, Edith Clapp, Cornelia Faber, Marion L. Henderson, Sarah Long, Laura Long, Florence Williams, Eleanor Williams, Mabel Van-Deventer, Halla Van Deventer, Eleanor T. Van Deventer, May Shreve, Kathery McClure, Alice Thompson, Alice Barlow, Grace Barlow and Genevieve Daniel and Clara Woltmann; Messrs. Fletcher, Henry C. Wells, Walter Douglass, Ernest Swayze, Edward Rushmore, John Cottrell, of Jersey City. Charles S. Cook, Everett J. Peck, A. Willis West, Harry A. Patten, Howard Turrill, Robert Suffren, S. Arens, Alfred E. Holmes, Charles Dupee, Meredith Dryden, Carl Stedman Brown, Edward J. Waring, Jr., Fred G. Smith, Percy Ingalls, F. D. Bennett, F. E. Richards, William L. McClure, William M. McCutchen, Charles E. Faber, Charles Stillman, William J. P. Thiers, Elston M. French, Fred P. Taylor, Arthur F. Freeman, Albert Woltmann and Percy Long.

The music was furnished by Rogers.

ERIE PLANS IN NEW JERSEY.

Reported to be Arranging to Run Cars to Philadelphia.

The Erie Railroad, it is alleged, is trying to get a route to Philadelphia. The Erie Railroad system, which recently absorbed the New York and Greenwood Lake and the Watchung Railroads, will soon begin the work of double tracking the Orange branch of the line—the Watchung, and the Greenwood Lake roads, as far as Montclair Heights. The Erie also contemplates widening the cut at Kearny and building a bridge over the Passaic River. From West Orange the road will be extended across Main street, probably by depressing the tracks, to connect with the South Orange and Maplewood trolley line. When the road shall have reached the terminus of the present line of the trolley company, it is suggested that the extension to Philadelphia may be begun.

The Erie is now supposed to be controlled by the Vanderbilts. Neither the Erie, nor the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western has a route to Philadelphia and both are anxious for such an acquisition. This would probably remove all obstacles in the way of the crossing at Milburn.

If the Erie extension to Bound Brook should be made, it would be possible at that point to make such connections as would allow the Lehigh coal being carried over the Erie to Jersey City through a section where it is now possible to secure Lehigh only by long, roundabout routes. The Erie would also shorten the coal route to Jersey City and New York. At Bound Brook connections could be made with the Phildelphia and Reading road that would enable the Erie passenger trains to be run on to Philadelphia.

Festival of Violets.

A festival of violets will be given in Trinity Reformed church on Thursday and Friday afternoons and evenings, April 30th, and May 1st, by the Whatsoever Circle of King's Daughters. The event will be a novel one. Refreshments will also be served.

It will be an agreeable surprise to persons subject to attacks of bilious colic to learn that prompt relief may be had by taking Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. In many instances the attack may be prevented by taking this remedy as soon as the first symptoms of the disease appear. 25 and 50c bottles for sale at Armstrong's pharmacy, Park and North avenues.

CUBANS ACQUITTED

The Alleged Filibusters Released from Custody at New York.

JURY OUT ONLY TEN MINUTES

The Judge's Charge Strongly in Their Favor—Goods Seized from Them Must Be Returned—Verdict Received with Cheers.

New York, April 11.—The jury in the case of the Cubans arrested recently on the charge of attempting to aid the insurgents in connection with the Bermuda filibustering expedition, after ten minutes deliberation, returned a verdict last night of "not guilty" in the case of all the defendants. Judge Brown ordered the discharge of the defendants and directed that such of their property as had been seized be returned to them. When the verdict of the jury was announced there was much handclapping, which the court officers only made a feint at stopping. "What do you think of the verdict," Col. Olcott was asked by a reporter. "Just tell them," was the reply, "that the press was with us, the public was with us, we were right and the chandeliers in the court room rang a pean in favor of liberty, inspired by the applause." Counsellor W. M. Ivins was equally enthusiastic, though not so poetic, over the result, and the Cubans, who have watched the trial from the spectators benches for the past week, made the corridors and elevators of the federal building ring with their jubilation.

The Judge's Charge.

Judge Brown, in delivering his charge to the jury, told of the object of the statute under which the accused were indicted and of the necessity for it. The statute prohibited, he said, persons from enlisting in this country to serve against foreign governments with which the United States is at peace, but it does not prohibit individuals, either one or any other number, from going to foreign countries for the purpose of enlistment. The question for the jury to decide was whether the defendants had been concerned in a military expedition. This, he said, was an undertaking by a body of men of a military character. There must be a body of men. He could not conceive how an expedition could be characterized as military unless there were military characteristics. There must be soldiers and officers, military orders, obedience, discipline. While it was lawful for persons to take arms and ammunition to a country in a state of war, persons engaged in such operations were liable to capture or sinking by the enemy, and hence were entitled to secrecy in their work to prevent surprise. The failure of the defendants to testify was not to be taken as a point against them. Judge Brown said it was the duty of the government to prove its case against them beyond a reasonable doubt.

GOMEZ IS CONFIDENT.

He Tells of Weyler's Cruelties and Asks for Cartridges.

Washington, April 11.—The following letter from Gen. Gomez to Cuban Delegate Palma has just been received here: "Dear Friend—The war continues more active and hard on account of the fierce character which Gen. Weyler has given to it. Our wounded are followed and assassinated cruelly; he who has the misfortune to fall into the hands of the Spanish troops perishes without fail. The peaceful country people only find death and dishonor. Cuba to-day, like in 1868, only presents pools of blood dried by conflagration. Our enemies are burning the houses to deprive us, according to them, of our quarters for spring. We will never use reprisals, for we understand that the revolution will never need to triumph by being cruel and sanguinary. We will go on with this war, the ultimate result of which, you need not worry about, with success, for the arms of the republic. We fight when convenient to us against an enemy tired out and without faith. My plans are well understood by my subordinates and each one knows what to do. Give us cartridges so that our soldiers can fight, and you can depend that in the spring the enemy's army will be greatly reduced, and it will be necessary to send to Spain for another army, and I do not know whether it would be rash to say that perhaps Spain has not the money with which to do it. We have a great military advantage over the enemy in the incapacity of the majority of Weyler's generals. The false official reports of supposed victories with which they cynically pretend to deceive themselves, their government and the world contribute to the speedy triumph of the revolution. Much has been said and written about the recognition of belligerency by the American government. This would be very advantageous to us and only justice, but as, when we rose against tyranny, we only counted on the strength of our arms and the firm resolution of victory we follow our march unconcerned, satisfied that what is to happen will happen. Your friend, MAXIMO GOMEZ."

Bermuda at Philadelphia.

Philadelphia, April 11.—The alleged filibustering steamship Bermuda arrived here last night from Puerto Cortez, Honduras, with a cargo of bananas. Whatever the exciting experiences of the Bermuda may have been in effecting a landing under the search lights of the Spanish men-of-war, of the men and arms she took to Cuba and her detention in Honduras, those aboard are not ready to relate. All hands have been enjoined to absolute secrecy.

HER HUSBAND'S COUNSEL.

A Woman Appears Before the House Elections Committee.

Washington, April 11.—The unusual spectacle of a woman appearing in a contested election case was presented yesterday in house elections committee No. 1. The committee were considering the contest of William H. Felton against John F. Maddox from the seventh Georgia district. A dispute arose as to a statement made by a justice of the peace named Gaines in which it appeared that he had agreed to do certain things. The counsel for Mr. Maddox produced an affidavit from Gaines denying that he had made such a statement, whereupon Mrs. Felton, the wife of the contestant, arose and briefly addressed the committee. The controverted statement appeared in Mrs. Felton's handwriting and she asserted that she wrote it at the request of Gaines, she acting, for the moment, as his amanuensis. The circumstance was then developed that Mrs. Felton, who has a bright, intellectual face, and who showed by her manner and conversation that she was a woman of unusual ability, had assisted her husband in his several campaigns for congress, and that in the present contest she has been retained as one of his counsel.

DIED IN A DENTIST'S CHAIR.

An Aged Man Epires at Providence After Taking Gas.

Providence, April 11.—Benjamin G. Chace, an aged and well-known citizen, died suddenly in a chair in the office of Dentist M. Y. Simmons yesterday. He had just had a tooth extracted while under influence of gas and died after regaining consciousness. Mr. Chase was 82 years of age, but apparently in good health, except from the feebleness of his years. Two physicians were called, but life was extinct before either arrived. Dr. Simmons is the oldest practitioner in the state and has had an experience of forty-six years in this city. He has always made a specialty of extracting, and is regarded as an expert in his line. He was the first to use nitrous oxide in this city, and has employed it steadily since its introduction. Medical Examiner Palmer will hold an autopsy to-day. B. G. Chace was formerly in the wholesale grocery business in this city, but retired a few years ago.

Summer Lectures at Saratoga.

Saratoga, N. Y., April 11.—The committee in charge of the summer lecture course, which proved such a success last summer, have engaged Gen. John B. Gordon, Bishop William Stevens Perry of Iowa and Bishop John P. Newman to speak. The committee are in correspondence with George W. Kennan, Russell W. Conwell and Hamilton W. Gibson. Gen. Gordon will deliver his lecture in Convention hall on August 27.

Plaintiff's property, on which she carried $2,100 insurance, was damaged by fire. The company offered her $900, but she wanted it all. Judge Hall finds for the defendants and orders plaintiff to pay the costs.

Providence, R. I., April 11.—James Carpenter, horseman, was arraigned before Judge Sweetland in the district court yesterday afternoon on a charge of manslaughter for the death of Harry P. Morse, a jockey. He was adjudged probably guilty, and under $5,000 bound over to the higher court. He furnished bail.

COL. COCKERILL DEAD

The Well-Known American Newspaper Man Expires in Egypt.

STRICKEN WITH APOPLEXY AT CAIRO

He Was on His Way Home from Japan, Where He Had Been Reporting the Recent War for a New York Newspaper.

New York, April 11.—A cablegram from Cairo says that Col. John A. Cockerill, the well known newspaper correspondent, died of apoplexy at six minutes past 10 o'clock last night Col. Cockerill's career in the newspaper field was remarkably successful. He gained his distinction on the Cincinnati Enquirer when that paper was owned by Faran and McLean, the latter gentleman being the father of the present owner of the paper. When young McLean secured control of the paper Cockerill went to St. Louis, where his success continued until the unfortunate trouble with Col. Slayback arose, resulting in Col. Slayback being killed by Col. Cackerill in the latter's office. Self-defense was shown, but Cockerill soon after left St. Louis. His next greatest success was in building up the New York World after Joseph Pulitzer became its owner. Later he managed the New York Morning Advertizer and Commercial-Advertizer. He greatly improved these papers. Soon after the Japanese-China war broke out he went to Japan as a war correspondent for the New York Herald. Col. Cockerill was a correspondent whom the Herald has often had the fullest reason to praise; he was a man of whom American journalism has every reason to be proud. His death came too suddenly for him to reap the full reward of his excellent work and loyalty. He left Japan only a few weeks ago, after the Mikado had bestowed upon him one of the most coveted decorations, that of the Sacred Treasure. He was resting in Cairo for a while, studying the Anglo-Egyptain campaign before leaving for home, when he was so suddenly stricken down.

His Early Career.

John A. Cockerill was born in Dayton, O., in 1845, and his father, a man of substance, had intended to give him a college education. The war breaking out, however, the elder Cockerill enlisted in the union forces, of which he became brigadier-general, and his son emulated his example. Being too young to bear arms, he took service in the drum corps of a regiment. After the war young Cockerill tried his hand at sticking type on the Scion of Temperance, in Dayton. He subsequently become one of the clerks of the Ohio senate. He next became a partner with the famous Clement L. Vallandigham in the publication of the Dayton Empire From Dayton, O., Col. Cockerill went to Hamilton, O., where he found employment as general reporter on a paper. From Hamilton he went to Cincinnati and accepted an offer of a place on the Enquirer and began his career on a first class newspaper as it humblest reporter. When the Russo-Turkish war broke out he went to the scene of hostilities as special correspondent for the Enquirer, and materially added to his reputation by his graphic dispatches. Col. Cockerill was a member of the Loyal Legion, the Ohio society, the Republican club and the Quaint club and was president of the New York Press club. He leaves a widow, but no children.

TRADE STILL QUIET

No Material Increase Noted During the Present Week.

PRICES GENERALLY REMAIN VERY LOW

Backward Weather and Uncertainty as to Continued Employment Two Causes of the Depression—List of Idle Hands Increased.

New York, April 11.—Dun's review of the state of trade for the week just closing to-day says: The volume of business has not on the whole increased, nor have prices appreciably advanced since April 1, when the range for all commodities was the lowest ever known in this country. Bread-stuffs and iron products have risen slightly, but some other articles have declined, and the root of the matter is that demand for consumption is still below expectations. The number of hands employed has been slightly lessened by strikes in some establishments, and by stoppage or reduction of force in others, but the change during the past week has not been relatively important. The weather has not favored active distribution of spring goods, and uncertainty as to continued employment effects the purchases of hands in a large number of establishments. On the other hand, exports of $1,300,000 gold to Germany for Russia and the passage of the Cuban resolutions are not now regarded as seriously influencing business.

Railroad Statistics.

Stocks have been extremely dull, and yet railroad traffic is heavy, east bound from Chicago 82,694 tons last week, against 60,614 last year, and 70,373 in 1893, while west bound is satisfactory and in the lower classes increasing. Reports of earnings have not improved, the March statement, covering practically all the roads usually reporting, shows increase of 4.2 per cent. over last year, but decrease of 11.2 compared with 1893, and is less satisfactory than returns of January and February. Domestic business, reflected by clearing house exchanges, continues about 20 per cent. smaller than in 1893, though slightly better than last year, the occurrence of Good Friday preventing exact comparison. Foreign trade shows a decrease of nearly 10 per cent. for the week in exports, though as much increase in March, while imports gain nearly 20 per cent., though in March the decrease was 14 per cent.

Iron and Steel.

The billet pool and other combinations have raised prices of pig iron and steel, but as yet finished products have gained scarcely anything, nor has demand for them increased. The output April 1 was 190,281 tons weekly against 189,583 March 1, but reported stocks unsold increased 58,168 tons in March, or 13,132 weekly, and there is besides the unknown accumulation of the great steel concerns. Prices for Lake ore are announced, as expected, $1.10 higher than last year, and the coke combination makes no reduction, but gradually lessens output. While purchasers of pig to anticipate future wants have been heavy actual consumption is but moderate. Minor metals are dull, but lead weaker at 3.05 cents on forced sales west.

Boots and Shoes; Cotton and Wool.

Prices of boots and shoes do not change, although leather is lower. Southern dealers have bought freely but western have not, and there are still wanting for most varieties orders enough to keep shops fully occupied. Shipments from the east are now larger, in response to orders some time ago. Leather has been reduced 1 cent for hemlock sole and union and glove grain, with other quotations revised, so that the decline averages about 4 per cent. for the week. Hides are a little stronger at Chicago, recipts being small. Wool is weaker with sales for the week only 2,833,600 pounds at the three chief markets, the smallest for many years. Prices tend lower except for fine washed fleece, and manufacturers are rapidly reducing production. There is fair demand in the dress goods branch, especially since important steps by customs authorities to stop undervaluations of French and German goods, but it is estimated that not 40 per cent. of the men's wear machinery is at work. There have also been cotton mills stopping or reducing time this week. Further reduction in shirting prints, to the lowest point ever touched, failed to increase the demand materially.

Business Failures.

The first quarterly report ever made of failures in all leading branches of manufacture and trade, in addition to the regular statement given last week, will be found highly instructive. The heaviest liabilities in any branch were in dry goods, but because of one Texas failure, other dry goods failures falling behind those in the lumber manufacture, in general stores, groceries, boots and shoes and clothing, which follow in that order. Average liabilities in different branches for three years differ very widely, but surprising steadiness is disclosed in the percentage of failures to the number of firms in most branches of business. Failures for the past week have been 209 in the United States against 207 last year, and 33 in Canada against 27 last year.

FILLED CHEESE BILL

House To-day Debating the Measure Under the Five-Minute Rule.

Washington, April 11.—The debate on the filled cheese bill is being continued to-day in the house under the five-minute rule. The objection of several of those who spoke yesterday was not to the principle of the bill, but to the extent of taxation sought to be imposed. Efforts will be made to reduce the rate of tax and the schedule of licenses, and if this can be accomplished the opposition to the bill will be apparently comparatively feeble. Next Saturday has been set apart for the delivery of eulogies upon the late Representative Cogswell of the Sixth district of Massachusetts.

One Afraid, the Other Timid.

Butte, Mont., April 11.—It has just been made public that when Congressman Linton declined to accept the challenge of Capt. Thomas Phelan of Kansas City it was accepted on his behalf by Cyrus E. Page, a well known old-timer of Butte. Page selected rifles at seventy-five yards, the duel to take place in Butte within six months. Phelan replied, but claimed he had now become the challenged party and wanted to name weapons, but agreed to the rifles at ten paces. Page claims he is the challenged party, having simply accepted the challenge for Linton.

Black Plague in China.

Washington, April 11.—A report received by Surgeon-General Wyman of the Marine hospital service from Passed Assistant Surgeon Arnold of the navy, stationed at Hong Kong, China, states that the black plague has become epidemic there. It is also very prevalent at other points, particularly so at Canton. The Chinese authorities have endeavored to conceal the true situation.

Ejected from Their Church.

New Haven, Conn., April 11.—The members of the Bethel African Methodist Episcopal church have been ejected from their church here on account of the financial condition of the society. A mortgage has been foreclosed and the society is now homeless. The society has been in a rather demoralized condition for more than a year owing to internal dissensions.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the eustachian tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube be restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed for ever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give one hundred dollars for any case of deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

the benefits to be derived from Bovinine. A well-known champion bicyclist heartily commends it. Fred Titus, of the Spaulding Racing Team says, "I have been taking Bovinine while training, am surprised at the strength and renewed vigor I derived from its use. It is grand to take after hard riding, as it very soon restores the life you lose at such times."

Bovinine

Next Monday will be the anniversary of the battle at Bound Brook, fought April 13th, 1777.

Morristown is too wealthy to be progressive. Most of her influential citizens are opposed to the construction of a street railway in the town.

The greater New York seems doomed. New York and Brooklyn Mayors are opposed to the consolidation bill before the State Legislature, and without their approval it will fail to become a law.

In an interview yesterday Gov. Griggs, of New Jersey, who was the guest of the McKinley Club, of Hartford, Conn., said that he thought the New Jersey delegates to the St. Louis Convention would be instructed to vote for McKinley. He did not declare himself a distinctively McKinley man.

There is an evident purpose on the part of the New Jersey Republicans to make a serious move for the nomination of Garrett A. Hobart for Vice-President. The ambition is laudable, but the discretion is terribly weak. If the nomination for President goes to the west, the great efforts of the managers will be to coax New York into the traces. They certainly will not fool with New Jersey.—True American.

In every community there are a large number of improvements sought for that the busy municipal officials are unable to give proper attention to, not by any willful inattention on their part, but because of the lack of public funds and a widespread public interest in their accomplishment. Where there is one person with civic pride and a desire to accomplish something in that line, there are five who mentally agree with them, but make no effort to assist them. It is just this condition of affairs that the Town Improvement Association, which was organized yesterday morning, seeks to obviate. By organizing for agitation and work, they present a solid front to effect their ideas in local government. In other New Jersey towns the women have accomplished many things that are needful for the beauty of the place and its general desirability as a place of residence, and the efforts of the Improvement Association in this city will doubtless be much the same. The fact that their constitution provides for membership of young as well as old, shows their intention to interest and utilize all ages in the work of municipal improvement.

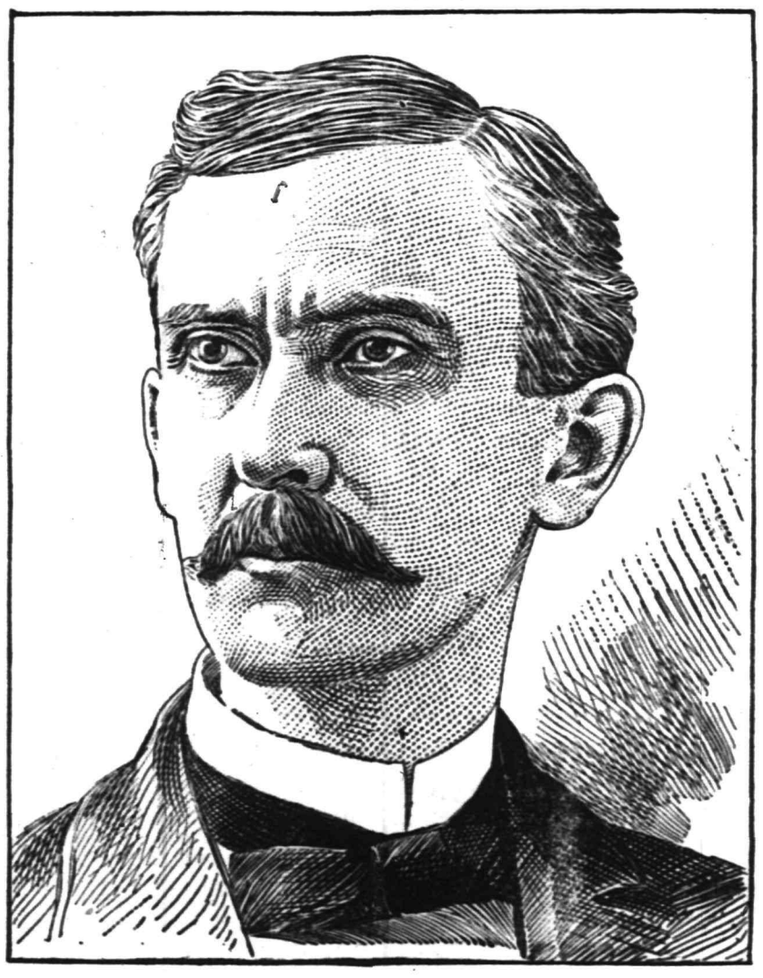
MAJOR W. W. ROBBINS

Framer of the Indiana Military Bill Made Well by Paine's Celery Compound.



Major Robbins of the 2d Indiana State guards, aide on Gen McKee's staff and president of Camp Gray, has been for two years one of the most influential members of the Indiana Legislature and the author of the famous Indiana Military Law of 1889.

Major Robbins was a very sick man up to the time of taking Paine's celery compound.

In proof of what that remarkable remedy can do to make a sick person strong and well, Major Robbins' letter from Indianapolis best tells its own straightforward story.

I was troubled with a torpid liver, constipation and the accompanying sallow complexion, while my entire nervous system was entirely deranged and I was greatly reduced in flesh. While in this condition I was taken down with a very severe attack of the grip, and was, for a long time, confined to the house and my bed.

'I resorted to various medicines and tonics, and under their temporary influence made several attempts to resume my business of traveling about in the interests of A. Steffen, cigar manufacturer of this city; but relapse succeeded relapse, and I not only was obliged to abandon my business, but growing gradually worse, became apprehensive of the ultimate result.

"At this juncture my mother-in-law who had used your remedy with gratifying results, prevailed upon me to commence taking Pain's celery compound, and it gives me much pleasure to state that I at once began to feel its beneficial effects.

"My appetite, which had failed me, returned, my constipation ceased, and very soon my liver became normal in its action. Following this my sleeplessness and headaches ceased, and I began to gain flesh. The insiduous hold on me that the grip had hitherto had was relaxed, and I felt invigorated and strengthened, so I could resume my vocation, and feel free from the lan uid, enervated feeling that had so long possessed me.

"My friends were pleasantly surprised with the change in my condition, and I was only too happy to recommend Paine's celery compound to such of my acquaintances as were suffering from any of the complaints which so complicated my case. Therefore, I again say I feel impelled by a deep sense of gratitude to express how much I have been helped, for I now feel and look like a new man."

Physicians who rely on Paine's celery compound—as thousands of the most wide-awake members of the profession are doing, especially now that nearly every one feels the need of a genuine spring remedy—physicians know very well what that languor and that tired feeling means. They know that debility today often results in nervous prostration tomorrow, unless the tired system is quickly invigorated

That is why all over the country today Paine's celery compound is being taken by the advice of skilled physicians. It is the one remedy that physicians can conscientiously call a genuine spring remedy. Try it.

What Poisoned the Children.

Specimens of the poisonous roots recently eaten by four children in South Bound Brook were sent to the Department of Agriculture at Washington several days ago by John G. Smith, Jr., V. K. Chestnut, of the Division of Botany, writes that the roots are of the cicuta maculata species, commonly called water hemlock, spotted cowbone, musvuash root or beaver poison. It is one of the most virulently poisonous plant in the United States.

Nothing can be substituted for the Royal Baking Powder and give as good results.

No other leavening agent will make such light, sweet, delicious, wholesome food.

If some grocers urge another baking powder upon you, it is because of the greater profit upon it. This of itself is evidence of the superiority of the "Royal." To give greater profit the other must be a lower cost powder, and to cost less it must be made with cheaper and inferior materials, and thus, though selling for the same, give less value to the consumer.

To insure the finest cake, the most wholesome food, be sure that no substitute for Royal Baking Powder is accepted by you.

FASHION'S FANCIES.

Hints Which May Prove of Benefit to Well-Dressed Women.

Fancy braids are still fashionably used on many styles of dress. Galloons both wide and narrow are made great use of, and are to be found in all the dark and some of the neutral tones, matching plain dress fabrics, the narrower braids usually finished with a tiny line of gold or silver at each edge, or they show shot, shaded, or Persian mixtures and other fancy combinations in keeping with the varied color schemes of the season.

Alpaca and mohair used to be counted an economical purchase, and perhaps they deserve the reputation they have acquired, but as now sold they can by no means be called cheap fabrics, and shoppers are often surprised to find them quite as expensive as silk, excepting, perhaps, the very finest qualities of silk. It must, however, be said for them that these materials are double width, and the fact that mohair is one of the most fashionable dress fabrics, if not quite the most fashionable, must not be overlooked when passing judgment upon it.

Trim, taut and preeminently smart are some of the new spring coats that are shaped to suit every form and fancy. Some are belted, others finished with strapped seams and a gay lining. Some are tight-fitting in the back, with loose box fronts, and again are open-fronted styles with immense revers that continue into spreading cape collars, the revers and collar covered with velvety white cloth, stitched with rows of white silk, or the facing is of white satin, wrought with colored beads and spangles.

A great variety of silky looking feather-weight fancy straws are used for spring hats and bonnets, many of which are in mixed colors, to match iridescent and Persian dress goods. Although reduced somewhat in size, the new round hats are nearly all picturesque in effect, although greatly overburdened with trimming. For dress occasions the tiny toy bonnet continues in undisturbed reign. Quantities of exquisite lace, pins, buckles, bands and slides of beadwork, pearl and gold gimp, and fascinating French flowers and foliage are used on these fresh creations of the milliner.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

HE MADE A DISCOVERY.

How Murat Halstead Was Embarrassed at Meeting a Certain Woman.

The best retort that Murat Halstead ever received is the one which is described as follows:

The old law firm of Goldsmith, Colston, Hoadley & Johnson was one of Mr. Halstead's pet subjects for sarcasm, politically and otherwise. He caught up a phrase which was attributed to the junior partner of the firm, Mr. Johnson, and after calling him a 'shining ornament of the Cincinnati bar' for some time the brilliant Mr. Halstead went further and publicly dubbed Mr. Johnson 'the brass ornament of the Cincinnati bar.' This phrase was so attractive to Mr. Halstead that he never hesitated to use it every possible way. Halstead's day of reckoning came, however.

At an evening gathering Mr. Halstead, who was very susceptible to the charms of the fair sex, saw a handsome woman in the crowd superbly dressed, and with diamonds on her bosom and in her hair that would at once attract attention. He begged to be presented, and was—to Mrs. Johnson. It did not present itself to Mr. Halstead's mind, a little less steady at the time than usual, who the lady might be. He was curious about her.

"Johnson, Johnson?" he repeated, "I have never had the pleasure of meeting you before, Mrs. Johnson. Do you live in Ohio?"

"Oh, yes," replied the lady, brimming over with smiles; "I live in Cincinnati."

"Indeed!" said Mr. Halstead, quite astonished. "May I inquire of what family of Johnsons you are?"

The smiles were more merry this time.

"Mr. Halstead," she replied, "for 15 years I have been trying to polish up the 'brass ornament of the Cincinnati bar.'"—The Collector and Commercial Lawyer.

Joke on Her.

The other day in a street car a man was crowded along in his seat by the very fashionably-dressed young woman, who pushed herself in next to him. Her very full dress skirt further inconvenienced him, for she was so anxious to preserve it from wrinkling while sitting that she swung its folds carelessly over the lap of this man next to her. This person had his own ideas about proper retaliation. He deliberately adjusted his large, clumsily-shod feet so that they appeared to emerge from beneath the skirt. It was not long before they were noticed by some one opposite. The effect of the great, awkward feet, as if belonging to the pretty young woman, was indescribably ludicrous. The looker-on laughed and pointed out the joke to his neighbor. The looks and laughs spread, until all the rest of the car were craning their necks to see the fun. At last the girl herself became conscious of the jest at her expense. With a look like thunder she motioned to the conductor and hastily left them all. — Philadelphia Press.

Chicken Salad Dressing.

To make the dressing, first chill the plate, eggs and oil. Put the yolks of two eggs in a soup plate; add one-half teaspoonful of salt and stir with a silver fork until the yolks are well beaten and mixed; add the oil, drop by drop, being careful to always stir in the same direction, adding a drop of vinegar whenever the mixture begins to look oily. Add only acid enough to keep the dressing from separating. Two eggs will take a pint of oil. Season with salt and red pepper, and lemon juice, if necessary. A perfect mayonaise should not be too acid, as that destroys the flavor of the oil.—St. Louis Republic.

SPOILED THE PERFORMANCE.

Misadventure That Befell an Actor in a Realistic Play.

Last winter a number of literary people indulged from time to time in amateur theatricals. During February they produced a comedy. One of the actors, says London Tid-Bits, played the part of a burglar and had to climb up the outside of the house in which the entertainment was given and enter through the window, which was at the rear of the improvised stage. He hurried around from the dressing-rooms and valiantly commenced to struggle up the wall, when a policeman grasped him by the neck, thinking him a veritable burglar. He started to explain, but the minion of the law would have none of it. The audience was wondering in the meantime why the play did not proceed, and the young actors and actresses on the stage were eagerly waiting for the burglar to enter and give them the cue, when they heard shrieks, yells, oaths and threats from the garden. Rushing out, they found the amateur burglar thrashing wildly about the grass, while a brawny policeman sat on his shoulders hammering his neck into the mud.

A False Diagnosis.

La Grippe is confounded by many persons with a severe attack of catarrh, which in some respects resembles the former. These individuals sufier severely with pain about the forehead, eyes and ears, with soreness in throat and stoppage of the nasal passages, and, in fact, are incapacitated for work of any kind for days at a time. These are catarrhal sufferers. Ely's Cream Balm has been used with the best results in such cases. The remedy will give instant relief.

Castoria.

"Castoria is an excellent medicine for children. Mothers have repeatedly told me of its good effect upon their children."
DR. G. C. OSGOOD, Lowell, Mass.

"Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I am acquainted. I hope the day is not far distant when mothers will consider the real interest of their children, and use Castoria instead of the various quack nostrums which are destroying their loved ones, by forcing opium, morphine, soothing syrup and other hurtful agents down their throats, thereby sending them to premature graves."
DR. J. F. KINCHELOE, Conway, Ark.

Castoria.

"Castoria is so well adapted to children that I recommend it as superior to any prescription known to me."
H. A. ARCHER, M. D., 111 So. Oxford St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Our physicians in the children's department have spoken highly of their experience in their outside practice with Castoria, and although we only have among our medical supplies what is known as regular products we are free to confess that the merits of Castoria has won us to look with favor upon it."

SHOULD THEY FIGHT?

Not England and the United States.

But Children of All Ages and Conditions. Timely Reinforcements in the Battle for Existence.

Perhaps you have an answer for us to this question all ready. And perhaps we may disagree with you. Listen to our side of the story. Is it not a terrible warfare which sweeps from the face of the earth one-third of all children under five years of age? Yet this is the history of the great struggle in which we are all engaged—the battle of life. Some children yield at the first approach of disease, while others make a grand struggle for existence. In this sense, then, we are all agreed that children should be good fighters. They can best fight disease when they are hearty and strong. We do not mean simply when they are fat. Fat is not muscle. They need strong bones, sound nerves and firm muscles. The natural food for all infants is milk. The fat of this food, the cream, exists in the milk as minute globules, resembling in this respect the minute globules of fat found in Scott's Emulsion of Cod-liver Oil with Hypophosphites. There is also mineral matter in milk, and it is in Scott's Emulsion as well. This preparation looks like milk, and children soon become fond of it. So many infants and young children do not appear to derive much benefit from their food. They remain extremely thin, weak, do not increase in weight or height. They seem to have some disease which is actually wasting the body away. Their system calls for food, and yet the food does not nourish them. But food they must have. They also need some remedy which will alter or change the action of the organs of the body to healthy activity. There are remedies which naturally exist in cod-liver oil that are capable of making this change. For this reason they are called "alteratives." The hypophosphites are also of service, as they strengthen the nervous system, which is the great seat of power. The poorly nourished body calls for a fatty food, such as the fat of cod-liver oil. These are the reasons why Scott's Emulsion has proved so valuable to children. It restores healthy action. It feeds. It nourishes. It supplies needed material to the growing body. We cannot state too strongly the importance of these few early years to future health and happiness. Children do not seem to bear raw cod-liver oil well. It is so difficult to digest. But the oil in Scott's Emulsion has already been digested, and is, therefore, in a condition to render prompt aid.

Scott's Emulsion contains more pure Norwegian Cod-liver Oil than any other emulsion in the world, that will stand the test of time as being a perfect inseparable emulsion. Ask your doctor.

COPYRIGHT, 1894, BY BRET HARTE.

A fashionably-dressed, pretty woman, who in style, bearing, opulent contentment and ingenuous self-consciousness was in perfect keeping with the slight ostentation of the equipage, was its only occupant. As Boompointer stepped into the vehicle, her blue eyes fell for an instant on Brant. A happy child-like pink flush came into her cheeks, and a violet ray of recognition and mischief darted from her eyes to his. For it was Susy!

CHAPTER II.

When Brant returned to his hotel there was an augmented respect in the voice of the clerk as he handed him a note with the remark that it had been left by Senator Boompointer's coachman. He had no difficulty in recognizing Susy's peculiarly Brobdingnagian schoolgirl hand.

"Kla'uns, I call it real mean! I believe you just hoped I wouldn't know you. If you're a bit like your old self you'll come right off here—this very night! I've got a big party on—but we can talk somewhere between the acts! Haven't I growed! Tell me! And my! what a gloomy swell the young brigadier is! The carriage will come for you—so you have no excuse."

The effect of this simple note upon Brant was strangely out of proportion to its triviality. But then it was Susy's very triviality—so expressive of her characteristic irresponsibility — that had always affected him at such moments. Again, as at Robles, he felt it react against his own ethics. Was she not right in her delightful materialism? Was she not happier than if she had been consistently true to Mrs. Peyton, to the convent, to the episode of her theatrical career, to Jim Hooker—even to himself? And did he conscientiously believe that Hooker or himself had suffered for her inconsistency? No! From all that he had heard she was a suitable helpmeet to the senator, in her social attractiveness, her charming ostentations, her engaging vanity that disarmed suspicion, and her lack of responsibility even in her partisanship. Nobody even dared to hold the senator responsible for her promises, even while enjoying the fellowship of both, and it is said that the worthy man singularly profited by it. Looking upon it merely as a phase of Washington society, Brant resolved to go.

The moon was high as the carriage whirled him out of the still stifling avenues towards the soldiers' home—a sylvan suburb frequented by cabinet ministers and the president—where the good senator had "decreed" like Kubla Khan, "a stately pleasure dome" to entertain his friends and partisans. As they approached the house the trembling light, like fireflies through the leaves, the warm silence broken only by a military band playing a drowsy waltz on the veranda, and the heavy odors of jessamine in the air, thrilled Brant with a sense of shame as he thought of his old comrades in the field. But this was presently dissipated by the uniforms that met him in the hall, with the presence of some of his distinguished superiors. At the head of the stairs, with a circling background of the shining crosses and ribbons of the diplomatic corps, stood Susy—her bare arms and neck glittering with diamonds, her face radiant with childlike vivacity. A significant pressure of her little glove as he made his bow seemed to be his only welcome, but a moment later she caught his arm. "You've yet to know him," she said, in a half whisper; "he thinks a good deal of himself—just like Jim. But he makes others believe it, and that's where poor Jim slipped up." She paused before the man thus characteristically disposed of and presented Brant. It was the man he had seen before—material, capable, dogmatic. A glance from his shrewd eyes—accustomed to the weighing of men's weaknesses and ambitions, and a few hurried phrases apparently satisfied him that Brant was not at the moment important or available, and the two men a moment later drifted easily apart. Brant sauntered listlessly through the crowded rooms, half remorsefully conscious that he had taken some irrevocable step, and none the less assured by the presence of two or three reporters and correspondents who were dogging his steps or the glances of two or three pretty women whose curiosity had evidently been aroused by the singular abstraction of this handsome, distinguished, but sardonic-looking officer. But the next moment he was singularly interested.

A tall young woman had just moved into the center of the room with an indolent yet simple gracefulness that seemed familiar to him. A change in her position suddenly revealed her face. It was Miss Faulkner. Previously he had only known her in the riding habit of confederate gray which she had at first affected, or in the light morning muslin dress she had worn at Gray Oaks. It seemed to him to-night that the careless elegance of her full dress became her still more; that the pretty willfulness of her chin and shoulders was chastened and modified by the pearls round her fair throat. Suddenly their eyes met; her face paled visibly; he fancied that she almost leaned against her companion for support; then she met his glance again with a face into which the color had as suddenly rushed, but with eyes that seemed to be appealing to him, even to the point of pain and fright. Brant was not conceited: he could see that the girl's agitation was not the effect of any mere personal influence in his recognition, but of something else. He turned hastily away; when he looked around again she was gone.

Nevertheless he felt filled with a vague irritation. Did she think him such a fool as to imperil her safety by openly recognizing her without her consent? Did she think that he would dare to presume upon the service she had done him? Or, more outrageous thought!—had she heard of his disgrace, known its cause and feared that he would drag her into a disclosure to save himself? No! no—she could not think that! She had perhaps regretted what she had done in a freak of girlish chivalry; she had returned to her old feelings and partisanship; she was only startled at meeting the single witness of her folly. Well, she need not fear! He would studiously avoid her hereafter, and she should know it. And yet—yes, there was a "yet." For he could not forget—indeed, in the past three weeks it had been more often before him than he cared to think—that she was the one human being who had been capable of a great act of self-sacrifice for him—her enemy, her accuser—the man who had scarcely treated her civilly. He was ashamed to remember now that this thought had occurred to him at the bedside of his wife—at the hour of her escape—even on the fatal slope on which he had been struck down. And now this fond illusion must go with the rest—the girl who had served him so loyally was ashamed of it! A bitter smile crossed his face.

"Well, I don't wonder! Here are all the women asking me who is that good-looking Mephistopheles, with the burning eyes, who is prowling around my rooms as if searching for a victim. Why, you're smiling for all the world like poor Jim, when he used to do the Red Avenger."

Susy's voice, an illustration, recalled him to himself. "Furious I may well be," he said, with a gentler smile, although his eyes still glittered, "furious that I have to wait until the one woman I came to see, the one woman I have not seen for so long, while these puppets have been nightly dancing before her—can give me a few moments from them, to talk of the old days."

In his reaction he was quite sincere, although he felt a slight sense of remorse as he saw the quick faint color rise, as in those old days, even through the to-night's powder of her cheek. "That's like the old Kla'uns," she said, with a slight pressure of his arm, "but we will not have a chance to speak until late. When they are nearly all gone you'll take me to get a little refreshment, and we'll have a chat in the conservatory. But you must drop that awfully wicked look, and make yourself generally agreeable to those women until then."

CYCLING COMMENT.

The Catholic Club Cyclers of New York will run to this city on April 26th.

A sanction has been granted the Boonton Athletic Club for a race meet to be held May 30th.

Martin Korff, of Fairview avenue, has purchased a Gale wheel from the Plainfield Cycle Company.

George B. Cobb, president of the Jersey Wheel Club, has joined the Crescent Wheelmen, and has been appointed chairman of the racing committee.

The coasting contest has been revived, and the New York Athletic Club is the next to prepare for one for which seventy-five entries have already been received.

Entry blanks for the Irvington Milburn bicycle road race will be issued this week. W. E. Scudder, 45 William street, New York city, will have charge of the entries.

James G. Voorhees, the cycle dealer, has leased of Druggist Leggett the store in the Y. M. C. A. building formerly occupied by C. M. Thorpe. He will take possession next week.

Raymond A. McGee and Charles Dupee rode out to Holly's corners on the Cleveland racing tandem. They expect to ride together considerably this summer, and will make a fast tandem team.

Last year the Standard Oil Company purchased fifty bicycles for the use of its agents, to supersede the horse and wagon. The scheme was such a success that this year the company secured seventy-five wheels. They claim that the men do better work for the exercise.

Many cyclists after patching a puncture in a double-tube tire totally ignore the other cover. This should be well cleaned at the point where the obstacle has entered, a bit of canvas backing solutioned inside, and a little solution injected into the hole.

Ohio has followed the example of the Empire State in making it a misdemeanor to put tacks and such things in the path of the bicycle tire, says the Sporting Life. New York is not the only State that has passed a law of that kind. A similar one went through the New Jersey Legislature last winter.

The rumor that the Hudson County Wheelmen intended to run a big road race in opposition to the Irvington-Milburn Handicap on Decoration Day turns out to have no foundation whatever. Edward Smith, one of the leading members of the club, says that the subject had never been thought of, and that there will probably be 200 members of the club at the Irvington-Milburn.

Bicycle records are queer things. When a new one for the mile was alleged to have been made the other day, it was found that the road ran down hill, and that a gale was blowing in the same direction. It has been suggested that a firm of wheel manufacturers hire a man to ride off the top of a mountain. Even if machine and rider come to grief there would be a new record at any rate.—Sun.

The secret of the popularity of the wheel—says the New York Times—is not appreciated by the average layman until he finds himself astride of one and subject to its magic influence. Its whole value seems to lie in the fact that the wheel has revealed to man that his natural powers of locomotion can be multiplied. With the same amount of energy required to take one stride a rider on a seventy-gear bicycle can cover eighteen feet of ground—almost a realization of the magic power of seven league boots.

The salesrooms and sporting goods department of the Jersey Wheel Company, on North avenue are expected to open the last of next week. Peter B. Matthews will be the hustling manager in charge, and Plainfield people may expect to see an up-to-date sporting goods house run by an up-to-date business man. Every variety of sporting goods will be sold and Plainfielders will no longer have to go to New York after their athletic supplies. A feature of the salesrooms will be the accommodations for stabling wheels.

Capt. Batchelder has called the first run of the season of the Quill Club Wheelmen for next Sunday. It will be through the famous Union county riding district, and John C. Wetmore will lead the way. The route will be from Elizabeth, through Union, Springfield, and Short Hills, to Summit. After dinner at this point, the party will start with a grand coast of two miles into Springfield. From here the route will be to Westfield, Cranford and Roselle, and back to Elizabeth. Sixteen miles will be the distance of the afternoon run.

Cycling promises to play a prominent part in the athletic department of the Y. M. C. A. of this city and surrounding towns this summer. A movement is now on foot that will raise the interest in that branch of athletics and tend to unite the interests of the different associations in this part of New Jersey. The plan is to organize a Y. M. C. A. cycling league. The primary object of the proposed league is to arrange grand runs, to be participated in by all the clubs belonging to the league. The clubs will meet at some central point and then ride together to the headquarters of one of the clubs and there spend the evening or afternoon as the case may be. The benefits of such an arrangement are very apparent. The large increse in the number of riders, will, of course, make the run more pleasant and then, instead of entertaining a number of clubs, all on different days, much better entertainment at a less cost can be provided when the visitors only come once. Last year, the cycling division of the local Y. M. C. A. had rather a hard time of it, for all their calls were returned and they had to entertain a number of times while their income was next to nothing. In case of the formation of the league, the Y.M.C.A. itself, will come forward to assist the enterprise, financially and otherwise.

The question of organizing such a league was brought before the Y. M. C. A. secretary's conference, recently held at Morristown, and received their hearty endorsement. It is expected that the league will be composed of the cycling divisions of the Y.M.C.A.'s of Plainfield, Westfield, Rahway, Summit, Morristown, Orange, Newark and New Brunswick. There are several other associations that may decide to join later. These eight associations, all except Westfield, own buildings of their own and will be able to entertain the rest. Westfield merely rents her building, but will be able to provide for her visitors also. A meeting of the cycling division of the local Y. M. C. A. will be called for next week to elect delegates to a meeting at which the association will be formed.

BASKET BALL.

The postponed game of basket ball between the business men and the Y. M. C. A. regular team will take place on Tuesday, April 14th, at 8:15 p. m. The first game between these teams was closely contested and the coming game will doubtless be likewise.

VARIOUS SPORTS.

The athletic tournament of the Amateur Athletic Union will be held on July 4th at the grounds of the New Jersey Athletic Club.

Is when nearly everyone feels the need of some blood purifying, strength invigorating and health producing medicine. The real merit of Hood's Sarsaparilla is the reason of its widespread popularity. Its unequalled success is its best recommendation. The whole system is susceptible to the most good from a medicine like Hood's Sarsaparilla taken at this time, and we would lay special stress upon the time and remedy, for history has it recorded that delays are dangerous. The remarkable success achieved by Hood's Sarsaparilla and the many words of praise it has received, make it worthy of your confidence. We ask you to give this medicine a fair trial.

A Sermon Preached by Rev. J. W. Richardson Last Evening.

A very interesting sermon was preached by Rev. J. W. Richardson in the Park Avenue Baptist church last night from John 9:21: "He is of age ask him: he shall speak for himself." Mr. Richardson said in part:

"When the Jews came to the young man's parents to criticise, in order to preserve their social standing and membership in the synagogue, they threw all responsibility on their son. But the young man faced Christ's accusers: and despite father, mother, friends and social standing, he defended his Helper. He exhibited the spirit of a true manhood, and the independence of his majority. Manly independence! have you arrived at this true majority? It is not the twenty-first birthday that makes the youth a man. He only arrives at a true majority, who has settled principles. The most pitable sight on earth is a dough-man: he who is a Republican or Democrat because his father was; he who subscribes to some creed because his friends attend that church; he who adopts a certain mode of action because society indorses it. The dough-man goes through life without the vertebræ of principle. We need men who will weigh all questions in the scales of justice: form calm, righteous conclusions: and then engage in unflinching action, which knows no compromise. There is all the difference in the world between a life of honest usefulness and a lame life of worthless fluctuation. A young man of sterling principle cannot pass unnoticed through this world. Noble principles make the young man a unit: and a unit counts everywhere and every time. There are young men who are willing to adopt any sentiment or pursue any course, however false or belittling, provided that it be popular. In these days it is a refreshing sight to see a young man true to his manhood. Better a garret on the back street and the consciousness of clean hands. Better a limited acquaintance and a chaste life. Better no parties, no theatres, no going out evenings: than be king of a nation, or a social leader, and suffer the contempt of your own conscience."

SOMERSET COUNTY IGNORED.

The Republicans Angry Because They Are Refused a Delegate.

The Republicans of Somerset county are indignant over their treatment in the New Brunswick convention last week, when their delegates met with those of Monmouth and Middlesex to choose district delegates to the National Convention, says The World.

Somerset expected to name one of the delegates, and their right to do so had been conceded. L. A. Thompson, Clerk in Chancery, was their choice. When they reached New Brunswick they found that Middlesex and Monmouth each had a candidate and, as has been their custom ever since the Third District has had its present autonomy, they were prepared to ignore Somerset entirely. A sop was thrown to Somerset in the nomination of Assemblyman Charles A. Reed and Charles Place as alternates, but they refused to serve.

The Republican leaders are very angry at their treatment and threaten that they will attend no more conventions, nor will they assist in any Congressional election until they are accorded their rights. Congressman Howell will seek a re-election next fall, and his chances of success are endangered if their threat should be carried out, as Somerset gave him a handsome majority when he ran two years ago.

Somerset has only eighteen delegates to Monmouth's forty-one and Middlesex's forty-nine, hence can do nothing when the others combine.

Consistorial Sociable.

The consistory of Trinity Reformed church, which is composed of the pastor and six elders and six deacons, are arranging for a unique sociable to be held on Friday evening of this week, at which they will have entire charge and hope to meet every member of the church and congregation. An enjoyable evening is anticipated.

During the winter of 1893, F. M. Martin, of Long Reach, West Va., contracted a severe cold which left him with a cough. In speaking of how he cured it he says: "I used several kinds of cough syrup but found no relief until I bought a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, which relieved me almost instantly, and in a short time brought about a complete cure." When troubled with a cough or cold use this remedy and you will not find it necessary to try several kinds before you get relief. It has been in the market for over twenty years and constantly grown in favor and popularity. For sale at 25 and 50 cents per bottle at Armstrong's pharmacy, Park and North avenues.

THE DOCTORS AROUSED.

PROBABILITY OF ANOTHER HOSPITAL BEING ESTABLISHED.

Dissatisfaction Over Some of the Rules of the Muhlenberg Hospital Has Resulted in a Movement for a New One.

The discussion over the apparent injustice of the Muhlenberg Hospital rules permitting only allopathic physicians to practice within the walls of that institution are taking form, and there is every indication that Plainfield will soon have another hospital in which the homœopathic physician will minister unto the sick.

Ever since the Muhlenberg Hospital has been instituted there has been more or less comment and dissatisfaction expressed over this prohibitive rule. Patients of homœopathic belief and support were admitted and their fees accepted, but in no case were they permitted to have their family physician attend them. During the course of a year there are more or less important surgical operations and examinations made on patients at the hospital, and at these only allopathic physicians could be present. As they are considered of great value to the medical science and practice of a physician, the homœopathists felt that they were again put at a disadvantage with the branch of the profession with whom their methods of practice differ.

The differences of the physicians have found favor with a large number of their clients, and assurances have been given by many that they will assist them all that is possible in a financial and influential way in the plan to build and support an institution for their practice.

There is now some talk, however, that the Muhlenberg Hospital officials will make concessions to the homœopathists, rather than have another hospital started, which would naturally withdraw considerable support from them. A Press reporter was assured this morning by a prominent homœopathic practitioner that no concessions would be accepted at this late day by his branch of the profession, for it was only a matter of time when they would have an institution of their own.

A meeting of those interested in the new hospital will be held on Friday of this week at the home of E. B. Clark on Crescent avenue, who is the present President of the Board of Governors of the Muhlenberg Hospital, but who is said to be in sympathy with the new movement. At this time it is expected that some definite plans for the future will be made.

While no location for the new hospital has yet been suggested, it is thought probable that it will be built in the eastern end of the city.

The Old Barn Door.

The pictu re entitled "The Old Barn Door," in the Camera Club collection, belonging to Mayor Gilbert, calls for more than passing notice. It is, indeed, a well-executed piece of still life. It was painted by James E. Simpson, Jr., of Brooklyn, formerly of North Plainfield, and not by John Ward Stimson, as stated in The News. The artist's name is correctly given in the catalogue.

A Talented Speaker.

The attention of the Masonic fraternity is called to the lecture to be given by Rev. C. H. W. Stocking, D. D., at Masonic Hall, Thursday evening, April 16th. As it is not intended for the brethren only, but also for their wives and sweethearts, it is to be hoped that a large audience will be present to greet this distinguished orator.

Arrested the 'Possum.

While Night Watchman Rockafellow was passing the weary long hours away on Front street Saturday night he noticed something very lively walking up the street. He ran after it and succeeded in making a capture. It proved to be an opossum. George says that if he knew how to prepare the animal he would have a feast.

WOMAN TO THE FORE.

She is Getting Legal Offices and Can Now Become a Master in Chancery.

The New Jersey woman has come in for more or less misrepresentation since the law makers have yielded to public opinion and have recognized her right to make a living.

The statement has been made that New Jersey possesses the only woman commissioner of deeds in this country, in the person of Miss Marion Colgate, of Newark. This is an error. There are now eleven commissioners of deeds in New Jersey, which is the only eastern state that has them. There are are forty-six notaries public but only one lawyer. Miss Mary V. Steele, of Somerville, was the first woman to be elected a commissioner of deeds. She is the daughter of the late ex-Congressman William G. Steele.

Women commissioners are rare in the Eastern states, but not in the west. Those elected at the last joint meeting were: Mary L. Holdrum, Eastwood, Bergen County; Emily O'Connor, Newark; Frances B. Stewart, Newark; Marion Colgate, Newark; Caroline L. Cue, Jersey City, Mary R. Gray, Raritan; Hunterdon County; Bella M. Farnham, Raritan, Middlesex County; Mary V. Steele, Somerville, Somerset County; Alice M. Kyte, Fanwood, Union County; Alice M. Thompson, Plainfield; Mary F. Phillbrook, Hudson.

Miss Mary Phillbrook, the first woman lawyer of the State, won another victory at this session of the Legislature, by securing the passage of a bill to allow women to become Masters in Chancery. The bill which she had passed has now become a law, and she is the first candidate for appointment.

It is expected that next year Miss Beatrice Maybaum, of No. 7 Sidney place, Newark, will apply for examination, preparatory to an entrance to the New Jersey bar.

Women are coming to the front in other lines. Miss Elizabeth Compton is the first woman inventor in the State, and Chief Consul Robert Gentle, of the New Jersey Division, L. A. W., has recognized the bloomer bicycle girl and has appointed Miss Clara Bell Dunning, of Paterson, and Miss Ida Greely Ale, of Trenton, local consuls.

THE BILL KILLED.

The Measure Providing for the Use of the Bible in the Constitution is Dead.

The regular monthly meeting of the American Sabbath Tract Society was held yesterday. There was a large attendance. Charles Potter presided. The reports of committees on special work were made and the principal business transacted was to provide for the more efficient circulation of their literature. Rev. A. H. Lewis, D. D., made a very interesting report regarding his recent mission to Washington in behalf of religious liberty. Dr. Lewis stated that the bills before the committee in Congress, in reference to inculcating portions of the Bible into the Constitution, and the law for the enforcement of Sunday observance, had been killed for the present session at least, and that the sentiment of the members of the committee that were considering the bill was that the provision in the Constitution giving religious liberty, would not permit religious legislation.

Prominent Volunteers Coming.

At Reform Hall, Thursday evening, Major Pattie Watkins, assisted by Captain Grady, Captain Lindsay, the cornetist, and Lieutenant Jennie Hughes, all from national headquarters, will address the local post and their friends. A street parade, in which for the first time will be displayed the new flag of the American Volunteers, will precede the meeting. Meetings will be held every evening during the week at 8 o'clock.

A Startling Aerial Act.

One of the new and startling aerial acts with the Barnum & Bailey Show this year has been made possible by modern science. It is one showing the flight of a young lady through the air. Shot from a big Roman crossbow this human arrow pierces a target and is caught in her flight by the hands of her sister, the latter hanging head downward from a trapeze fifty feet high. It is a novel, sensational, and thrilling act.

PLAINFIELD-ELIZABETH BY TROLLEY

Silas D. Drake Says That the Proposed Road is an Assured Thing.

At a meeting of the Elizabeth Board of Trade Friday evening Silas D. Drake, of the committee on the trolley line to Plainfield, reported that communication had been had with C. W. Riker, of Newark, head of the syndicate, who said they were prepared to build the road on Westfield avenue, Elizabeth, and would lay the tracks on the sides, so as not to interfere with the telford pavement. Everything was in readiness now to apply to the city and township authorities for the franchise. The route proposed is to reach the depot in Elizabeth by way of Morris avenue. In is then proposed to run out to Westfield avenue through Sayre street.

Mr. Drake said there would be no objection to Sayre street; in fact, the property owners were ready to sign the petition. The street is unpaved at present, and the trolley company would pave it.

President Egenolf said for one he would object to the county roads being used for trolley roads.

Mr. Drake said that Westfield avenue is preferred, but Mr. Riker said if they could not get a franchise the company would build its line on the opposite side of the Central Railroad tracks. It would be necessary to run at least 300 feet on Westfield avenue. There is a man in that vicinity so interested he has offered to allow the company to lay its tracks through his back yard. Mr. Drake said a great stumbling block is found on Morris avenue. If the persons holding that franchise would consent or sell out they would be well paid. The syndicate was ready to buy the green line and make it a first-class trolley road.

REV. HERRING SUPPORTS DR. MORGAN

And Criticises Dr. Lee for Making Public the Plagiarism.

The First Presbyterian church contained a large audience last evening who were present to hear the pastor, Rev. C. E. Herring, preach from the subject "Ministers and Plagiarism." It was a sermonette and preceded the regular sermon from the subject "Foothold." The sermonette was a consideration of the recent action of Dr. Morgan in his use of a sermon on Easter Sunday which was preached by Dr. Putnam some years ago and afterwards published in book form.

Mr. Herring took the stand that the action of Rev. Mr. Lee, of Newark, in exposing the above fact was very unchristian. The fact that Dr. Morgan had been exceedingly busy gave him the perfect right to use the sermon in question. Mr. Herring's remarks were supported by texts of Scripture setting forth clearly the right in question.

He said there were times when the body and mind were so tired that it was simply impossible to collect original thoughts and prepare them for a sermon, and this was no doubt so in the case of Dr. Morgan. He thought that Mr. Lee had acted unwisely and had not shown a Christian spirit in attacking Dr. Morgan. The pastor then followed with his regular discou rse on "Foothood," which was powerful and very instructive.

The Riders and Bicycles Mixed Up.

Charles Butts and Fred J. Vieweg, both of Scott's Printing Machine Works, met with an accident Saturday afternoon while out riding on their wheels. They were riding moderately fast along the county road, when the front tire on Mr. Vieweg's front wheel suddenly came off. His wheel was thrown from him and it struck Mr. Butts' wheel, throwing him over the former's wheel. His face was severely scratched and his nose badly scraped. Mr. Vieweg escaped with slight injury, though both wheels were somewhat twisted. Both of the men walked home.

Favorably Impressed.

The committee from the State Poultry Association, which was to have met Charles Hand in this city on Saturday, for some reason did not put in an appearance. Mr. Haynes, a member of the executive committee, was present, however, and in company with Mr. Wiseman, of the Cycle Academy, visited the Academy. Mr. Haynes was favorably impressed with the place and thought it would be an excellent location and especially adapted for the exhibit. He will probably report to the committee and a meeting will be held later to decide definitely in the matter.

Justice Newcorn's Court.

The contract case of Moore against Joseph and the landlord and tenant case of Day against Keading are returnable in Justice Newcorn's court April 20th. The following contract cases are returnable April 21st: Sherman against Thompson; Sherman against Witteman; Sherman against Whitmore; Long against Hall; Long against Bensen.

PLAINFIELD'S FINEST.

THE POLICEMEN ARE NOW UP IN MILITARY DRILL AND TACTICS.

For Several Weeks They Have Been Under the Tutelage of Councilman Barrows—Will Make a Fine Showing on Parade.

The last of the drills of the police force at the Columbia Cycle Academy was held Saturday afternoon before an audience that included many of the Councilmen and other city officials and prominent men. The verdict of all was that the police had been greatly improved in appearance, at least, by a little taste of military tactics.

The officers who passed through the different manœuvres were under the command of Sergeant Kiely and consisted of thirteen men, including the sergeant, two roundsmen and ten patrolmen. The men marched into the Academy where Councilman E. T. Barrows, chairman of the police committee, took command. They presented a very neat appearance in their blue uniforms, white gloves and helmets. The different evolutions were passed through very creditably, although the slippery floor made the turns rather difficult. They kept a very good line, however, and showed that considerable work had been done to get them in such good form in a short time. The audience appreciated that fact and applauded the movements of the platoon.

Councilman Barrows was seen by a Press reporter during one of the brief rests. The object of the drill was, he said, to give the men better position and prepare them to make a creditable showing at the head of a parade. He was much pleased with the present appearance of the force and thought it a great improvement over their old manner.

The men were put through a drill with their short, dress clubs and were then inspected by a committee of the audience. They then retired and, discarding their short clubs and removing their white gloves, took their heavy night sticks and lined up as for duty. Roundsman Mattox took command while Roundsman Frederickson brought up the rear of the celumn, wearing his bicycle leggings and leading his wheel. Roundsman Mattox then inspected the men and their keys and they were then marched away for duty while the audience gave a farewell round of applause.

HARBINGERS OF SPRING.

The Martins Came This Morning and Took Possession of Their Home.

When the merry chipper of the martins is heard, the Plainfield man who believes in orthonological sagacity, discards his heavy clothes, takes down the storm doors, smiles in defiance at the coal merchant, looks pleadingly at the ice man, and concludes that summer is here. It will be interesting intelligence to most Plainfielders to announce that the martins have arrived, and are now snugly quartered in the historical bird house of Coriell's, on West Front street. The feathered harbingers of sunshine came this morning, and after a deal of bird dialect, took possession of the house which they have occupied annually for a great many years, and which the "oldest resident" points out to the visitor as one of the distinguished marks worthy of his observations.

The martins evacuate their summer abode when the wintry blasts proclaim that snow, sleet and ice is approaching, and hie themselves to some southern clime where they remain until the following spring. After their departure the sparrows take possession of the bird house, and by the time that the martins get ready to return the sparrows imagine that the place belongs to them, and it is only after a desperately fought battle that the carniverous English subjects are ejected and the martins domiciled within by the right of eminent domain. The battle was fought over again this morning, and during its progress many a conservative business man, giddy clerk and mischievious errand boy watched the routing of the sparrows.

Woman's Presbyterial Society.

The Woman's Presbyterial Society for Foreign Missions in the Presbytery of Elizabeth, will hold its twenty-fifth annual meeting at Clinton, in the Presbyterian church, tomorrow. The session will open at 10 a. m. The reports of the secretaries will be presented, followed by a brief review of the past twenty-five years, and other interesting exercises. In the afternoon an address may be expected from Rev. B. C. Henry, of China, and from Mrs. Danielson, of Philadelphia. A delegation from this city will attend.

The tie for first place in the bowling tournament of the Associated Cycling Clubs of New Jersey has been won by the Atlanta Wheelmen.

TENEMENTS AND LODGING HOUSES.

A Well Informed Man to Speak on This Subject Tomorrow Night.

Arthur W. Milbury, secretary of the Industrial Christian Alliance of New York city, will lecture in the chapel of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church Tuesday evening of this week at 8 o'clock. His subject will be: "Tenements and Lodging Houses at Home and Abroad—From the Slum Rookery to the Latest Examples of Model Tenements and Model Lodging Houses."

The lecture will be profusely illustrated by the best stereopticon and pictures obtainable. Mr. Milbury has, without doubt, the largest collection of views of American and European tenements and lodging houses in existence. Mr. Milbury has been making a close study of the tenement and lodging house question for several years, and is secretary of the committee on model apartment houses of New York city, which expects within a few weeks to begin building on a very large scale improved dwellings of the highest class. Doubtless there is nothing which more closely touches the material comfort of the people than their housing. Europe, especially Great Britain, has done much in the way of providing sanitary and comfortable dwellings for the poorer classes. This work has hardly begun as yet in America, but it is believed that in our largest cities we are on the verge of a grand movement in this direction.

D. O. Mills, of New York city, is about to begin the erection of the two finest model lodging houses for men in the world. Within the next year he will have spent over $1,000,000, and this only as a beginning of the enterprise. Mr. Milbury's pictures include the plans of Mr. Mills' splendid project.

Mr. Milbury has lectured this winter in many of the finest houses and before the most cultured societies in the city of New York. Those who have heard the lecture describe it as fascinating both in matter and delivery. Admission to the lecture is free, and it is hoped that a great number will avail themselves of this opportunity to become acquainted with practical, aggressive, modern Christian work—the work of preaching a practical gospel to the poor.

OBSERVANCE OF THE SABBATH.

An Interesting and Helpful Sermon in Trinity Reformed Church.

Yesterday was the last day of the Week of Prayer set apart for prayers for the better observance of the Sabbath, and the evening service in Trinity Reformed church was on that line.

On the pulpit platform was the pastor and Messrs. W. H. Crawford, Fred E. Smith and E. E. Anthony. Mr. Crawford, president of the Endeavor Society, presided and read the Scripture lecture and the Psalter, W. F. Oliver offering prayer.

Mr. Smith was the first speaker and gave versions of the "law" for keeping the Sabbath holy, and proved his case by frequent references to the Bible.

Mr. Anthony spoke interestingly and with much force of the "promises" to those who keep the Sabbath day holy. He also pointed out a few of the "enemies" of the Sabbath. His address was particularly interesting and filled with advice that means much for the better observance of the holy Sabbath if practiced by his hearers.

Mr. Anthony was followed by the pastor who spoke earnestly and convincingly of the influence woman had exerted and could exert over man for keeping one day in seven holy. The remarks of the different speakers was interspersed with hearty congregational singing.

At the close of the meeting Robert Clark offered prayer and the pastor dismissed all with the benediction.

Mrs. Perry to Lead.

Mrs. Frederick Perry, of Willow avenue, will address the Plainfield Branch of the Christian Alliance tomorrow evening at 7:45 o'clock at the W. C. T. U. rooms on Watchung avenue. Those who have attended Mrs. Perry's Bible readings have been deeply impressed by her consecrated earnestness, as well as her pleasant, agreable manner of teaching the deep Spiritual truths.

It will be an agreeable surprise to persons subject to attacks of bilious colic to learn that prompt relief may be had by taking Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. In many instances the attack may be prevented by taking this remedy as soon as the first symptoms of the disease appear. 25 and 50c bottles for sale at Armstrong's pharmacy, Park and North avenues.

PAPAL SUCCESSION

Crowned Heads To Discuss the Delicate Question To-day.

HUMBERT AND WILLIAM WILL MEET

Grave Political Matters Also To Be Discussed at Vienna To-morrow—Spain's Danger Pointed Out by German Press.

Berlin, April 13.—The principal and most delicate point of discussion betweenr the kaiser and King Humbert at Venice this afternoon will be the question of the papal succession, but they will also discuss the future plans of the dreibund. The newspapers here miss the fact that Chancellor Prince Hohenlohe prior to his starting on his recent leave of absence sent upon a secret mission to the vatican Dr. Kraus, the Catholic professor of the university, with special instructions relating to the future conclave of the college of cardinals for the selection of a pope. The mission and the instructions given to Dr. Kraus were assented to by Cardinal Kopp, archbishop of Breslau. Dr Kraus was also charged to develop in his visit to the vatican the views expressed by the emperor in the course of the two interviews between the kaiser and Cardinal San Felice on the occasion of his majesty's recent visit to Naples. Dr. Kraus has seen several high ecclesiastics and important personages since his arrival in Rome, but the result of his mission, which is merely tentative and inquisitive, is known only to the governing heads. Although the pope is still hale and shows no diminuition of his ability to conduct the affairs of his office, it is not premature, in view of the advanced age of the pontiff, to form a concert of action with the aim of obtaining the election of a successor to his holiness who will be favorable to the interests of the dreibund and less inclined to democracy, as well as less friendly to France than Leo XIII.

Grave Political Matters.

After the conference between the monarchs, ministers and ambassadors there will be a gala dinner at the royal palace, at which Emperor William, King Humbert, the members of the ministry, Baron von Bulow, German ambassador to Italy; Count von Eulenburg, grand marshal of the Prussian court; Count Ianza di Busca, Italian ambassador to Germany; Gens. Engelbrecht and Grimli of the German army; Gen. Penzio Vaglio, minister of the Italian royal household; Admiral Brochetti of the Italian navy; Prince Strongeli and a number of senators and members of the chamber of deputies will be present. Bands of music will play in the gardens of the palace and in the Piazza St. Marks. In the evening there will be night fetes on the grand canal when a great cortege of illuminated gondolas will pass through the canal and choral music will be discoursed from various points as well as upon the moving boats. Everything connected with the affair is designed to give the imperial party a complete exhibition of festive Venice. Prince Hohenlohe will meet the emperor in Vienna to-morrow, prior to the court dinner which will be given in honor of the kaiser on that day. The Austrian ambassador here, M. de Szogyeny-Marich, will go to Vienna to take part in the conferences which will be held during the emperor's two days stay at the Austrain capital. The presence of M. de Szogyeny-Marich in Vienna upon this occasion is regarded as further proof that grave political matters are engaging the attention of the heads of the powers comprising the dreibund.

Fantastic Deductions.

There is every reason to believe that the cause assigned for Prince Hohenlohe's proposed visit to Paris shortly—that he desired to see and condole with his wife's stepmother upon the death of her grandson, Prince Chigi, who was killed by the Abyssinians at the battle of Adowa—is absolutely true, but this has not served the French newspapers as a sufficient reason for the presence of the German chancellor in the capital of France. The French newspapers are filled with articles drawing fantastic deductions as to his motives for visiting Paris. These journals declare that they have not seen a single prominent French politician who did not visit the German embassy, when he had to do so, in the strictest incognito, yet they assert that Prince Hohenlohe's visit to Paris is in order to cultivate the friendliest relations between Germany and France. Resenting this view of the matter, the Berlin Post says that Germany has no need to ask anything of France, being abundantly able to give and not desiring to receive support. The National Zeitung says that the position of Germany is so clear that it ought not to lend color even to French fantasies.

Full of Danger to Spain.

In regard to the action of the United States congress concerning Cuba, the inspired Post expresses hope that the Spanish cabinet, in the interest of maintaining good relations with the government at Washington, will prevent any demonstration against the United States and keep the public calm. Anti-American disturbance, the Post says, might enlarge the Cuban situation into a general internal crisis full of danger to Spain.

Public Feeling Against Dueling.

The death of Baron von Schrader, master of ceremonies of the Prussian court, from the wound he received in his duel with Lieberech von Kotze, ex-court chamberlain, has greatly intensified the public feeling against deuling. The conservative newspapers, the Reichsbote and the National Zeitung, the Catholic Volkszeitung and other journals demand that the utmost severity of the law be enforced and that no class shall be privileged.

GREATER NEW YORK BILL.

It May Be Passed Over the Vetoes of the Mayors.

Albany, April 13.—But three weeks remain of the present session of the legislature. Senator Mullin said today that the legislature would adjourn on April 25 were it not for the Albany police bill. He thought that this bill would not be returned from Mayor Thacher a second time so that it could be passed over his veto before April 29. This would mean a final adjournment of the legislature on April 30. There are dozens of important bills in the various stages of legislative procedure yet awaiting action by both houses, but over-towering all the others is the bill making the Greater New York. The messages of the mayors of New York, Brooklyn and Long Island City are securely kept in the safe of Clerk Kenyon of the senate and will not be taken from their sealed envelopes until the senate meets this evening, when the messages will be laid before that body for action. The message of Mayor Wurster of Brooklyn is against consolidation, that of Mayor Gleason of Long Island City for consolidation, and, although the contents of Mayor Strong's message are problematical, it is the general impression that he has vetoed the bill. The republican leaders representing the state organization are quite emphatic in declarations that the Greater New York bill will be passed over the vetoes of the mayors, without amendment.

Group 6, Gettysbury college, Western Pennsylvania university, St. John's college and Ursinus college.

BANQUET AT ATHENS.

The Foreign Athletes Thanked by the King for Their Attendance.

Athens, April 13.—A grand banquet was given at the palace yesterday, at which 260 guests were present, including the organizers of the Olympic games and the contestants. Many toasts were given. The king made a speech in French, in which he made the following reference to the foreign contestants, which elicited loud and prolonged applause: "Let me express the pleasure that all feel in seeing you come here to take part in the Olympian games. Your reception shows how the Greek people rejoiced to receive you. I seize this occasion to extend my warmest congratulations to the victors. Soon you will return to your homes. I will not say adieu to you, but au revoir. Keep a good souvenir of us and do not forget the enthusiastic welcome we have given you." The king then proceeded to pay a special compliment to Louis, the Greek, who won the long-distance race from Marathon to Athens. The queen was indisposed and, therefore, unable to be present at the banquet, but she sent her good wishes to the contestants.

MISSIONARIES IN TURKEY.

Only Those Who Are Not Law-Abiding Will Be Expelled.

Washington, April 13.—The Turkish legation has received from the sublime porte the following telegram: "It has been falsely stated that the missionaries would be expelled. The imperial government has not taken and does not intend to take any general measures of expulsion of missionaries and Catholic priests. Those among them who attend peacefully to their business are not and will not be disturbed. But, surely, it cannot be the same for those who by their attitude try to disturb the order and tranquility of the country and place themselves in open hostility towards the laws and regulations in force in the empire. The imperial government, watchful of the maintenance of public security, has the duty to send them away from its territory, and in so doing, it avails itself of a right which nobody in all justice could contest."

German Sporting Circles Disappointeed.

Berlin, April 13.—German sporting circles are greatly disappointed at the poor showing made by the German athletes who took part in the Olympic games at Athens last week. It was expected that they would do much better, as they were all picked men. The success of the American athletes at home and abroad has confirmed the German opinion that they are the foremost sportsmen of the world.

Steamer City of Dallas Foundered.

Colon, April 13.—The steamer City of Dallas, before reported with her machinery seriously deranged, foundered Friday eighty miles from this city. A boat with the captain and a portion of the crew arrived here last night. Assistance is being sent to the passengers, who arrived at Concepcion river.

WEEK IN CONGRESS

Dupont Case Under Consideration in the Senate To-day.

CHANDLER AND GRAY THE ORATORS

A Spirited Debate Looked for Wednesday Over Peffer's Bond Investigation Resolution—Programme in the House.

Washington, April 13.—As soon as the Indian bill is disposed of in the senate Mr. Hale will call up the naval bill, which was reported last Wednesday. Incidentally there will be a number of questions called up during the morning hour. To-day Mr. Chandler, according to notice, will speak on the Dupont case and will probably be followed by Mr. Gray of Delaware. Mr. Squire has given notice that to-morrow he will address the senate on the comprehensive bill for the erection of fortifications, reported by his committee some weeks ago. A spirited debate is expected on Wednesday, Mr. Peffer having secured unanimous consent to call up on that day his bond sale investigation resolution. House bill to reduce the cases in which the death penalty may be inflicted has been made the special order for Wednesday. Mr. Lodge has given notice that on Thursday he will call up the immigration bill providing for an illiteracy test. Meanwhile the joint resolution of Mr. Cannon directing the secretary of the interior to open to public entry the Uncompaghre reservation holds its place on the calendar as the unfinished business.

House of Representatives.

Under the rules of the house to-day is District day, that is, the day set aside for consideration of matters presented by the committee on affairs of the District of Columbia, but that it will be so devoted is uncertain. Two other matters are pressing for consideration now—the fortifications appropriation bill and the contested election case of Goodwin vs. Cobb from the Fifth district of Alabama, in which the committee on elections No. 1 recommend the seating of the contestant, Goodwin. Judge Daniels, chairman of the committee, gave notice ten days ago that he should ask the house to dispose of the case to-day, but it is understood that he will not antagonize Chairman Babcock of the district committee, when the latter moves to take up district business. But Mr. Cannon, chairman of the committee on appropriations, may not be so leniently disposed, and the house may have to determine the order of business for itself. The probabilities seem now to favor the fortications bill as the first item, and at the conclusion of consideration the rest of the day to be given to the district committee. Mr. Cannon was of the opinion Saturday that he could get the bill out of the way in an hour and a half. He may find it different at the beginning of the week. However they are arranged those two matters will hold the boards against all other business until disposed of, unless a conference report on appropriation bills shall be presented. The preliminary report upon the legislative, executive and judicial appropriation bill has been agreed upon and will be presented to-day or to-morrow or next day. It relates only to those items about which there was practically no disagreement among the conferees, and a further conference will be ordered on the matters of more serious difference. As opportunity presents itself the general pension bills reported by the committee on invalid pensions and the bankruptcy bill will be considered, but no time can be fixed at which they will be taken up.

HARRY WRIGHT DAY.

It Will Be Celebrated in the Baseball Cities of the Country.

New York, April 13.—To-day is Harry Wright day and it will be celebrated in all the large baseball cities of the country. A game that is attracting a good deal of attention is the one that is scheduled to be played at Rockford, Ill., the home of the old Forest Cities, and many of the old-time players have promised Manager Nicol that they will take part in it. A. G. Spalding, who made his first appearance on the Forest City nine, has agreed to pitch. Several other old-timers who were in the harness in the '60's will be there also, among them Al Pratt of Pittsburg, George Wright of the old Boston Athletics and Ross Barnes.

ELECTIONS IN SPAIN.

Animated Contests Connected with Disorders in Some Localities.

Madrid, April 13.—Elections for members of the cortes were held yesterday and were very animated. It is believed that in Madrid five conservatives and two liberals have been returned. It is rumored that the ministry's electoral agents have been guilty of great abuses. Iglesias, the leader of the Spanish socialists, has been victorious in Bilboa, defeating a wealthy shipbuilder named Rivas, who, it is reported, paid ten dollars per vote. There are disturbances in Igualada, province of Barcelona, and incendiaries applied the torch to a factory belonging to the liberal candidate.

Tailors' Strike Off.

Danbury, Conn., April 13.—Twenty members of the journeymen tailors' union, who went on a strike last Monday, have effected a compromise with the tailors, and the strike has been declared off.

Your Spring clothing

Rather early to speak of it, but if it needs cleaning or dyeing, it isn't too early to have us do that work for you. This is our dull season—our employes are here ready for work. We'd like to have your goods now. We can give them better attention than in the rush of the spring season. Then we'll have to have more time or rush them at the expense of good work. Now we can take our time, do the work better than if hurried and you'll have the clothing all ready for warm weather.

Look in the closet or trunk and find your spring wear that needs cleaning and dyeing and bring it to us now, or better still, our wagon will call for it if you will send us word.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the eustachian tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube be restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give one hundred dollars for any case of deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

ENGINEERS GATHER

Interesting Meeting of Locomotive Brotherhood Men.

CHIEF ARTHUR ADDRESSES THEM

Recalls the Growth of the Organization and Points Out the Good It Has Done—Other Prominent Railroad Men Present.

Port Jervis, N. Y., April 13.—One thousand engineers from the several divisions of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers on the Erie, Jersey Central, West Shore, Delaware, Lackawanna & Western, Erie & Wyoming Valley and Fall Brook railroads and all the elevated railroads of New York city held a grand union meeting in the Opera house here yesterday afternoon. Three special trains, one from Scranton, one from Hornellsville and one from Jersey City, supplied by the Erie company, carried the delegates to and from this place. The special train from Jersey City was pulled by the "F. B. Thomas" locomotive, which was built by the Association of Erie Engineers for exhibition at the Chicago World's Fair, and which was recently purchased by the Erie road for $9,000. Among the prominent railroad officials present were Superintendent of Motive Power Mitchell of the Erie; George West, superintendent of motive power of the Ontario & Western; and Superintendent Maguire of the eastern division of the Erie. Others present were Shandy Maguire, poet engineer, of Oswego, N. Y., and "Uncle Ben" Hafner of Port Jervis, N. Y., the oldest locomotive engineer in the United States; also the clergy of the village, Mayor Cardy and the board of village trustees. The speakers were Judge N. B. Fullerton of Port Jervis; Grand Chief Engineer P. M. Arthur of Cleveland; Rev. M. Halley, rector of St. Mary's Roman Catholic church of Port Jervis and Sandy Maguire.

Chief Arthur's Remarks.

Chief Arthur spoke, in part, as follows: "Let me tell you of some of the things accomplished by the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers. We have given railroad companies a more reliable and trustworthy class of engineers than they ever had before. We have code rules as to sobriety, etc., which our men are compelled to live up to or be discharged. In all its history of thirty-three years, our order never countenanced a dishonorable or unlawful act by its members. Last year 372 men were discharged from our order for intoxication. I hold that no man has a right to step on a locomotive with human lives in keeping while under the influence of liquor, and no punishment is too severe for one who does so. We are trying to rid the railroad service of unreliable men. In 1853 I was employed as an engineer on a neighboring railroad at $50 a month, firemen got $30 and conductors $40. We drew up a petition to the managers, couched in respectful language, for more pay. What do you think they did? They tore it up and ordered us all discharged. Ten years later the Brotherhood of Railroad Engineers forwarded another petion which was drawn up by the same men and was addressed to the same managers. Mark the result. The petition was granted, and the engineer's pay was raised to $3.50 a day and the firemen's in proportion.

Strikes Sometimes Necessary.

"The Brotherhood of Lomotive Engineers has protected its members from unfair and arbitrary dismissals; has saved many a man from a drunkard's fate to be a comfort to his family and an honor to the community. It has paid $6,000,000 on death benefits and over half a million dollars to needy members. There is much mistaken prejudice against labor organizations. If the commercial, monied and professional classes organize to promote and conserve their interests why should not the workingman? But you say our order has had strikes. I admit it, and under the same circumstances we would strike again. I say, without fear of contradiction, that had the railroad managers met us in the same spirit of fairness that we met them there would have been no strikes. When corporations are arbitrary, self-willed and stubborn, instead of bing fair, then the only hope of labor is in coercive measures within the bounds of the law, and if they can supply our places we must retire." Chief Arthur also addressed a large union meeting at the Methodist church last evening.

FATAL NEWSPAPER WAR.

A Kentucky Editor Shot Down on the Street by a Brother Editor.

Wellington, Ky., April 13.—Editor Charles Branscomb of the South Haven New Era was killed yesterday in a shooting scrape between A. A. Richards, editor of the Wellington Daily Mail, and Robert Simmons, editor of the Caldwell News. No arrests have been made. Simmons and Richards had been carrying on a very bitter newspaper war. They met by chance, when both drew revolvers and began firing. At the fifth shot Branscomb, who was with Richards, fell pierced by a bullet.

Elections in Cuba.

Havana, April 13. — Elections for thirty members of the cortes were held yesterday. The candidates of the union constitutional party were the only ones in the field, the other parties declining to take part in the elections. The vote was extremely light, and there was no animation.

To Meet the Emperor May 2.

Berlin, April 13.—United States Ambassador Uhl will be presented to the emperor on May 2.

CUBAN BELLIGERENCY.

Members of the House Believe They Have Gone Far Enough.

Washington, April 13.—A careful canvass of the house of representatives shows a complete cessation of excitement over the Cuban situation. The sympathy of the members is still with the insurgents, but some unexpected circumstances will be necessary to again arouse them to action. The most general expression of opinion on both sides of the chamber is that congress has done its duty in adopting, by an ouerwhelming vote, the resolutions declaring that the insurgents were entitled to belligerent rights. Having done this, and the matter now being in the hands of the president, it is deemed better to leave it there. While not openly expressed, there was a tacit admission by many of the conspicuous leaders that the house would be acting unfairly to the president in adopting a joint resolution of belligerency which it would be mandatory upon him to approve or veto. Democrats generally who claim to have familiarized themselves with the subject assert that recognition is purely an executive function and that the house would not be justified in going further than defining its own position.

Hitt Looks for Cuban Recognition.

There is one gentleman, however, who does not agree with his associates as to the president's probable action. This is Robert R. Hitt of Illinois, the chairman of the house foreign affairs committee, whose prominence in the several Cuban debates gives to his utterances an especial significance. Mr. Hitt regards it as likely that President Cleveland will, within a reasonable time, issue a proclamation recognizing the belligerency of the Cubans. He does not base this upon any information he has received, nor did he care to predict when the president might take such action.

BISHOP RYAN'S REMAINS.

Conveyed to the Cathedral in Buffalo Where They Will Lie in State.

Buffalo, April 13.—With all the solemnity and dignity befitting the occasion the remains of the late Right Rev. Bishop Ryan were removed yesterday afternoon from his late residence to the cathedral, where they will be interered to-morrow morning under the altar, beside those of his predecessor, Bishop Timon and the late Vicar General Gleason. The cortege was one of the largest witnessed in this city. At 3 o'clock the casket containing the remains was carried from house by eight priests and placed in the hearse. The signal to start was given, and the cortege moved Delaware avenue which was thronged with people The mass of people about the cathedral was so dense that ropes had to be stretched to keep the line of march clear. Arrived at the cathedral the procession halted and the casket was lifted from the hearse and borne into the edifice, the band playing "Nearer My God To Thee." The remains were placed on a catafalque near the altar, where they will lie in state until to-morrow.

DRY DAY IN NEW YORK.

The New Excise Law Rigidly Enforced in the Metropolis Yesterday.

New York, April 13.—The Raines liquor law was again strictly enforced in this city yesterday, and was even more generally observed than on any previous Sunday, the violations of its letter and spirit being fewer. The restaurant men had had time to remove the bars from their eating rooms and consequently nearly all of these places were open. The saloons, with the inevitable exceptions, were tightly closed and their interiors exposed. A very large business in flasks and bottled beer was done by the saloons Saturday night, but outside of such supplies it may be said that this was the dryest day New York city has ever known.

NUMEROUS ENCOUNTERS.

The Fighting in Cuba Reported Active in the Different Provinces.

Havana, April 13.—Numerous encounters are reported between government troops and rebel bands in the different provinces. There has been considerable fighting around the trocha, the military line across the island. Parties of insurgents recently entered the province of Havana from the east They appear to be gathering from the trocha. Gen. Arolas reports that the operations against Maceo are continued day and night. The town of Guatro Caminos, province of Havana has been burned by rebels.

ONE MAN PROBABLY PERISHED.

Barn, Twelve Horses and Ten Head of Stock Burned.

Hartford, April 13.—G. W. Darlins' barn in East Hartford was burned last night with twelve horses and ten head of stock. A man by the name of Brennan, a stone mason, was probably burned to death. He slept in the barn and cannot be found. Several wagons and harness were burned.

Monterey Damaged in Collision.

Seattle, Wash., April 13.—The Puget Sound & Central American company's steamer Transit was in collision with the government coast defense vessel Monterey yesterday afternoon. The Monterey had one of her armor plates loosened. She will be placed in the new government dry dock at Port Orchard for repairs. The Transit had her bow badly stove. About $20,000 will cover the damage to both vessels.

Ten-Year-Old Boy Commits Suicide.

Corning, N. Y., April 13.—Walter F. Bidler, aged 10, residing at Coopers, a few miles west of here, committed suicide Saturday night. He took a double-barrelled shotgun and put the charge through his side. The day before he told his schoolmates that it was his last day at school, as he intended to kill himself.

UNIQUE EXHIBITION

Col. Ingersoll Addresses a Chicago Church Congregation.

HIS REMARKS WILDLY CHEERED

Came Onto the Platform Arm in Arm with the Minister — Numerous Matters Touched on During His Remarks.

Chicago, April 13.—With a prelude that included the pronouncing of an invocation, the repeating of the Lord's prayer in unison, the reading of tenth chapter of Luke, commencing with the twenty-fifth verse, the singing of a hosanna of "Nearer my God to Thee" and "America," the greatest living agnostic of the age, Robert G. Ingersoll, stepped to the rostrum of the Church Militant yesterday and for nearly two hours expounded to the congregation his views upon "How mankind could be reformed." The Church Militant is composed of the major portion of the former adherents of the Fullerton avenue Presbyterian church, one of the strongest congregations of that denomination in the city and who, with their pastor, Rev. Dr. John Rusk, branched off into an independent organization some months since, as a result of the opposition to the minority of the congregation of radical changes in the conduct of the services, including the use of an intrumental orchestra and the attachment to the church of employment, hospital, club house and other guilds.

No Time To Disagree.

Although admission was confined strictly to ticket holders, the street in front of the theatre was packed with people long before the opening of the doors, and even after the interior had been filled to suffocation over a thousand men and women besieged the entrance. On the stage were 400 or more representative citizens, including nearly every member of the appellate and superior judiciary, several county officials, delegations from every medical and law college and institution of learning in the city and suburbs and a number of retired divines. Every sect and denomination, without an exception, had its representative. When Col. Ingersoll made his appearance, arm in arm with Dr. Rusk, there was loud applause mingled with murmurs from some who seemed to regard such a demonstration as foreign to a religious service. In the prayer that followed the musical exercises Dr. Rusk asked a special blessing on their guest of the day, who was endeavoring to show the world how this life might be made one of usefulness and joy, and invoked a dispensation for his wife and children, while in his introductory remarks Dr. Shaw characterized Col. Ingersoll as "the man who is endeavoring to do this world good and to make it better." This, he said, was no time to reason, no time to disagree with the beliefs of men or the faiths of men when they were trying to make the world better than they found it. No matter, he said, whether a man believed in God or not, if he expounded the truth, then the truth was there and God was there.

No Darkness But Ignorance.

As Col. Ingersoll steppped to the rostrum he was welcomed with applause that lasted for ever a minute. With the suggestion that while his hearers and himself might be travelling different roads they were all trying to add to human joy and happiness. He took as his text the quotation from Shakespeare, whom he characterized as the "greatest of human beings." "There is no darkness but ignorance," he said, and for two hours spoke upon the necessity of arbitration as a substitute for war, the need for new methods in the treatment of criminals, the desirability of the occupancy of the prairies of the west for homes as a panacea for tenement system, the question of divorce, the relations of capital and labor and the need of reform in the education of children. When he concluded the applause was loud and long continued, many of those in the foyer waving their handkerchiefs and hats. The congregation united in singing "Blest Be the Tie That Binds," and with the pronouncing of the benediction the unique service came to an end.

OUR STARCH CHEAPER.

Quality Not the Cause of Its Large Sale in Germany.

Berlin, April 13.—Dr. Saare, who was sent to the United States at the instance of the German Starch Producers' association to inquire into the starch industries in America, has returned and made his report to the government. The main cause of the increase of American competition against the German starch industries is not, he says, that the American product is of better quality, but that the price is cheaper, a condition due to the concentration of the American starch industry. He recommends German manufacturers to combine as the Americans have done, otherwise they will be beaten out of the market.

New England M. E. Conference.

Springfield, Mass., April 13.—The New England conference of the Methodist church here will probably come to an end to-night or to-morrow morning. The minute business has been completed, and the reports of the committee on Romanism and of the committee on the admission of women to the general conference are the principal items to be discussed to-day.

DEMOCRATIC STATE COMMITTEE.
E. F. C. Young, Chairman. Willard C. Fisk, Secretary.

In the news columns today The Press tells of the progress of proposition to build the trolley from Elizabeth to this city. Plainfield welcomes it because it will be a good thing to advance the prosperity of the city.

Two Kansas editors have come to the conclusion that the gun in a mightier argument than the pen, and now one of them lives not to tell the reasons thereof, but tho world of journalism has received a recruit to take the place of the missing Kansas scribler by the personality of the Buffalo Bill.

It is very evident that Elizabeth Republicans are fearful that victory at the polls tomorrow will not be theirs. They are utilizing every method known in political warfare to accomplish the re-election of Mayor Rankin. When a candidate finds it necessary to resort to letter-writing to the public to bolster up his campaign, as Mayor Rankin has done, it shows plainly that he is in desperate straits. It is the opinion of sagacious political observers that Frederick C. Marsh stands an excellent show of being Elizabeth's next Mayor.

THEATRICAL.

The most beautiful story of American life upon the stage will be told again in Music Hall Wednesday night—the story of Augustus Thomas' now famous play "Alabama." The mellow moonlight of the south will again guild the battered walls around Colonel Preston's (Scott Cooper) little yard. Again the sweet music of darkey voices will rise and fall through the shades of palmetto groves. Again in the glamour of the moonlight that pours down so warm and tender through the trees Capt. Davenport (Clement Bainbridge) will meet again the love of his early years will find his father and daughter, and the old wounds and scars will be covered with poetry and peace. No play was ever so facinating as "Alabama" One can see it over and over again and discover new beauties in it each time. It is refreshing in these days of horse-play and sensation to witness a play like "Alabama," and it is pleasant to record that it is one of the most successful plays of the day.

The mosaic of mirth, melody and novelty at Proctor's Pleasure Palace in New York, shows keen appreciation of what is needed to make up a clean, wholesome and thoroughly amusing vaudeville. The great crowds that seek diversion there find many notable features. Selma, the prima donna, whose sweet voice and artistic method are alike admirable in operatic music and ballads, retains "Kathleen Mavourneen" in her programme. Sandow is in his last fortnight, in new tests of strength, with posings and dramatic tableaux vivants. The Pantzer Bros., supreme head balancers and graceful acrobats, return. Weber and Fields with their $1,000 per week salary loom into prominence and illustrate the comical side of the "German Senators' Schutzenfest." Lottie Gilson remains with bewildering gowns, and new original songs, and John W. Ransone, a la Croker, with a rattling fusilade of songs and jests, inspired by local topics. The Ammons-Clerise Trio have novelties of song and instrumental music. Singers of contrasting types are Eva Tanguay, Maude Raymond, Gertrude Mansfield, Vivie Nobriga and the sisters Arnold. Artistic representations of classic statuary are shown by the Austin Sisters, and Lydia Dreams provides ventriloxuial interlude and draws lightning cartoons. Among the other features are Bimbo and Tehi, nesromancers, Burtemas, equilibrist, and Little Carrie, in a musical specialty.

EARTHLY PARADISES.

Portions of the Earth That Approach Climatic Perfection.

For an inhabitant of the north temperate zone the most nearly correct climate would probably be the island of Tasmania, which enjoys warmth without heat and freshness without cold, and moreover possesses a climate so equable that the average temperature ranges from 44 to 63 degrees, giving a mean of about 52. In addition to this, or possibly in consequence of it, and the purifying effect of the sea breezes, there is practically no disease save what the inhabitants are responsible for. There are many groups of islands in the South Pacific which fully deserve the name of earthly paradise, but they have the fault of being too much like paradise. The valley of Cashmere in northern India and of Quito in Ecquador possess climates which are almost perfect, but they suffer the disadvantage of a great distance from the sea. Australia is too dry and New Zealand too damp to approach perfection; but Tasmania possesses the happy mean which affords health and comfort without the danger of degeneration which is the penalty of more luxurious climes. Of places near home, the Isle of Man probably most nearly fulfills the conditions of the question. Although so much farther north, its average temperature is almost as high and quite as equable as that of the Isle of Wight, but it possesses the additional advantage of freedom from the fogs, which are the greatest disadvantage of the shores of the English channel.

TESTING CHRONOMETERS.

The Interesting Process of Adjusting Watches for Temperature.

Before a first-class watch is sold it has to go through a variety of tests or "adjustments," and one of the most important is the adjustment for temperature.

Chronometers are adjusted for temperatures varying from 50 degrees to 90 degrees, as a rule, but some makers —especially in France—cool them down to zero, and often they are heated to 120 degrees. Beyond this point it is dangerous to heat them, as the oil would be liable to injury, and even the works might suffer.

Pocket watches are adjusted for temperatures varying from 35 degrees to 95 degrees. The process consists in putting the watch in a close-fitting case, and placing this in a cold room, or a refrigerator with ice, and leaving it there for some time, altering the works so as to make it keep regular time. Then it is very gradually heated, great care being taken not to let the moisture in the warm air condense upon it.

Next it is put in a specially constructed oven, and heated to 90 or 100 or 120 degrees, the machinery being again adjusted to go regularly. Chronometers are usually kept a week in the cold chamber, then a week in the hot, and again a week in the cold chamber. After that they are ready to make voyages to any port between the equator and the poles without losing or gaining a minute.

CURIOUS CHINESE CUSTOM.

Calling to Mind the Blessing of Having Written Characters.

In a work entitled "An Australian in China" occurs a description of the queer practice in China of honoring waste paper by committing it to the flames. In the center of the green stands the hollow pillar, in which Chinese waste paper is reverently burnt. "When letters were invented," the Chinese say, "Heaven rejoiced and hell trembled." "Reverence the characters," is an injunction of Confucius which no Chinaman neglects to follow. He remembers that "he who uses lettered paper to kindle the fire has ten demerits, and will have itchy sores;" he remembers that "he who tosses lettered paper into dirty water, or burns it in a filthy place has 20 demerits, and will frequently have sore eyes or become blind;" whereas, "he who gets about and collects, washes and burns lettered paper has 5,000 merits, adds 12 years to his life, and will become honored and healthy, and his children and grandchildren will be virtuous and filial." But his reverence has strict limits, and while he reverences a piece of paper upon which a moral precept is written, he often thinks himself absolved from reverencing the moral precept itself.

Provoked a Speech.

A good story is told of the way in which a New England senator was once aroused to make a stirring speech. At the outset of his political career he had been known as a remarkably clever "orator of the stump," and later on, in the lower house of the legislature, he made a brilliant name for himself. But when he became a senator he ceased talking, much to the regret of his friends and admirers. Finally the liquor law came up for discussion, and the wife of a friend of the senator, who was much interested in its passage, was greatly disappointed to see that the brilliant man had no apparent intention of joining in the discussion. She sat down and wrote a few words on a sheet of paper, which she inclosed in an envelope and sent by a messenger to the senator. "Do speak! Even Balaam's ass spoke once!" This brought the senator to his feet and elicited one of the best speeches he ever made.

A Tottering Spire.

It is reported that the spire of Salisbury cathedral, in the south of England, is tottering. When the cathedral was begun, in 1220, there was no thought of erecting a spire on the central tower. That was an afterthought, and the architect who designed the tower strained the strength of the original substructure to the utmost. It has always had to be carefully watched, and the means taken to strengthen it by iron bands and ties have only added to the weight. Of late the stonework has been decaying rapidly, so that the spire is in great danger of collapsing.

TWO TEMPTING RECEIPTS.

A Confection of Figs and a Celebrated Rule for Making Chocolate.

Take dry figs. The choicest thin skinned ones are not necessary for this purpose. Wash and cut them carefully to be sure no imperfections are left. Pour boiling water on them and let them simmer until the skins are quitet tender. Then remove the figs and add sugar sufficiently to make a rich sirup of the water in which they were boiled, and lemon or grape juice to give color and acidity. Pour this on the figs and set them away to cool.

When William M. Evarts occupied a seat in the United States senate and a fine house, with his family, in Washington, the chocolate at their afternoon receptions became famous. The receipt for it was as follows: One quart milk, one cake chocolate, essence of vanilla. Grate the chocolate very fine, mix with a teaspoonful of hot water and rub smooth. Allow the milk to come to a boil, put in the chocolate and boil about five minutes, or until of desired thickness. After removing it from the fire season with the essence of vanilla according to taste. Boil in a farina kettle. The chocolate should then be poured into dainty cups while still in the kitchen and served quickly steaming hot.

Fill the cups two-thirds full with the delicious brown mixture and add thick beaten cream. This addition constitutes the making of the famous Vienna chocolate introduced at the centennial. If only one square of chocolate is required, draw a line across the two squares at the end dividing them in half. With a sharp knife shave off the chocolate until you come to the line, which saves waste of time and material.—Chicago News.

How She Spelled It.

Every one knows how to speli "hard water" with three letters, but probably some readers would be puzzled to spell "yesterday" with six. A Cincinnati girl could tell them how, according to the Enquirer. She does not go to school, but is taught by her mother at home. The other night her father was hearing her spell. One word after another was successfully disposed of, and then he said: "Now, Annie, I am going to give you a hard one. If you spell it correctly I'll bring you some candy. How do you spell 'yesterday?'" It was a hard one. Annie thought of the candy, and just then her eye caught the calendar hanging against the wall. Then she answered, with a smile of triumph: "F-r-i, yester, d-a-y, day, yesterday."—Atlanta Constitution.

The Judge's Little Joke.

Judge Gary has a dry wit with him that is occasionally the cause of his grim courtroom being pervaded by a very audible tittering. The other day one of the attorneys was airing his indignation. He had been robbed. Yes, sir, robbed. It was shameful the way things went right there under the eyes of the law.

Finally Judge Gary noticed the fuming and fretting one.

"What's the matter now?" he asked.

"Matter? It's a confounded outrage. Had my overcoat stolen right from this room."

The judge smiled a little.

"Overcoat, eh?" he said. "Pah, that's nothing. Whole suits are lost here every day."—Green Bay.

—The moral law is written on the tablets of eternity. For every false word or unrighteous deed, for cruelty and oppression, for lust or vanity, the price has to be paid at last.—Froude.

do you eat iron

Some persons are always taking iron. If weak and easily exhausted; pale and without appetite; if the nervous system is weak, and sleep difficult, what do you take? Iron? But iron cannot supply food to the tissues; nor does it have any power to change the activity of unhealthy organs and bring them back to health. Cod-liver oil is what you need. The oil feeds the poorly-nourished tissues, and makes rich blood. Iodine, bromine, and other ingredients, which form part of the oil, have special power to alter unhealthy action.

Scott's Emulsion

of Cod-liver Oil, with Hypophosphites, is the most palatable way to take cod-liver oil. The hypophosphites supply healthy nerve action, which controls all the processes of life.

SCOTT'S EMULSION has been indorsed by the medical profession for twenty years. (Ask your doctor.) This is because it is always palatable—always uniform—always contains the purest Norwegian Cod-liver Oil and Hypophosphites.

CLARENCE

By BRET HARTE.

COPYRIGHT, 1894, BY BRET HARTE.

It was perhaps part of this reaction which enabled him to obey his hostess' commands with a certain recklessness that, however, seemed to be in keeping with the previous Satanic reputation he had, all unconsciously, achieved. The women listened to the cynical flippancy of the good-looking soldier with an undisguised admiration, which, in turn, excited curiosity and envy from his own sex. He saw the whispered questioning, the lifted eyebrows, the scornful shrugging of shoulders—and knew that the story of his disgrace was in the air. But I fear this only excited him to further recklessness and triumph. Once he thought he recognized Miss Faulkner's figure at a distance, and even fancied that she had been watching him—but he only redoubled his attentions to the fair woman beside him, and looked no more.

But he was glad when the guests began to drop off; the great rooms thinned, and Susy, appearing on the arm of her husband, coquettishly reminded him of his promise. "For I want to talk to you of old times. Gen. Brant," she went on, turning explanatorily to Boompointer, "married my adopted mother in California, at Robles, a dear old place were I spent my earliest years. So you see we are sort of relations by marriage," she added, with delightful naivete. Hooker's once vainglorious allusion to his relations to the man before him flashed across Brant's mind, but it left now only a smile on his lips. He felt he had already become a part of the irresponsible comedy of life around him. Why should he resist or examine its ethics too closely? He offered his arm to Susy; they descended the stairs; but instead of pausing in the supper-room, she simply passed through it with a significant pressure of his arm, and drawing aside a muslin curtain stepped into the moonlit conservatory. Behind the curtain there was a small rustic settee; without releasing his arm she sat down, so that when he dropped beside her their hands met and mutually clasped.

"Now, Kla'uns," she said with a slight comfortable shiver as she nestled beside him, "it's a little like your chair down at old Robles, isn't it? Tell me. And to think it's five years ago. But Kla'uns, what's the matter? You are changed," she said, looking at his dark face in the moonlight, "or you have something to tell me."

"I have."

"And it's something dreadful, I know," she said, wrinkling her brows with a pretty terror. "Couldn't you pretend you had told it to me and let us go on just the same? Couldn't you, Kla'uns? Tell me."

"I am afraid I couldn't," he said, with a sad smile.

"Is it about yourself, Kla'uns? You know," she went on with cheerful rapidity, "I know everything about you—I always did, you know—and I don't care and never did care, and it don't and never did make the slightest difference to me. So don't tell it and waste time, Kla'uns."

"It's not about me—but about my wife," he said, slowly.

Her expression changed slightly. "O, her!" she said, after a pause. Then half resignedly: "Go on, Kla'uns."

He began. He had a dozen times rehearsed to himself his miserable story, always feeling it keenly, and even fearing that he might be carried away by emotion or morbid sentiment in telling it to another, but to his astonishment he found himself telling it practically, calmly, almost cynically to his old playmate, repressing the half devotion and even tenderness that had governed him, from the time that his wife, disguised as a mulatto woman, had secretly watched him in his office, to the hour that he had passed her through the lines. He withheld only the incident of Miss Faulkner's complicity and sacrifice.

"And she got away—after having kicked you out of your place, Kla'uns?" said Susy when he had ended.

Clarence stiffened beside her. But he felt he had gone too far to quarrel with his confidante. "She went away. I honestly believe that we shall never meet again—or I should not be telling you this!"

"Kla'uns," she said lightly, taking his hand again, "don't you believe it! She won't let you go. You're one of those men that a woman when she once has hooked on to won't let go of even when she believes she no longer loves him—or meets bigger and better men. I reckon it's because you're so different from other men—maybe—there are so many different things about you to hook on to—and you don't slip off as easily as the others. Now, if you were like old Peyton, her first husband, or like poor Jim, or even my Boompointer, you'd be all right! No, my boy, all we can do is try to keep her from getting at you here. I reckon she won't trust herself in Washington again in a hurry!"

"But I cannot stay here—my career is in the field."

"Your career is alongside o' me, honey—and Boompointer. But nearer me. We'll fix all that. I heard something about your being in disgrace, but the story was that you were soft on some secesh girl down there and neglected your business, Kla'uns. But Lordy! to think it was only your own wife! Never mind, we'll straighten that out. We've had worse jobs than that ca. Why, there was that commissary who was buying up dead horses at one end of the field and selling them to the government for mess beef at the other; and there was that general who wouldn't make an attack when it rained, and the other general—you know who I mean, Kla'uns—who wouldn't invade the state where his sister lived—but we straightened them out somehow, and they were a heap worse than you. We'll get you a position in the war department here, one of the bureau offices, where you keep your rank and your uniform—you don't look bad in it, Kla'uns—on better pay. And you'll come and see me—and we'll talk over old times."

Brant felt his heart turn sick within him. But he was at her mercy now! He said with an effort: "But I've told you that my career—nay, my life—now is in the field."

"Don't you be a fool, Kla'uns, and leave it there. You have done your work of fighting—mighty good fighting, too, and everybody knows it. You've earned a change. Let others take your place."

He shuddered as he remembered that his wife had made the same appeal. Was he a fool, then, and these two women—so totally unlike in everything—right in this?

"Come, Kla'uns," said Susy, relapsing against his shoulder, "now talk to me! You don't say what you think of me, of my home, my furniture—of my position—even of him! Tell me!"

"I find you well, prosperous, and happy," he said, with a faint smile.

"Is that all? How do I look?"

She turned her still youthful mischievous face toward him in the moonlight. The witchery of her blue eyes was still there as of old, the same frank irresponsibility beamed from them; her parted lips seemed to give him back the breath of his youth. He started, but she did not.

"Susy, dear!"

It was her husband's voice. "I quite forgot," it went on, as he drew the curtain aside, "that you are engaged with a friend, but Miss Faulkner is waiting to say 'good night,' and I volunteered to find you."

"Tell her to wait a moment," said Susy, with an impatience that was as undisguised as it was without embarrassment or confusion.

But Miss Faulkner, unconsciously following Mr. Boompointer, was already upon them. For a moment, the whole four were silent—although perfectly composed.

Senator Boompointer, unconscious of any infelicity in his interruption, was calmly waiting. Clarence, opposed suddenly to the young girl, whom he believed was avoiding his recognition, rose, coldly imperturbable. Miss Faulkner, looking taller and more erect in the long folds of her satin cloak, neither paled nor blushed, as she regarded Susy and Brant with a smile of well-bred apology.

"I expect to leave Washington tomorrow, and may not be able to call again," she said, "or I would not have so particularly pressed a leavetaking upon you."

"I was talking with my old friend, Gen. Brant," said Susy, more by way of introduction than apology.

Brant bowed. For an instant the clear eyes of Miss Faulkner slipped icily across him as she made him an old-fashioned colonial courtesy, and taking Susy's arm she left the room. Brant did not linger, but took leave of his host almost in the same breath. At the front door a well-appointed carriage of one of the legations had just rolled into waiting. He looked back and saw Miss Faulkner, erect and beautiful as a bride in her gauzy draperies, descending the stairs before the waiting servants. He felt his heart beat strangely. He hesitated; recalled himself with an effort—hurriedly stepped from the porch into the path as he heard the carriage door close behind him in the distance, and even felt the dust from her horses' hoofs rise around him as she drove past him and away.

CHAPTER III.

Although Brant was convinced as soon as he left the house that he could not accept anything from the Boompointer influence, and that his interview with Susy was fruitless, he knew that he must temporize. While he did not believe that his old playmate would willingly betray him, he was uneasy when he thought of the vanity and impulsiveness which might compromize him—or of a possible jealousy that might seek revenge. Yet he had no reason to believe that Susy's nature was jealous, or that she was likely to have any cause, but the fact was that the climax of Miss Faulkner's reappearance when they were together affected him more strongly than the real climax of his interview with Susy—which was her offer. Once out of the atmosphere of that house, it struck him, too, that Miss Faulkner was almost as much of an alien to it as himself. He wondered what she had been doing there. Could it be possible that she was obtaining information for the south? But he rejected the idea as quickly as it had occurred to him. Perhaps there could be no stronger proof of the unconscious influence the young girl already had over him.

He remembered the liveries of the diplomatic carriage that had borne her away and ascertained without difficulty that her sister had married one of the foreign ministers, and that she was the guest in his house. But he was the more astonished to hear that she and her sister were considered to be southern unionists, and were greatly petted in governmental circles for their sacrificing fidelity to the flag. His informant, an official in the state department, added that Miss Matilda might have been a good deal of a madcap at the outbreak of the war, for the sisters had a brother in the confederate service, but that she had changed greatly, and, indeed, within a month. "For," he added, "she was at the white house for the first time last week, and they say the president talked more to her than any other woman."

The indescribable sensation with which this simple information filled Brant startled him more than the news itself. Hope, joy, fear, distrust and despair alternately thrilled him. He recalled Miss Faulkner's almost agonizing glance of appeal to him in the drawing room at Susy's, and it seemed to be equally consistent with the truth of what he had just heard—or some monstrous treachery and deceit of which she might be capable. Even now she might be a secret emissary of some spy within the president's family; she might have been in correspondence with some traitor in the Boompointer clique, and her imploring glance only the result of a fear of exposure. Or, again, she might have truly recanted after her escapade at Gray Oaks, and feared only his recollection of her as go-between of spies. And yet both of these presumptions were inconsistent with her conduct in the conservatory. It seemed impossible that this impulsive woman, capable of doing what he had himself known her to do, and equally sensitive to the shame or joy of such impulses, should be the same heartless woman of society, who had so coldly recognized and parted from him.

But this interval of doubt was transitory. The next day he received a dispatch from the war department, ordering him to report himself for duty at once. With a beating heart he hurried to the secretary. But that official had merely left a memorandum with his assistant, directing Gen. Brant to accompany some fresh levies to a camp of occupation near the front for "organization." Brant felt a chill of disappointment. Duties of this kind had been left to dubious, regular army veterans, hurriedly displaced general officers and favored detrimentals. But if it was not restoration, it was no longer inaction, and it was at least a release from Washington.

It was, also, evidently the result of some influence, but hardly that of the Boompointers, for he knew that Susy wished to keep him at the capital. Was there another power at work to send him away to Washington? His previous suspicion returned. Nor were they dissipated when the chief of the bureau placed a letter before him with the remark that it had been intrusted to him by a lady, with the request that it should be delivered only into his own hands. "She did not know your hotel address, but ascertained you were to call here. She said it was of importance. There is no mystery about it, general," continued the official with a mischievous glance at Brant's handsome, perplexed face, "although it's from a very pretty woman—whom we all know."

"Mrs. Boompointer?" suggested Brant with affected lightness.

It was a maladroit speech. The official's face darkened. "We have not yet become a postal department for the Boompointers, general," he said, drily, "however great their influence elsewhere. It was from rather a different style of woman—Miss Faulkner. You will receive your papers later at your hotel, and leave to-night."

Brant's unlucky slip was still potent enough to divert the official attention, or he would have noticed the change in his visitor's face, and the abruptness of his departure.

Once in the street, Brant tore off the envelope. But beneath it was another, on which was written in a delicate, refined hand: "Please do not open this until you reach your destination."

Then she knew he was going! And this was her influence. All his suspicions again returned. She knew he was going through the lines, and this very appointment, through her influence, might be a plot to serve her and the enemy. Was this letter which she was intrusting to him the cover of a missive to her southern friends, which she expected him to carry, as a return for her own act of self-sacrifice? Was this the appeal she had been making to his chivalry, his gratitude, his honor? The perspiration stood in beads on his forehead. What defect lay hidden in his nature that seemed to make him an easy victim of these intriguing women? He had not even the excuse of gallantry. Less susceptible to the potencies of the sex than most men, he was still compelled to bear that reputation. He remembered his coldness to Miss Faulkner in the first days of their meeting and her effect upon his subaltern.

CYCLING COMMENT.

Chief Marshal Wilson, of the borough, now makes his rounds on a wheel.

George Graves, of Liberty street, has received his white enameled Zimmy wheel.

About thirty members of the Essex Wheelmen, of Newark, rode to Plainfield yesterday.

John Keefe, of the Kerr & Martin Cycle Co., of Newark, rode his wheel to this city, yesterday.

Members of the track team of the High School met on the Crescent Oval Saturday morning for practice.

George Cobb, Jr., is now in training and expects to do some fast track work on his wheel this summer.

Walter Drake, of this city, rode to New Brunswick on his wheel yesterday and visited a number of friends.

Walter Williams, of Netherwood, rode his wheel to White House, Saturday, and spent Sunday with friends.

Charles O. Smith, of South Plainfield, purchased a Gale wheel from the Plainfield Cycle Company Saturday.

Henry Ryno, of Somerset street, rode to Paterson and New Brunswick, yesterday, and visited friends in both places.

Thomas Lyness, Jr., of West Second street, is riding a '96 Columbia wheel purchased of the Eldridge Bicycle Company.

The Quill Club Wheelmen, of America, will attempt to make a match between "Eddie" Bald and "Walter" Sanger.

George Gabielhouse has purchased two Crescents, No. 2, from the F. L. C. Martin Cycle Company, for his nephews in the south.

A letter from George D. Gideon, chairman of the racing board of the L. A. W., says all the national championships will be assigned to the national meet at Louisville. This is a big card for the '96 Meet Club.

July 4th is the day selected for the twenty-five-mile road race, to be given by the Associated Cycling Clubs of Long Island. It will take place on what is known as the Valley Stream course, which is five miles long.

The committee on arrangements for the annual High School field day held a meeting last Friday morning and laid plans for the coming games to be held on the Crescent Oval May 9th. Several sub-committees were appointed and the work will be pushed as rapidly as possible.

The proposition to build a cycle path in the centre piece of the Western Boulevard in upper New York city has met with great favor among the wheelmen of the metropolis, and as it is believed the strip could be put to no better use, the plan will, no doubt, be carried out. The cost for the proposed path would be comparatively small, it has been estimated.

A new tandem bicycle that has been adopted in the United States Army presents novel features. Two army overcoats are strapped to the front bars, while a pair of blankets are made fast to the rear bars. Brackets on each side of the machine support repeating rifles and on each seat post hangs an army revolver. A case of signal flags, extending almost the length of the tandem and so arranged as not to interfere with the riders, completes the outfit.

The glorious spring weather has made the bicycle trade better. Orders are rolling in on the F. L. C. Martin Cycle Company. Among the latest purchasers of wheels from that company are: Mr. Hotchkiss, a Rambler; Miss Frances W. Marks, of New York, a Crescent No. 9; Mr. and Mrs. J. Frank Raymond, two Cleveland Swell Specials; Laurens H. VanBuren, a Cleveland Swell Special; Dr. J. H. Carman, a Cleveland; W. T. Kaufman, a Crescent No. 5; Fulton S. Weaver, a Cleveland Swell Special; Fred P. Taylor, a Cleveland Swell Special track wheel; Ed Demarest, a Crescent No. 2; Chief Marshal Wilson, a Crescent No. 9; Dr. Anderson, a Cleveland Swell Special; Robert Carpenter, of Dunellen, a Crescent No. 9; A. F. Sampson, a Crescent No. 5.

Sunday was an ideal spring day and the wheelmen turned out from all the cities and towns in the metropolitan district. The east wind in the morning theatened a storm later, so the riders did not try any long runs but preferred to follow the lines of the many railroads that start out from Jersey City and New York. The country roads were in excellent condition, a trifle dusty perhaps, but very pleasant to ride on nevertheless. The cycle clubs were all out in full force, the Linwood Wheelmen of New York, having a run to this city, while several other club runs passed through here. There was the usual rush for McVey's restaurant as the lunch hour approached and about eighty dined there, coming rrom Orange, Newark, Elizabeth, Brooklyn and even up in Long Island. The club men were not the only ones that took advantage of the beautiful weather and the excellent roads. There was the novice, whose set teeth and tightly clenched hands made it evident that all was not joy. The brand new '96 wheel went side by side with some old cushion tired relic of bygone days, while the scorcher and the erect wheelmen, out on a pleasure trip, enjoyed the weather and the roads in their own way. There were an unusual number of tandems to be seen which told of the rapidly rising popularity of the "bicycle built for two."

BARE-NECKED SKATERS.

Holland Women Appear on the Ice with Ball-Gown Bodices.

We are accustomed to see women bundled up in furs as they glide over the ice. To witness a woman's race in Holland would give us a greater chill than to meet a ghost at midnight. A foreign correspondent, in mentioning a contest on skates, describes it as follows:

"It was snowing slightly, but in every available moment between the races troops of men were told to clear the course. At a given signal six women started for the first race. They were dressed in very short skirts, and transparent-looking blouses, low necks, with no sleeves at all. We were told they were from among the lower peasant people, and that the shop classes never entered the lists at all. The speed they went at was something wonderful, and especially remarkable at the corners. For the most part they raced with their arms behind them, but the girl who won the prize (two pounds sterling) skated with hers folded in front."

Bare arms and necks in midwinter! Our physicians think women are courting death by wearing low-necked dresses in ballrooms. What must it be to wear them as outing costumes?

SOLID GOLD TOILET SET.

Property of the Khedive Incrusted with Precious Stones.

It is said that the only complete gold toilet set in the world belongs to the khedive of Egypt. Its exact value is not known, but it must be enormous, for the set is incrusted with diamonds and other precious stones. Egypt, by the way, has a debt of about $525,000,000, and besides the interest on this has to pay an annual tribute to the sultan of Turkey amounting to nearly $3,500,000. Despite this the present khedive has been following in the footsteps of his predecessors, whose extravagances brought about the present almost bankrupt condition of the country.

Each piece of the khedive's golden toilet set bears his monogram in diamonds. Upward of 3,000 diamonds and over 1,200 rubies were used in decorating these gorgeous adjuncts to the Egyptian ruler's dressing-table. The body of each of the 28 pieces is of 18-karat gold, and all are inclosed in a diamond-incrusted ebony case.

The Chambermaid's Tips.

A pleasing story is told by the crown prince of Germany, who, with his brother, was recently with their tutor at the hotel of the Chutes du Rhin. When the tutor paid the bill he offered a money present to the chambermaid, who, however, refused the gift, pointing to a notice that tips were forbidden. The tutor explained the situation to the eldest pupil, who thereupon went out with his brother and bought a very pretty brooch. This he gave to the maid, saying that, "as it was not money, she could not refuse it." As the young princes were staying at the hotel incognito the maid did not know that the donor of the brooch will probably be emperor of Germany some day.

The Field of Lies.

The competition is open to teams of seven men. A goodly number of entries have been received already.

VARIOUS SPORTS.

A public exhibition of gymnasium work by the business men's class and some of the older evening classes of the Y. M. C. A. will be given in the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium tomorrow night. About forty are expected to take part. A basket ball game will close the exhibition. It will be betweeen two teams from the business men's class.

HELPING NEEDY POOR.

ENCOURAGING REPORTS OF THE ORGANIZED AID ASSOCIATION.

Places of Employment Provided for Many, and in Other Cases the Necessities of Life Given—Raising Money for a Home.

The regular general meeting of the Organized Aid Asssociation was held in the parlors of the Crescent Avenue church last evening. The attendance was good. President Tyler called the meeting to order after which the regular opening business was transacted. The secretary's report was a brief one. Three members of the employment committee had resigned and the resignations were then accepted. The secretary, John Doull Miller, reported that he had notified all the representatives of the different charitable organizations of their appointment to the Organized Aid Association and that he had received only three resignations, although a number had not been heard from at all. The vacancies were authorized to be filled by the executive committee.

The report of the employment committee was a very interesting one and was read by Miss Tweedy. It stated that between December 31st, 1895, and April 6th, 1896, forty-nine applications had been made. There had been forty applications for workers, twenty-eight of which had been filled while the others had mostly been for servants by the month, while those who came to the committee only wanted work by the day. Those for whom work could not be found, when their needs were urgent, had been supplied with the necessities of life. The report then told something of the work in other cities, especially relative to the co-operation farms. This report was accepted and referred to the printing committee to be used.

A short discussion of the report followed and President Tyler said he understood that Mrs. Opdyke was going to start a small co-operative farm here under her own direction and had raised a small fund for that purpose.

The report of the executive committee told of a meeting at which the question of accepting the offer of the Relief Association and changing their quarters from the Taylor building at the corner of Park and North avenues to the new rooms of the Relief Association on West Front street near Plainfield avenue. The committee had decided to move at once.

A vote of thanks was then given to Rev. Dr. Taylor for the use of the office in his building rent free for the last four months.

Ex-mayor L. V. F. Randolph made a few remarks on the determination to remain in the same rooms with the Relief Association and thought it a good thing, for the two corporations were really one in object. He referred to the encumberance on the quarters which had, all except $1,000 of it, been raised. He spoke of the efforts that should be made to raise the remaining sum and distributed copies of the article recently published in the Daily Press referring to the matter and asked that they might be handed about so as to secure greater interest in the cause. The meeting then adjourned.

Shot a Mad Dog.

Officer Saunders was obliged to shoot a bull-terrier, belonging to James Kane, of West Third street, a few days ago. The animal showed symptoms of hydrophobia and the officer investigated. He found the dog under a pile of lumber and when the officer removed the lumber, the dog jumped at his throat and attempted to bite everyone within reach. It took three bullets from the officer's revolver to despatch the brute. Kane prized the dog highly and is inclined to think the dog was dosed.

Getting Too Warm for Dancing.

The dancing school of the Scandia Junior Society, which has been held every Saturday night in Red Men's Hall, will be discontinued after next Saturday evening. Prof. Guttman will furnish the music for their reception and ball which will take place in the Gesang and Turn Verein Hall, Monday evening, April 20th.

During the winter of 1893, F. M. Martin, of Long Reach, West Va., contracted a severe cold which left him with a cough. In speaking of how he cured it he says: "I used several kinds of cough syrup but found no relief until I bought a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, which relieved me almost instantly, and in a short time brought about a complete cure." When troubled with a cough or cold use this remedy and you will not find it necessary to try several kinds before you get relief. It has been in the market for over twenty years and constantly grown in favor and popularity. For sale at 25 and 50 cents per bottle at Armstrong's pharmacy, Park and North avenues.

THE LEHIGH IS AFTER COMMUTERS.

Plan by Which the Lehigh Valley Proposes to Get Into This City.

The commuter's patronage on the Jersey Central railroad from Plainfield has always been a large one and many plans have been made by other corporations to secure a share of it, but none have ever been carried out. The Jersey Central railroad is the only one with a line through the city and would fight any attempt to spoil their monopoly of the Plainfield trade.

For some time there have been rumors afloat that the Lehigh Valley railroad was going to run a branch road into Plainfield, leaving the main line at South Plainfield, to try to secure some of the trade from this city. Another plan, however, is on foot to secure the same results. This one is to build a trolley road from Somerville to Bound Brook, then on to Plainfield and finally over to South Plainfield. This line would, of course connect with the Lehigh Valley at Bound Brook and South Plainfield. South Plainfield is a little over two miles from here and a trolley car could carry the commuter, particularly those in the West End, over to the Lehigh Valley station in about the same time that it would take them to the Jersey Central depot. Nothing definite has been done as yet, but there is no doubt but that the Lehigh Valley will attempt in some manner to enter Plainfield.

THE WELLS ABANDONED.

Elizabeth Will Not Get Their Water Supply From South Plainfield.

The people who are interested in a greater water supply for Elizabeth, and who made a test of the water at South Plainfield, have temporarily abandoned the latter place. The cause of this has just come to light.

For sometime past the projectors have been working at a place called "The Hammocks," which is located on Morris avenue about three miles from the Elizabeth railroad station. One eight-inch well was drilled 250 feet, and after a test it was found that as much water could be secured from that one well as from the one at South Plainfield, and the quality was just as good. Consequently a second well was drilled. This one is nearly completed, and during the past few days a third well has been started. In view of the fact that the wells are only three quarters of a mile from the Elizabeth reservoir, it is apparent that if the desired supply can be obtained there the company will not have to go to the expense of laying thirteen miles of water mains. It is reasonably sure, that Elizabeth's increased water supply will not come from South Plainfield.

TO NETHERWOOD BY WEDNESDAY.

The Work of Building the Trolley Road is Being Pushed Very Fast.

Although very little has been seen or heard of the trolley line extension of late, except by those who live in and near Netherwood, the contractors have been pushing the work right along. Superintendent Yarnell has at last secured the trackman that he originally wanted, Michael Gleason. Gleason worked with Mr. Yarnell when he superintended the building of the Allentown and Bethlehem road in 1892, and is a thorough workman. He started this week and has the work well systemized so that yesterday was the most successul day since the work began, 1,200 feet of track being laid and covered. Today the work promises to go on with equal speed and Superintendent Yarnell told a Press reporter this morning that he expected the road would be laid up to the Netherwood station by Wednesday night.

The men have been organized into regular gangs and the work has been systemized so that it can now be pushed forward with great rapidity.

MRS. BOATE'S DIVORCE.

THE FANWOOD WOMAN'S PRINCIPAL WITNESS ARRESTED YESTERDAY.

Charles Corwin is Charged With Perjury by Thomas Boate—Mrs. Boate Wants to Whip Her Erstwhile Husband

Last January The Press made exclusive announcement of a divorce suit brought by Mrs. Annie Boate against her husband. The World this morning published the following concerning the case:

Annie Boate, who lives in a handsome $8,000 mansion on the Terrill road, in Fanwood Township, Union county, is trying to secure a divorce from Thomas Boate, who runs a bakery at Ocean Grove.

Mrs. Boate was married several years ago in Camden. She left two months later and went to Hoboken, where she became an actress in a variety theatre. She became tired of this life in a few years, and went to Fanwood to live.

While there associated with her was Charles Corwin, alias Collins, of New York city, about twenty-eight years old. Last fall the woman determined to get a divorce with the intention, it is said, of marrying Corwin.

Mrs. Boate went to Fargo, N. Dak., and remained a month, but was unable to secure the divorce, as she had not the necessary papers to show the Court that her husband had abandoned her. She returned to New Jersey and, through a Plainfield lawyer, began divorce proceedings.

Testimony was first taken in New York, and afterwards before Justice Vincent W. Nash, in Plainfield, and afterwards before Lawyer Cook, in Asbury Park.

Corwin was her chief witness to prove that Boate had not only forsaken her, but also, it is alleged, that he had made overtures to her through agents for a monetary consideration to be paid him if he would agree not to oppose the divorce. All this Boate stoutly denied, as did his witnesses.

Corwin submitted a letter which he claimed bore an important part in the case.

The hearing has dragged along several weeks at Asbury Park, and yesterday when it was to be resumed Corwin was seized by an officer when they alighted from the Jersey Central train at Asbury Park, and was taken before Justice Godd to answer a charge of perjury made by Thomas Boate.

Corwin pleaded not guilty, and was held in $300 bail to appear at a hearing in Justice Dodd's office. Mr. Guerin, the counsel for Boate, the complainant, had Mr. Cook before the Court.

The Justice decided to hold Corwin for the Monmouth County Grand Jury, and, as he was unable to furnish bail, he will be taken to the county jail at Freehold.

Mrs. Boate was greatly excited over the turn affairs had taken. She wanted to thrash Boate, but was checked by her lawyer. She assurred Corwin that she would stand by him to the last.

The hearing in the divorce suit will be resumed Wednesday morning, before Lawyer Cook.

It is Still a Mystery.

Baggage-Master J. F. Garretson, of the North avenue station and James Wagner, formerly night baggage-master at the same place, were called to Philadelphia today, by the railroad officials, to be present at the investigation of the mysterious trunk case which has thus far foiled the officials. It will be remembered that the trunk was owned by a Philadelphia woman and while it was in this city someone changed the checks. Since then no trace of the trunk has been found. The owner claims $400 as her loss and it is understood that the officials have offered her $125.

Salvationists Coming.

Tomorrow evening there is to be a special meeting at the Salvation Army Hall on West Second street. Ensign Emily March, who was formerly in in charge of the Army work here, accompanied by Lieut. Brown and the brass band from the Bowery corps, of New York, will make things lively. It is hoped also that through their coming there will be rendered some financial assistance to the local corps.

A SPEAK-EASY RAIDED.

THE PROPRIETOR A COLORED MAN AND HIS JOINT ON COTTAGE PLACE.

The Witnesses Were Primed With a Story to Prove His Innocence, But Broke Down in Court and Confessed.

For some time the police have been on the lookout for an illegal liquor dealer in the vicinity of "Paradise Alley," as Cottage place is rather inappropriately called, and last night their efforts met with success and the colored keeper of the "den" was arrested in company with his wife, and arraigned before the City Judge this morning. All his customers, who were ordered to appear as witnesses, had been loaded and primed with a very innocent story, but the awe-inspiring sight of the city court was too much for them, and, after one of the most amusing trials that has been seen in this city for some time, the "den" keeper went down to the Elizabeth jail, while his dusky wife returned to the scene of the trouble.

Theodore Radin was the colored individual arrested last evening and Mary Radin was his wife. They were confined in the rookery over night and this morning brought up before City Judge DeMeza.

The charge was for selling liquor without a license, and the proprietor of the "Paradise Alley" establishment pleaded not guilty. Willis Walker was the first to testify, and he told, after considerable delay, how he had visited Radin's "ranch" and purchased two bottles of beer for fifteen cents. This caused quite a little sensation and the prisoner glared at the witness, but still hoped.

Louis Moon was the next to tell his story. It was a very smooth one and made Radin into a hospitable host who treated his guests with a lavish hand. The Judge's cross-examination assisted his memory and he finally made some statements very damaging to Radin's cause. But the most fun was "Pop" Jones' testimony. He was a little old colored man with a memory that appeared very short. He had seen nobody there and no money had changed hands, but the Judge managed to enliven his memory in the cross-examination, and after scratching his head and thinking deeply, Jones told a story that proved Radin's guilt.

Radin's tall form shook like a reed as he got up and told his story. In less than two minutes he owned up that he sold liquor to his friends, but did not suppose they would "peach" on him.

The Judge sentenced him to pay a fine of $50 and go to jail for fifty-nine days.

Another charge was brought against him for striking and beating his wife. He admitted that he did but said that he did so because she drank.

He was sent down to serve twenty days in jail for this offence as he could not pay the fine of $5.

Sentence was suspended on his wife as she was already punished enough by her husband, her face, hands and body being covered with bruises and cuts.

A Benefit Dance.

John Winn, of Liberty street, who has been ill for the past four months is greatly in need of funds, and a number of his friends have organized themselves into a committee and have taken steps to hold a benefit dance in T. A. B. Hall, West Fourth street, on Monday evening, April 27th. The use of the hall has been donated and Prof. O'Reilly has kindly tendered his services free of charge. The committee is composed of H. Walden, chairman; P. Flynn, treasurer; W. Classen, secretary; D. White, John Galbraith, J. Carney, M. Field, J. Deady and T. Waldron. The committee promise an enjoyable time for all who attend.

Dr. Opdyke's Arm Sprained.

While Dr. Opdyke, of the Harlem Hospital, who was a former resident of this city, was driving down Third avenue in an ambulance yesterday morning a cable car bound south bumped the vehicle at 116th street. Dr. Opdyke was thrown out and his left arm sprained. After bumping the ambulance the car continued on its way. Dr. Opdyke says this is not the first time this has happened, and he intends to complain to the company.

Olive Baptist church, headed by Mrs. Phyllis Brown, president of the state and local missisnary society of this city, left this morning to attend the twenty-fifth anniversary of the Woman's Foreign Missionary of the Baptist churches of this state in the Peddie Memorial Baptist church in Newark.

THE SALVATION ARMY CRISIS.

Rev. Dr. W. R. Richards Expresses Deep Sorrow Over the Division.

The Minister's Association were entertained yesterday afternoon by Rev. Mr. Love, at his home on East Ninth street. A paper was prepared and read by Rev. Dr. W. R. Richards, on "The Crisis in the Salvation Army." The paper expressed the deep sorrow of the Army's many friends over the present division in its ranks, but believed that this division, and what led to it, ought to be thoughtfully studied. The feature of autocratic military authority, which had always constituted much of the executive strength of the army, was the very thing that had now shown these possibilities of disaster. This had confirmed the fears felt by many from the beginning, who had seen in this feature of the army an alarming resemblance to certain earlier movements like that of the Jesuits. Nevertheless, while the authority ought to have been modified, the discipline developed under it was recognized as a valuable example to all Christians.

The question was raised, but not definitely answered, how long Christian people may be able to support the army now that it has more deliberately reaffirmed this feature of irresponsible authority.

As to the Volunteers, if this movement is to involve the same principle, under the dictation of the son instead of the father, it was held to be no improvement, but the movement seems not yet clearly defined. The churches can hardly accept the suggestion of two outside organizations to stand professedly between them and the neediest of the people. Indeed it could not be admitted that any outside organization should stand permanently in that position. For the salvation of all men, including the neediest, is the task which Christ has laid upon his church. Such a work as that of the army must be viewed as a temporary experiment; in this case a most instructive and valuable experiment, but temporary. The question was raised whether the providential design of this present trouble might be to show that the experiment has now served its purpose; and whether possibly the time is near when the army, as a distinct organization outside the church, will have to be left behind.

JOLLY GERMANS.

The Gesang and Turn Verein Society Gave an Enjoyable Entertainment.

The Gesang and Turn Verein Society gave an entertainment and ball in their hall on Somerset street last evening. A section of the Newark Turn Verein was present, and their feats of tumbling were excellent and brought forth hearty applause from the onlookers. Mr. Cornell, of the above section, succeeded in placing himself in every conceivable position possible for a contortionist. The acting, singing and general work of the local society was also worthy of commendation. After the programme was concluded the floor was cleared for dancing which continued until nearly daylight this morning to the music of Prof. O'Reilly's orchestra.

The programme in detail was as follows: Overture, orchestra; calisthenics, Junior Turner Section; song, "Burdeslied," singing section; wrestling, Burnett and Lang, from the National Turn Verein, of Newark; work on the parallel bars, Plainfield Turn Section; song, "Wanderlied," singing section; horizontal bars, National Turn Vereins, of Newark; work by pyramid section of National Turn Vereins; one act farce, "A German Clover Leaf," P. Posler, tenor; G. Hoerster, baritone, and Charles Dresselt, bass.

Officers Elected.

Scott's Mutual Aid Society held their annual meeting last evening at which time the following officers were elected: President, Michael Leahy; vice-president, H. G. Adams; secretary, D. C. Allen; treasurer, H. C. Newman; board of directors, R. H. Bittel, F. W. Baily, Ben Wainwright, Harry McClain, J. Bennett, Gus Sergeant, C. W. Smith, Wm. Oliver, Thos. Cundy. The membership of the society now number 147. The treasurer's report showed that there is now $409 in the treasury and $582 had been expended during the year for relief. The society is in a very prosperous condition and all reports were encouraging. The attendance last evening was excellent.

A Poor Kind of a Detective.

A man named Charles Perrine, who said he was a railroad detective from South Plainfield, was fined $5 by City Judge DeMeza for using improper and abusive language.

Edward Elston is a very pretty name and so is the little baby boy who recently came into the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Hoagland, of West Front street, a happy one.

A FIRE IN THE VALLEY.

AN AREA OF A HALF-MILE OF FARM LAND BURNED OVER.

The Fire Was Started to Clear Off the Grass Previous to Ploughing. But it Got the Best of Farmer George W. Bullman.

Yesterday afternoon ex-Freeholder George W. Bullman, who leases Aaron Allen's farm in Washington Valley, started a fire on the place intending to burn the dead grass on a section previous to ploughing. The flames got beyond his control and had it not been for the timely assistance of friendly neighbors, it would undoubtedly have entailed much damage and loss. As it was, fences, lots of cordwood, an apple orchard and a very valuable timber tract on the second mountain suffered greatly as a result of the blaze.

When Mr. Bullman started the fire he had no thought that the grass ablaze could get the better of him, until the strong southwest wind fanned the flames to such proportions that they began to burn up everything in their way.

From field to field, through the orchard and on up into the mountain into a valuable timber tract that belongs to the farm, where is situated much large timber, the flames flew, covering an area of over one-half mile before they were extinguished.

The farm hands and the neighbors came to the rescue. Harrison Coddington, of Somerset street, who is a son-in-law of Aaron Allen, was notified, and sent a few of his men to fight the fire. All the afternoon they exerted their best efforts and after four hours of hard work, succeeded in beating the fire out with cedar brush. Luckily no buildings were burned and a few hundred dollars is all the damage as the result. The fire-fighters say that it was as hot a job as they ever came in contact with and they do not seek nor desire any more work of the same kind hereafter.

FELL AND HURT HERSELF.

Mrs. Lauffer Was Trying to Capture the Pigs When the Accident Occurred.

Mrs. Edward Lauffer, the woman whom The Press some time since told about falling heir to a small fortune, met with a severe accident on Saturday that may prove fatal. Mrs. Lauffer and her husband recently leased a farm from John Wolff on Stiles's Hill on the second mountain, and they had been stocking the same with cattle, horses, fowls, etc.

On Saturday last, during Mr. Laufter's absence in this city, several pigs escaped from their pen and were wandering off into the dense forest that surrounds their property. With the assistance of Mrs. Wolff, who was the only other person present at the time, they gave chase intending to drive their pigships into the opening and eventually get them back into their pens. Mrs. Lauffer, who is a stout woman, became excited and running at the top of her speed, fell and injured herself internally. Mrs. Wolff assisted her to the house and Dr. Adams was called and has been in daily attendance ever since.

NO OBJECTIONS AS YET.

Borough Watchung Avenue Commissioners Almost Ready to Report.

The borough commissioners appointed to assess damages along the proposed extension of Watchung avenue, met last evening in the council rooms for the purpose of hearing any objections which property owners along the route were disposed to make. Several owners were present and talked the matter over with the commissioners, but no objections were filed. The owners were anxious to learn what benefits would be assessed and then they would be able to tell more about the damages, but as another commission has to be appointed, according to law, to assess benefits, nothing could be done in that direction.

The present commissioners will make their report at the adjourned Council meeting on Friday evening. At this meeting, if the report is received, the other commission will probably be appointed.

YAMAGATA PLEASED

Honor Shown the Little Japanese Warrior in New York State.

HUDSON SCENERY DELIGHTED HIM

Considered General Grant One of the Greatest Soldiers He Ever Met—Can't Understand How States Can Have Independent Governments.

New York, April 14.—No arrangements have been made as yet for a public military display in honor of Marquis Yamagata, who arrived in this city with his attendants over the New York Central last night. The little Japanese warrior is delighted with his reception after entering New York state, and when seen at the Waldorf this morning expressed gratification for all the courtesies extended to him, and especially his reception by Gov. Morton at the executive mansion in Albany. "When I came to America before," he said, "I felt that I was among strangers. Now I feel that I am in a country where friends welcome me with wide open arms. Instead of traveling as an unknown stranger, I have been made to feel that I am indeed a welcome friend. How gratifying this is to me no words of mine can express. The depth of my appreciation neither can words speak. But I do not see that I deserve the honors so lavishly showered upon me. I have done my duty only to my emperor and country. The humblest soldier of Japan did the same. We did all we could for our country, no more, no less. My country fought a great fight and won. In common with all my country, I rejoice over the victory."

Delighted with Hudson Scenery.

The journey from Albany was of particular interest to the Japanese party and they repeatedly spoke of the magnificent scenery along the Hudson. The general's party were in an observation car on the end of the special train, and the rapidity of the train greatly impressed the little general. Two or three times during the journey the engineer threw open the throle and the train went a clip never before experienced by the Japanese. They peered through the wide observation windows and with astonished looks, tried to gauge the speed of the flyer.

Considered Grant a Great General.

When the train reached West Point the speed was slackened so that Yamagata might get a glimpse of the military school. At the mention of the name of West Point the marshal's face brightened up and he immediately recalled the name of Gen. Grant. He said he remembered Gen. Grant very well, and thought him the greatest American he had ever met. "When Gen. Grant was on his trip around the world," said Yamagata, "he visited Japan. I was then a colonel in the army and was delegated as his escort while in my country. I have never forgotten him. He impressed me as being a noble man and a great general." The marquis remained in his car throughout the trip, and was entertained by his physician, Dr. Hirai, who exercises a severe censorship over his patient's movements; Major Oshima, the chief of police of Japan, Japanese Consul General Miyacagawa, George E. Daniels and J. M. Toucey of the New York Central railroad. Other guests aboard the train were Adjt.-Gen. McAlpin, Gen. Edmund Hayes, Gen. R. M. Whitlock, Gen. James M. Varnum, Gen. William C. Wallace, Gen. C. A. Wiley, Col. G. W. Turner, Col. Charles F. James, Major J. F. Burbank, U. S. A.; Gen. M. A. Terry, Gen. H. C. Noyes, C. E. Storey, E. J. Weeks, F. A. Harrington, and members of the press.

State Government Bothers Him.

In speaking of American institutions and American military affairs, Yamagata showed a remarkable amount of knowledge. The one thing that troubled him, however, was individual government by states. He did not clearly understand how each state could have individual government and all still be subject to one central government. New York city was reached at shortly before 9 o'clock. There were about 300 persons present at the Grand Central depot to meet the party, including S. Kurino, Japanese minister at Washington; H. Shigio, a resident of Washington; G. Nagasaki of the Japanese bank of New York; M. Odagirl of the Japanese consulate in this city, and a committee representing about 150 Japanese merchants of this city and Brooklyn. Eight carriages were on hand to convey the party to the Waldorf hotel. Marquis Yamagata walked down the platform on the arm of Gen. McAlpin and entered the first carriage accompanied by his secretary and interpreter. The remainder of the party entered the other carriages. As they drove away from the depot there was considerable cheering and rounds of handclapping.

Refugees Preparing To Return Under President Sam's Amnesty.

Kingston, Jamaica, April 14.—Haytians who became refugees during the presidency of Hyppolite are accepting the amnesty offered by the new president, T. Simon Sam, and are making preparations to return to Hayti. The submission of the manigatists is regarded as suspicious.

Handed in His Resignation.

Albany, April 14.—Cornelius Haley of Utica, chief clerk in the office of the state commissioner of labor statistics, has handed in his resignation to take effect at the pleasure of the latter.

DARING HIGHWAYMEN.

Two Attempts at Hold-Up in Paterson—Victims Dodge Bullets.

Paterson, N. J., April 14.—A series of hold-ups by three highwaymen startled the residents of the east side last night. Shortly after 10 o'clock W. O. Fayerweather was stopped by three men, who demanded money. Fayerweather ran, hoping to escape. The highwaymen followed, however, firing seven shots at him. He succeeded in gaining the residence of Mrs. Robert Barbour and the men disappeared. Twenty minutes later David Dringer, twenty-four years old, of No. 151 Harrison street, was stopped on Auburn street by two men and commanded to hold up his hands. Dringer knocked the nearest man down and then took to his heels. Six shoots were fired at him, the last one lodging in his left leg. He fell and the men ran away. Patrol Gibson heard the shots. He gave chase and captured "Mike" Hogan, an ex-convict. The others escaped, but are known to the police. A general alarm was sent out.

AMERICAN SCHOONER HELD.

The George Whitford Seized on the High Seas by Colombian Gunboat.

Panama, April 14.—The correspondent of the Star and Herald at Colon sends the following to that journal under date of April : "On March 31 the Colombian gunboat Gen. Cordova left this port for Porto Bello, where, according to rumor, there was a vessel which had contravened the laws of the republic. About 9 p. m. of the same day a vessel anchored in this port, the Gen. Cordova also anchoring at the same time. Last night I had an interview with the captain of the sailing vessel, and he gives his name as Harris and that of the vessel as George Whitford. He showed me his papers, which are made out on stamped paper, signed by a Mr. Nieto. The papers are dated March 31, and showed that she sailed on that date from Cartagena with 50,000 cocoanuts and ten tons of ivory nuts as ballast. Capt. Harris informed me that the gunboat overhauled him about seven or eight miles from the coast and immediately ordered him to return to Colon, but Capt. Harris told him that he could not return, as he was dispatched from Porto Bello to Cartagena, and accordingly showed the Whitford papers to the captain of the Cordova, who refused to examine them, saying that he should return to Colon. As Captain Harris wanted to know the cause of such proceedings and also wanted to proceed on his voyage he said that he would allow the captain of Cordova to search his vessel; but he was intimidated and given fifteen minutes to decide what he would do, and if he did not comply with the instructions given his ship would be sunk. With such a menace he had to obey and return. On arriving at Colon a guard of eight soldiers was put on board. The guard, however, was removed on April 2, after the American consul had notified the governor that unless the vessel was immediately released an American man-of-war would be asked for.

SECRETARY MOORE'S REPORT.

Statistics of the Missionary Society of Connecticut for the Year 1895.

Hartford, April 14.—The annual report of the Missionary Society of Connecticut and Fund for Ministers, as prepared by the secretary, Rev. W. H. Moore, shows the receipts for 1895 to have been $8,237, an increase of $1,818 over the previous year. One hundred and sixty-one of the 318 churches made contributions to the society and there were legacies from twenty-two churches. Fifty-two churches were aided by grants in 1895. The average salary paid to their pastors by these churches was $666. Nine general missionaries were employed, one among Danes, one among Germans, one among Italians and six among Swedes. As fruits of this work, among foreigners, there are now eighteen churches, one German, two Danish and fifteen Swedish, with a total membership of 1,062. There was expended in this work in 1895, $5,496.

The Jail Full of Murderers.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., April 14.—John Nice, who was assaulted in a most brutal manner at Plymouth a few days ago, is dead. Michael Pushka, implicated in the murder, was arrested last night and sent to the county prison to await a hearing. There are now twenty-four men, either convicted or charged with murder, in prison here.

Serious Mine Explosion.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., April 14.—A serious explosion of mine gas occurred at Woodward mine of the Delaware, Lackawana & Western company last night whereby five men were badly burned and otherwise sustained serious injury. The mine is still on fire, but it is believed it can be subdued within a few hours.

IT WAS NO SURPRISE

Consul-General Williams' Resignation Had Been Expected.

GEN. FITZHUGH LEE'S NOMINATION

Not Even the Senators from Virginia Knew That He Was To Be Named—Americans at Havana Pleased.

Washington, April 14.—The nomination of a successor to Consul General Williams yesterday afternoon caused no surprise in official circles although it was not positively known outside the president and his immediate advisers that the consul to Havana had actually resigned until the name of Fitzhugh Lee of Virginia was received by the senate. It has been known for some time that Mr. Williams was anxious to be relieved of the position of consul general and this fact has been mentioned several times in these dispatches. When Mr. Williams visited the United States last year, he tendered his resignation, but was persuaded to remain in office on account of the then threatened seriousness of Cuban affairs. Mr. Williams had become obnoxious to the Spanish authorities in Havana on account of his vigorous manner of caring for the interests of this government and it was reported that he and Captain General Campos had a personal quarrel in which strong words were used. In March last, Mr. Williams renewed the expression of his desire to relinquish the post and it is said that he finally agreed to remain until a successor was appointed or until the end of the open season, that is until the present time. It has been claimed that one of the causes why Mr. Williams did not have the good will of the Spaniards was that his brother-in-law managed from the United States a West Indian express company suspected of carrying on an underground trade with the insurgents.

Insurgents' Friends More Hopeful.

Gen. Lee's selection was not the result of any conference with the senators from Virginia. Senator Daniel is not in the city, having gone to the Monticello celebration. His colleague, Mr. Martin, knew nothing of the appointment until the nomination was received by the senate. The selection is one of the president's own choice, Gen. Lee being one of his personal friends. There appears to be no political sponsor for him, and no one in congress who knew the bent of the presidential mind on this question. It is agreed on all sides that Gen. Lee will go to Havana in thorough accord with the president's views on matters pertaining to that island, and having the instinct of a military officer thoroughly implanted by years of service, will be capable of dealing with the subject of the rebellion there as the president desires it should be dealt with. Gen. Lee does not speak Spanish, but, aside from this, is said to be well fitted for the place, a man of strong determination not easily turned aside from his purpose. Among the friends of the insurgents in this city the change is looked upon as meaning that the president is preparing to make some step in the matter of the war in Cuba, and some express the belief that Gen. Lee's report of the situation may very likely give the president ample reason to extend the rights of belligerency to the Cubans.

Health

Depends upon keeping the blood in a pure condition, free from disease germs, and yet there are very few people who have perfectly pure blood. Hood's Sarsaparilla cleanses, vitalizes and enriches the blood, throwing out the impurities that clog and irritate the system and permits no lodgment of the seeds of disease. Read the following:

"I cannot recommend Hood's Sarsaparilla too highly for it has done wonders for me. I was

and all run down and my health was so poor I could not get out of doors. I was not able to do anything, being troubled with asthma and heart disease. I was nervous and could not sleep nights. I had become completely discouraged when I happened to read an advertisement of Hood's Sarsaparilla and concluded to give it a trial. After taking the first bottle I felt better and since taking five bottles I am so much improved that I feel like a new man. I am now able to do a fair day's work and sleep at night. My heart does not trouble me and I have realized great relief for asthma. I feel full of courage once more and life seems brighter and worth living. I would recommend Hood's Sarsaparilla to all afflicted as I have been, for I know it will help them. If this statement of facts will be of benefit, you are welcome to use it as you please." HENRY J. Stubborn ✻ Ulcers due to disease, or an impoverished condition of the blood, are a source of annoyance to the medical fraternity. While continually growing deeper and larger the circle of diseased flesh surrounding them is all the time extending, closing up the ducts through which replenishment of tissue should come. For such troubles physicians everywhere are praising the results obtained by the use of

In the first place the system needs re-invigorating, new flesh tissue should be formed, new and pure blood created, in fact, a new and well nourished body where room for disease does not exist. Food is the thing, and Bovinine, that greatest concentration of the vitalizing elements of lean beef, is the most fitting nourishment of all for speedy results. Then applied externally it nourishes by absorption, where the disease is most apparent, thus striking the enemy on all sides. Ask any Druggist.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the eustachian tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube be restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give one hundred dollars for any case of deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

THE GUN EXPLODED

Narrow Escape of the Members of the Ordnance Board.

GEN. NELSON A. MILES ALSO PRESENT

The Men Standing Around a Dudley Pneumatic Gun at Glen Cove When It Burst into Fragments—One Spectator Injured.

Glen Cove, L. I., April 14.—During a test of the new Dudley powder pneumatic gun yesterday afternoon the piece exploded and Gen. Nelson A. Miles and members of the board of ordnance had a narrow escape from death, or at least severe injury. A spectator named Joseph Rome was hit by a piece of metal and barely escaped with his life. The first test had resulted satisfactorily and for the second experiment a target, composed of a large red, white and blue flag was put up against a sand bank about 2,100 yards distant from the gun. Two of the dummy missiles had been fired, when, on the third attempt to discharge the gun it exploded, scattering broken fragments of metal in every direction. The officers who were investigating the merits of the gun were standing in a semi-circle behind the piece when it exploded, and it is marvelous that none of them were injured. Mr. Rome was hit on the side of the neck by a flying piece of metal and an ugly wound resulted. The explosion put an end to the tests, but another exhibition of the merits of the new gun will be given as soon as the piece can be repaired. The accident is supposed to have been due to the shattering of the wooden butt of the dummy projectile and a consequent choking of the gun. The compressed air had to escape, and the gun burst along the lines of the least resistance.

FAVORS A GREATER NEW YORK.

Certain Provisions of the Present Bill Faulty the Reason for Strong's Veto.

Albany, April 14.—The veto message of Mayor Strong of New York city on the Lexow Greater New York bill was read in the senate last night, when it was for the first time made public. As soon as it was read the message was, on Senator Lexow's motion, laid on the table to be printed. The veto message of Mayor Wurster of Brooklyn and the message of approval of Mayor Gleason of Long Island City on the same bill, which have already been published, were also read and tabled for printing. The bill itself was laid on the table and will next come up when a motion is made to pass the bill over the vetoes of the mayors. Mayor Strong says in his veto that he is heartily in favor of the consolidation of the territory proposed, and that consolidation is sure to come, but the provisions of the present bill he considers faulty in certain particulars. It is the opinion of a number of senators and assemblymen that the bill will be passed over the veto.

SCHAEFER DEFEATS GARNIER.

First Game of the Second Series of the Billiard Tournament at Boston.

Boston, April 14.—The first game in the second series of the big billiard championship tournament was played last night in Bumstead hall, the contestants being Jacob Schaefer, the wizard of the cue, and Albert Garnier, the French champion. The game was cushion carrom, 300 points. The hall was comfortably filled with spectators and much interest was manifested in the different plays, as the Frenchman is noted as an adept at this style of game. Both men played very cautiously from their first to their last shot. Schaefer won the game in the sixty-ninth inning with a run of thirty-one points. The final score was Schaefer, 300; Garnier, 222. The highest runs were: Schaefer 39; Garnier, 34, and the averages were Schaefer, 5 4-56; Garnier, 4 2-55. The referee was Fred Eames.

EXCITEMENT HIGH AT MADRID.

The Government's Action in Stealing the Elections Threatens Trouble.

Madrid, April 14.—Ex-Prime Minister Sagasta contends that the elections in Madrid must be nullified. All the papers and all the politicians, except the ministerialists, concur in this opinion. The excitement and indignation caused by the action of the government in virtually stealing the elections continue to increase, and there are grave apprehensions that unless other elections are ordered to be held there will be serious trouble, though every precaution has been taken to guard against an outbreak. It transpires that the report of the election in Bilbao of Iglesias, the leader of the Spanish socialists, was erroneous. Not a single socialist has been returned.

McKeever Given the Fight.

Maspeth, L. I., April 14.—The twenty-round bout between Griffo and McKeever last night before the Empire Athletic club was stubbornly fought to the last round when McKeever was given the decision. This was the Australian's first actual defeat in this country where his wonderful skill as a defensive boxer gained him a great reputation.

Deficiency Appropriations.

Washington, April 14.—The secretary of the treasury has sent to the senate a communication calling attention to deficiency appropriations for public building of $686,000.

Stamford, Conn., April 14.—There is some talk in Darien of contesting the election of John W. Hindley, who ran on a citizens' ticket for the office of tax collector.

OLD TIMERS PLAY BALL.

A Unique Game Witnessed at Rockford, Ill., Yesterday Afternoon.

Rockford, Ill., April 14.—The receipts from the old-time baseball game yesterday in honor of Harry Wright, which are to go to the erection of a monument to him in Philadelphia will probably reach $800, although rain prevented many from attending. The game was the most unique in the history of baseball. Veterans of the sixties whose names were once household words met in contest according to the old rules, that gives the pitcher nine balls, made a foul on bound out, and caused the runner to be called out if he ran over first base. The umpire of the game was H. H. Waldo, 76 years of age, known as the "Father of Forest Citys," which team was organized here in 1865 and played until 1875, being one of the most famous clubs in the country. It was made the reunion of players of the old Forest City team and a number of players who had been prominent on other teams volunteered their services. One team was made up of A. G. Spalding, George E. King, Frank Trumbull, Al Barker, M. L. Wheeler, R. C. Buckman, W. L. Lightheart, B. Osborne and Fred Cone, and the other club consisted of "Cherokee" Fisher, M. Larue, Harry Starr, W. S. Stearns, Dan O'Leary, E. C. Dunn, George Wright, C. T. Page and M. H. Golden. Spalding and King, Fisher and Larue formed the batteries. Geo. Wright, brother of Harry Wright, played shortstop for his team. The Forest Citys blanked their opponents, and in the third half batted out four runs, when heavy rain stopped the game.

Harry Wright Day at Cincinnati.

Cincinnati, April 14.—A game of ball of unusual interest was played here yesterday afternoon between the old Cincinnati nine of 1882, which team won the American association pennant in of that year, and this year's Cincinnati National League club. The game was for the benefit of the Harry Wright monument fund and over 3,000 people were in attendance. The leaguers won by a score of 7 to 3. After the game a banquet was tendered the players by the Harry Wright Veteran association which was organized here last week.

At Baltimore.

Baltimore, April 14.—Harry Wright Day was all that the average baseball enthusiast could desire in the way of warm, sunshiny weather, and 1,500 persons attended the game in the afternoon. The champions met and defeated the Syracuse team of the Eastern league by a score of 9 to 2.

Not a Success in New York.

New York, April 14.—Harry Wright day at the Polo grounds was not an unqualified success. About 500 persons saw a tedious game between the New Yorks and Metropolitans. There was not a really brilliant play in the entire game. New York won by a score of 14 to 4.

KILLED BY A TROLLEY CAR.

Sad Accident to a Woman While Horseback Riding.

Elmira, N. Y., April 14.—Mrs. Chester D. Nichols of Horseheads was riding horseback last evening in front of her residence, when in trying to turn the animal around he threw her in front of an electric car coming towards Elmira. The fender struck her body forcibly, breaking her neck. The fatality was witnessed by her husband and her two children. Mr. Nichols travels for a Philadelphia coal company and has an extensive acquaintance throughout the east.

Fitchburg Railroad Settles.

Keene, N. H., April 14.—The case of D. C. Howard, administrator, versus the Fitchburg railroad, has been settled by the railroad paying $3,500 in gross. This is the case where three persons were run over and killed at the Water street crossing on Jan. 1, 1895.

Central American Exposition.

Washington, April 14.—The Guatemala and Honduras minister has informed the state department that a Central American exposition will take place in Guatemala City from March 15 to July 15, 1897. An invitation to take part will be extended to the United States.

HOW REED STANDS

The Maine Man's Chances To-day for the Nomination.

FIGURES BY SENATOR ALDRICH

Delegates So Far Elected: McKinley, 169; Reed, 111; The Field, 166; Doubtful, 48—Total, 494.

Washington, April 14.—Senator Aldrich of Rhode Island gave out a statement last night of Mr. Reed's strength as compared with that of other candidates and says: "I think the time has come to let the country know something about the actual standing of Mr. Reed in this canvass. His friends have devoted themselves thus far to electing Reed delegates rather than to making claims which they cannot substantiate. This table which I submit is made up from reliable information furnished by delegates and in some cases by chairmen of conventions. To be sure there are contests in several places where it would be unfair to prejudge the action of the convention. For instance, the entire Mississippi delegation will be contested, and we place them in the doubtful column. The only "speculation" in this list is in the doubtful column. "Newspaper rumors" do not figure in it at all. There is no trouble about getting delegates, alternates and contestants; this is all a matter of record and an open page. The table given out by McKinley's friends on Monday includes the unelected delegates from Ohio and Indiana. As well might we include the unelected delegates from Maine and other states which are for Reed, but this would stamp such an estimate as fraudulent."

The Estimate.

The following is Mr. Aldrich's estimate: Alabama: Reed, 3; McKinley, 2. Arkansas: Reed, 0; McKinley 16. Florida: Reed, 2; McKinley, 0. Georgia, Reed, 12; McKinley, 7. Illinois; Reed, 0; McKinley, 6. Indiana: Reed, 0; McKinley, 12. Kansas: Reed, 0; McKinley, 16. Kentucky: Reed, 0; McKinley, 4. Louisiana: Reed, 15; McKinley, 1. Massachusetts: Reed, 26; McKinley, 0. Minnesota: Reed, 0; McKinley, 10. Missouri: Reed, 0; McKinley, 12. Nebraska: Reed, 0; McKinley, 6. New Hampshire: Reed, 8; McKinley, 0. New York: Reed, 0; McKinley, 2. Ohio: Reed, 0; McKinley, 30. Oregon: Reed, 0; McKinley, 8. Pennsylvania: Reed, 0; McKinley, 2. Rhode Island: Reed, 8, McKinley, 0. South Carolina: Reed, 8, McKinley, 0. South Dakota: Reed, 0; McKinley, 8. Texas: Reed, 20; McKinley, 3. Virginia: Reed, 2; McKinley, 0. Wisconsin: Reed, 0; McKinley, 24. Oklahoma: Reed, 6; McKinley, 0. District of Columbia: Reed, 1; McKinley, 0. Summary of the Estimate.

"There have 165 delegates elected," he says, "who are divided between Morton, Allison, Quay, Cullom and Bradley, and 48 who are properly classed as doubtful. The summary, therefore, is as follows: Reed, 111; McKinley, 169; the field, 166; doubtful, 48. Total, 494. We make no note of the four delegates recently elected in South Carolina, because the legality of that convention is questioned; in any event, they would belong in the doubtful column."

DEMOCRATIC STATE COMMITTEE.
E. F. C. Young, Chairman. Willard C. Fisk, Secretary.

Those New Jersey towns who have elections today are well provided for in the way of weather.

It is said that the Voorhees investigating committee will shortly probe into the municipal affairs of Jersey City.

Ballington Booth does not seem possessed with that brotherly love which both his family and professional ties would indicate. The constant bickering between the Booths is full of hypocrisy. Wordy warfare such as the American Volunteer leader is indulging in is not the kind of a campaign that the rules of his organization prescribe. It benefits neither organization.

A contemporary writer says that at twenty a man "knows everything and more too; at forty he has doubts, and at fifty he becomes very modest." We have heard something of the sort before; but it is not true. The man who thinks he knows it all at twenty will in most cases be conceited enough to be disagreeable when he is fifty. Age does not greatly alter a man's nature. —Rochester Union.

A Women's Town Improvement Association has been formed in Plainfield, and by its appointment of committees has shown with what comprehensive ambition it proposes to go about its work. One of its committees is to look after the condition of the streets, another is to see to sanitary matters, a third is to keep watch and ward over local finances, a fourth will watch out to see that the street railroad company does its duty and keeps within its rights. Committees on humane authority, on cruelty to animals and to children, on the training of the young, on the city parks and on the city's future advancement have also been appointed. The women start out hopefully and ambitiously, and though with other people of worthy ideals they will doubtless share the fate of accomplishing less than they desire, they may do more for the city than some of the lords of creation, looking at their enterprise with supercilious eyes, expect.—Newark News.

THE MINISTERS AROUSED.

They Pour Hot Shot in the Councilmanic Camp Over License Matters.

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—At a meeting of the Ministers' Association held Monday, April 13th, it was voted to ask the Plainfield papers to publish the sentiments of the association regarding some of the licenses to saloons granted this year.

The Common Council granted licenses at its meeting February 24th. At that meeting, before the vote was taken, a petition from this association was presented to the Council, which contained the following sentence: "We also enter our solemn protest against allowing a saloon to be placed directly across the street from an important church, viz: the Mt. Olive Baptist church."

Despite this protest the proprietor of the saloon in question secured his license by a vote of 7 to 1.

In the face of this vote the Ministers Association addressed the following protest to the Common Council:

To the Honorable Common Council of the City of Plainfield:

Gentlemen—Five years ago the Common Council of this city voted to license a saloon known as the "Elkwood," almost next door to the Trinity Reformed church on Second street. At the next fall election, by a very decisive vote, all but one of the Common Councilmen who voted for that measure failed of re-election. An editorial in the next day's Daily Press said truthfully in explanation of this result: "The thing which chiefly contributed to their Waterloo was their voting to license the Elkwood saloon in direct opposition to the will of the people. That was something the citizens would never forgive, and the people's wrath was stored up awaiting a chance for such a rebuke as they administered yesterday."

The "will of the people" as referred to above had been expressed in numberless petitions declaring that a drinking place so near a church or a school is a nuisance.

In spite of this historic declaration, and regardless of repeated petition and protest, the present Common Council has continued the license of a saloon almost directly opposite the door of the Mt. Olive Baptist church.

We do not believe that our citizens have changed their opinion of five years ago concerning this matter, nor if the facts were clearly brought to their attention that they would reverse the verdict then given.

We feel compelled, therefore, to place on record our respectful but solemn protest against this action of our Common Council, deeming it injurious to one of our sister churches and to the good name of our city itself.

This protest was read and ordered to be filed at the meeting of the Common Council, April 6th.

G. Kennedy Newell,
Secretary Ministers' Association.

WORKS OF ART.

The Collections of Plainfield Attracts Attention at the Loan Exhibition.

The loan exhibition of the Plainfield Camera Club still continues open and will remain so during the week. The story of the many wonderful and beautiful thing to be seen there has gone out among the citizens and many have visited it. Saturday evening and last evening there was a good attendance while a number dropped in during the morning and afternoon. The exhibition is open from 10 o'clock in the morning to 5 in the afternoon. In the evening it is open from 8 to 10:30 o'clock.

It is impossible to see everything even in several visits. The handsome catalogue is, of course, a great help, but there are some exhibits that have been left out, unavoidably or through mistake. Among them is a beautiful oil painting. "Apple Blossoms, which was kindly loaned by Mrs. R. A. Meeker. There are also several handsome etchings, the propty of A. V. D. Honeyman.

While the exhibition is essentially one of works of arts, a number of strange old curios are included in the exhibition. As the visitor enters the door, the first object on the right is a suit of Japanese armor, several centuries old. In another place there are two old Japanese actors masks. Two strange-looking figures are two marionettes, one representing the "Hanœman," the king of monkeys, and the other "Sabaderi," a giant or demon.
